Laetrile available here—for a price

by KURT BAER

Laetrile, the controversial cancer drug, is readily available in the Chicago area and patients are paying as much as $15 a dose for it, sources say.

A vial of Laetrile costs about $15 and cancer patients using the substance typically take shots of from one to four vials a day.

In Mexico, a principle sources of Laetrile, the same three-gram vial sells for about $7.

Laetrile, made from an apricot pit extract, is banned because the Federal Drug Administration says it has never been proved effective as a cancer cure.

THE ONE LEGAL way to use Laetrile in this country is by court order and Wednesday a New York doctor told a U.S. District Court judge that a 69-year-old cancer patient has improved impressively since he was allowed to take Laetrile April 16.

"I believe it paid to give him the Laetrile," said Dr. Baldassare B. Cunella, adding it may have improved Joseph Rizzo's longevity by a month.

Cunella said he has never seen such a marked improvement in this type of case in his 30-year career and he suggested the federal government rethink its ban.

In Illinois it could be legal to manufacture, sell and distribute Laetrile by July 1, the sponsor of a House-passed Laetrile legalization bill said Wednesday.

State Rep. Donald L. Totten, R-Hoffman Estates, said the House bill to allow doctors and hospitals to administer Laetrile will be amended in the Senate to legalize the manufacture and sale of the drug in Illinois.

"WHAT WE'VE DONE in the House is to legalize its use so that doctors would not have to worry about treating patients with Laetrile. But we have not answered the question of supply," Totten said.

Legislation to allow the manufacture and sale of Laetrile in Illinois will be modeled after an Indiana law scheduled to take effect June 1.

But at least one person familiar with the use of Laetrile in the Northwest suburbs questioned whether legalization of Laetrile would mean lower prices or a better supply for users.

"It appears that the one thing we would get from the legalization of Laetrile is clinical monitoring of its effect," a Northwest suburban man who asked not to be identified said, adding Laetrile already is available to cancer victims and that $15 a shot is not an exorbitant price.

In order for Laetrile to be produced legally in Indiana, Illinois or any other state, it must be manufactured and sold entirely inside that state, an FDA spokesman said. That means the raw materials, packaging, processing and distribution would have to take place within Illinois. Otherwise the substance would be subject to seizure by the FDA.

"I WAS DISCOURAGED about that until I learned that two drug companies intend to produce Laetrile in Indiana," Totten said. "If they can do it, I presume we would be able to do it here."

Officials at two of Illinois' largest drug companies, Abbott Laboratories in North Chicago and G. D. Searle Co., Skokie, both said the firms are not interested in making Laetrile.

But State Rep. Aaron Jaffe, D-Skokie, an opponent of legalized Laetrile, predicted drug companies would see a big profit in Laetrile sales if manufacture of the substance is 'Mideast peace can't be forced'

by RICHARD C. GROSS

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Menahem Begin, the former guerrilla leader due to become Israel's next prime minister, Wednesday warned President Carter not to try to impose a Middle East peace on Israel even as Arabs said his election meant war.

Begin, 63, called for the defeated Labor party to join his right-wing Likud party in a government of national unity and pledged to go to Washington to discuss a Middle East peace with Carter as soon as he is sworn in.

However, Arab leaders from Damascus to Cairo reacted with alarm to Begin's victory, referring to him as "superhawk" and a "terrorist," and saying his election brought the Middle East to the brink of a fifth war.

SPEAKING IN his tiny Tel Aviv apartment where he has lived since his days as an underground Jewish guerrilla fighting the British, Begin said Carter should not try to devise his own formula for a Middle East peace it would impose on Israel.

"Don't bring up an externally devised formula for a settlement," he said. "Let there be free negotiations between the parties concerned."

"It will be a pleasure and a great honor to visit President Carter," Begin said. "We shall have many, many topics to dwell on and we shall do so as free men with a sense of responsibility for the future of our nations."

Begin, who recently suffered a near-fatal heart attack, took up the role of a transition prime minister, announcing he would meet with Defense Minister and Acting Premier Shimon Peres, the defeated Labor party candidate, to discuss defense and foreign policy issues.

BEGIN, KNOWN for his intransigence on recognizing Palestinian rights to a homeland, tried to mute his hawkish image.

A Polish-born Jew who spent two years in a Soviet prison camp, Begin once had a price put on his head by the British for the reprisal hangings of British soldiers and the blowing up of the King David hotel in Jerusalem.

The official Damascus radio said, "The area is heading towards war." In Cairo, an Egyptian government source said Begin's election means that "American pressure is more essential than ever." And in Beirut, a PLO spokesman said, "This means farewell to negotiations. There is only war."

Cop's life stays stuck in legal limbo

by JOHN LAMPINEN

It is during these warm spring days that he misses it the most.

William Jaworski has always loved being outdoors. Before he became a policeman, he was a telephone repairman, a job that got him outside a lot.

Jaworski is 34, and he is still a policeman in Elk Grove Village, but his work does not get him out anymore. He is confined to a desk.

It has been more than two years since "the incident," as Jaworski refers to it.

IN FACT, Jaworski ticks off the time as if he is rattling out the line score of a baseball game: "Two years, one month, 13 days."

"There isn't a single day that goes by that I haven't thought about it," he says.

But Jaworski will not talk about it. He will not tell his side of the story about "the incident" in which he shot Timothy Engelson, then an 18-year-old Mount Prospect man, in the abdomen after a traffic accident.

He will not talk about it because a $1 million civil suit — filed by Engelson and his parents against Jaworski and the village — still hangs over his head.

Neither will Engelson, who lost a kidney, his spleen and part of his pancreas when the bullet ripped through his stomach.

He talks only through his attorney and the only explanation he gives is through court briefs charging Jaworski with battery, negligence and willful and wanton conduct.

SO THE MAN who'll be 21 in August and Jaworski await a trial expected to begin this fall.

The civil suit, village officials have said in the past, is the reason for Jaworski's inactive status.

For 15 months after the shooting he earned full pay while staying at home, "relieved from duty."

So Jaworski sued the village. Last summer, a Cook County circuit court judge ruled that the Elk Grove Village Police Dept. should put him back to work but that it did not have to put him back on patrol or let him carry a gun.

Jaworski has appealed, asking to return to his previous position as a patrolman. He has no idea when that appeal will be heard.

"It's important first of all to look to the future as far as establishing my position," he says. "To let things slide, to see how it goes, well, I've got too much ahead of me yet. I've got two children to raise."

His work now consists of being the warrant and court officer for the department. He types reports, makes sure police officers are at court, logs arrest warrants and assists the traffic and misdemeanor court when it meets

Recent arrest 'a shock'

Neighbors' hearts go out to Rapps

by PAUL GORES

There was unfinished business at the new Buffalo Grove home of Buffalo Grove Village Engineer Carl W. Rapp Wednesday morning.

Unpacking of boxes, hanging of curtains and the other chores of moving into a new house apparently came to a sudden halt when Rapp was arrested Monday for allegedly trying to extort $100,000 from a developer seeking fast approval of a subdivision plan.

No answer at the door, a brochure stuffed into the door handle and a calling card on the doorstep were evidence that Rapp and his family had not returned to their new home following his arrest.

About 20 miles away, in the Hoffman Estates neighborhood Rapp had moved from Saturday, residents were surprised and saddened by the new of his arrest.

CARL W. RAPP

"I'M SHOCKED the the whole thing," said Ben Wyatt, 121 Columbia St. "The whole neighborhood is shocked."

Wyatt said he would never have expected Rapp, 34, the father of two adopted children, to be involved in a criminal offense like extortion.

"Right now the only thing I'm concerned with is the family," Wyatt said. "She (Rapp's wife) is a very sweet woman with two wonderful kids. I hope to hell everything works out for them."

James Debbs, 157 Carthage Ln., said Rapp moved out only a week ago.

"It's bad news," Debbs said of the arrest. "I'm very sorry to hear that. They were good neighbors, quiet, very nice people as far as I know."

ANOTHER OF Rapp's former neighbors appeared disheartened with the news when she answered the door. She said she had just found out about the arrest and did not want to talk about it.

Still another neighbor said she would not comment on the arrest.

Rapp's former residence, 165 Carthage Ln., is vacant but has not been sold, Debbs said. He said Rapp had lived there about five years.

Rapp was released on bond Tuesday, but he faces a maximum penalty of 20 years in jail and a $10,000 fine if he is indicted and conviced of extortion. He has been suspended without pay from his $23,600 job with the village.

Rapp's neighbor, Wyatt, said he hopes the family will recover, whatever the outcome.

"This is such a shame," he said. "Our hearts go out to them."

Go on and play pool; the temps won't dive

Jump into your shorts and rev up the air conditioner. The National Weather Service predicts more 90-degree temperatures throughout the Northwest suburbs until Sunday.

Wednesday's 91-degree temperature came only two degrees short of the record high temperature set in 1962 and as one weather service official lamented Wednesday night, "I'm afraid we'll have more of the same all week."

The heat-wave is expected to subside Sunday, although with a little luck, it may trail off Saturday night. Until then, the only reprieve from the hot house weather is a thunderstorm that has "a slight chance" of dropping by, if it can be coaxed away from Lafayette, Ind., where it took up temporary residence Wednesday night, the weather service said.

A spokesman for Commonwealth Edison said Wednesday night that the company has had no problem keeping the Northwest suburbs charged with electricity.

"We're producing the heaviest load I've seen in recent history, but nowhere near what we do at peak time later in the summer," a spokesman said.

Man killed as car hits condo complex

A Schaumburg man was killed Wednesday afternoon when his car ran off the road, striking a building in a condominium complex at 1305 S. Wilke Rd., Arlington Heights, police said. James M. Raffle, 27, of 911 S. Braintree Dr., was pronounced dead on arrival at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, at 2:21 p.m. Witnesses said they saw Raffle with his head resting on the steering wheel as his car passed White Oak Street southbound on Wilke Road. Raffle was a salesman, but police would not disclose where he was employed. Police did not say if the building was damaged.

Elk Grove Village fires two

The Elk Grove Village engineer and one of the village's building inspectors have been fired for violating village rules on moonlighting. Engineer Donald L. Ciaglia was dismissed when it was discovered that he was moonlighting as a consulting engineer, village officials say. Joseph Nokes, a building inspector, was fired later because he knew of Ciaglia's outside work but did not report it, Trustee Edward Kenna said. Ciaglia said he was not dismissed but had resigned "because I wanted to try something new." Nokes said he resigned his job when village officials asked him to take a lie detector test. "They were saying that I was soliciting business for Don," Nokes said.

Larry R. Stotts, charged in the stabbing murder of a Mount Prospect grocery clerk Feb. 20, has been found mentally fit to stand trial for the slaying. A letter read Wednesday during a hearing in the Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court from Dr. E. J. Kelleher, director of the county's pyschiatric institute at Cermak Memorial Hospital, Chicago, said Stotts is mentally fit to stand trial. Stotts, who is in the hospital at the county jail complex, is charged with stabbing to death Nargis Alvi, 27, an employe of the K&G Food Mtrt, 1760 Algonquin Rd., Mount Prospect. Mrs. Alvi, wife of store owner Nisar Alvi, was found in a walk-through cooler stabbed to death.

Cops query dead girl's friends

Police in Midland, Mich., interviewed friends of murdered Mount Prospect resident Marilyn Goodman Wednesday, the last day of classes at Northwood Institute, where she was a student. Capt. Hial Meyer of the Midland Police Dept. said investigators still have no suspect in the murder. Meyer said, "We're working against time at this point. Once school lets out, it will make our job much more difficult to get a hold of people we need to talk to." The body of Miss Goodman, 18, clothed only in a bra and blouse, was discovered by a passerby in a wooded area north of the campus May 10. She had been reported missing since May 8 when she went to a party with a man who police refuse to identify. She was the daughter of Donald and Shirley Goodman, 514 N. Wille St., Mount Prospect.

Longet leaves jail, affirms innocence in face of suit

ASPEN, Colo. (UPI) — Claudine Longet, still protesting her innocence, Wednesday ended her 30-day sentence for the shooting death of her lover and was welcomed at the jail gate by her ex-husband, Andy Williams, and their two sons.

Miss Longet reaffirmed her innocence as she stood outside the Pitkin County Jail holding a bouquet of blue, white and yellow flowers given her by her children. The couple's third child, a daughter, was not present.

"I would like to say again I am not guilty. I should not have been sentenced to jail for 30 days or one day," said Miss Longet, wearing faded jeans and a dark blue sweater as she walked to the car with her son, Christian. Williams walked one step behind, his arm around Claudine's sister, Danielle.

"IT WAS A VERY difficult experience, but I tried to make it as positive an experience as possible," she said.

Miss Longet said she spent her time in jail reading, thinking and trying to readjust her life. She said she had not decided whether to write a book about her experience.

The French-born singer was sentenced to jail after being convicted of criminally negligent homicide in the March 1976 slaying of her lover, pro skier Vladimir "Spider" Sabich.

Two days before she was to complete her jail term, Sabich's parents filed a $1.3 million wrongful death suit against the former Las Vegas show girl, charging she acted recklessly in the shooting. She said she was "deeply distressed" by the suit.

"THE SUIT WAS very hard to accept. I think it is very sad the family would have so much hatred for me that they would not even conceive of my innocence and that they would gear all their energy and emotion toward hurting me even more," she said.

Turning to Williams and smiling, Miss Longet said she wanted to "go home now." Her younger son, Bobby, ran ahead of his parents and an entouage of reporters and jumped into a blue-and-white Jeep.

When Miss Longet climbed in the front seat, she reached over and gave her youngest son a hug.

Williams, who arrived Wednesday morning for a two-day visit with his family, drove the group back to the Victorian-style home Miss Longet purchased after Sabich's death.

Man killed as car hits condo complex

A Schaumburg man was killed Wednesday afternoon when his car ran off the road, striking a building in a condominium complex at 1305 S. Wilke Rd., Arlington Heights, police said. James M. Raffle, 27, of 911 S. Braintree Dr., was pronounced dead on arrival at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, at 2:21 p.m. Witnesses said they saw Raffle with his head resting on the steering wheel as his car passed White Oak Street southbound on Wilke Road. Raffle was a salesman, but police would not disclose where he was employed. Police did not say if the building was damaged.

Elk Grove Village fires two

The Elk Grove Village engineer and one of the village's building inspectors have been fired for violating village rules on moonlighting. Engineer Donald L. Ciaglia was dismissed when it was discovered that he was moonlighting as a consulting engineer, village officials say. Joseph Nokes, a building inspector, was fired later because he knew of Ciaglia's outside work but did not report it, Trustee Edward Kenna said. Ciaglia said he was not dismissed but had resigned "because I wanted to try something new." Nokes said he resigned his job when village officials asked him to take a lie detector test. "They were saying that I was soliciting business for Don," Nokes said.

Larry R. Stotts, charged in the stabbing murder of a Mount Prospect grocery clerk Feb. 20, has been found mentally fit to stand trial for the slaying. A letter read Wednesday during a hearing in the Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court from Dr. E. J. Kelleher, director of the county's pyschiatric institute at Cermak Memorial Hospital, Chicago, said Stotts is mentally fit to stand trial. Stotts, who is in the hospital at the county jail complex, is charged with stabbing to death Nargis Alvi, 27, an employe of the K&G Food Mtrt, 1760 Algonquin Rd., Mount Prospect. Mrs. Alvi, wife of store owner Nisar Alvi, was found in a walk-through cooler stabbed to death.

Cops query dead girl's friends

Police in Midland, Mich., interviewed friends of murdered Mount Prospect resident Marilyn Goodman Wednesday, the last day of classes at Northwood Institute, where she was a student. Capt. Hial Meyer of the Midland Police Dept. said investigators still have no suspect in the murder. Meyer said, "We're working against time at this point. Once school lets out, it will make our job much more difficult to get a hold of people we need to talk to." The body of Miss Goodman, 18, clothed only in a bra and blouse, was discovered by a passerby in a wooded area north of the campus May 10. She had been reported missing since May 8 when she went to a party with a man who police refuse to identify. She was the daughter of Donald and Shirley Goodman, 514 N. Wille St., Mount Prospect.

Longet leaves jail, affirms innocence in face of suit

ASPEN, Colo. (UPI) — Claudine Longet, still protesting her innocence, Wednesday ended her 30-day sentence for the shooting death of her lover and was welcomed at the jail gate by her ex-husband, Andy Williams, and their two sons.

Miss Longet reaffirmed her innocence as she stood outside the Pitkin County Jail holding a bouquet of blue, white and yellow flowers given her by her children. The couple's third child, a daughter, was not present.

"I would like to say again I am not guilty. I should not have been sentenced to jail for 30 days or one day," said Miss Longet, wearing faded jeans and a dark blue sweater as she walked to the car with her son, Christian. Williams walked one step behind, his arm around Claudine's sister, Danielle.

"IT WAS A VERY difficult experience, but I tried to make it as positive an experience as possible," she said.

Miss Longet said she spent her time in jail reading, thinking and trying to readjust her life. She said she had not decided whether to write a book about her experience.

The French-born singer was sentenced to jail after being convicted of criminally negligent homicide in the March 1976 slaying of her lover, pro skier Vladimir "Spider" Sabich.

Two days before she was to complete her jail term, Sabich's parents filed a $1.3 million wrongful death suit against the former Las Vegas show girl, charging she acted recklessly in the shooting. She said she was "deeply distressed" by the suit.

"THE SUIT WAS very hard to accept. I think it is very sad the family would have so much hatred for me that they would not even conceive of my innocence and that they would gear all their energy and emotion toward hurting me even more," she said.

Turning to Williams and smiling, Miss Longet said she wanted to "go home now." Her younger son, Bobby, ran ahead of his parents and an entouage of reporters and jumped into a blue-and-white Jeep.

When Miss Longet climbed in the front seat, she reached over and gave her youngest son a hug.

Williams, who arrived Wednesday morning for a two-day visit with his family, drove the group back to the Victorian-style home Miss Longet purchased after Sabich's death.

'Hate' moved Patty, Frank to kill family

by DAVE IBATA

Patricia Columbo and Frank DeLuca hated Miss Columbo's family and murdered them "because the family stood in their way," a prosecuting attorney told jurors Wednesday.

In an opening statement in the trial, Terry Sullivan, assistant Cook County state's attorney, described the killings as a "cold and calculated" scheme formulated between October 1975 and May 1976.

Sullivan said the plot culminated in the May 4, 1976, slayings of Miss Columbo's parents, Frank and Mary Columbo, and her brother, Michael, 13, of 55 E. Brantwood Dr., Elk Grove Village.

MISS COLUMBO, 20, offered $30,000 to two men she had sex with to murder her family, Sullivan said. She asked that her family be slain "at or near a holiday, as a present," Sullivan said.

Defense attorneys for Miss Columbo and DeLuca, 39, countered Sullivan's statement.

William Swano, a Cook County assistant public defender representing Miss Columbo, described her father as a domineering, short-tempered, violent man who had threatened DeLuca's life.

Swano said evidence will show Miss Columbo nver solicited two men to murder her family, despite bullying by her father.

Michael J. Toomin, a private attorney representing DeLuca, said he will show contradictions in the prosecution's evidence, prove DeLuca was outside Elk Grove Village the night of the slayings and show Frank Columbo had a secret, sizable income and possible links to the Chicago crime syndicate.

ATTORNEYS FOR the prosecution and defense agreed Frank Columbo threatened DeLuca with a .22-caliber rifle and beat him in the parking lot of the Walgreen Drug Store DeLuca managed at the Grove Shopping Center, Biesterfield and Arlington Heights roads, Elk Grove Village.

Sullivan said Miss Columbo's relationship with her family worsened after the incident. He said the family disapproved of her love affair with DeLuca, a married man and the father of five children. It was then Miss Columbo began contemplating ways of murdering her family, Sullivan said.

Sullivan said in October 1975, Miss Columbo met two men: Lanyon R. Mitchell, 24, of Lake Villa, and Roman Sobczynski, 34, address unknown.

Miss Columbo had sex with them and asked them to kill her family, Sullivan said. At first they agreed, but both backed out of the conspiracy by April 1976, he said.

HOWEVER, LATE in 1975 Frank Columbo relented and consented to a June 5, 1976, marriage for his daughter and DeLuca, Swano said, adding that Miss Columbo told Mitchell and Sobczynski to stay away from her family.

Sullivan said Sobczynski had given Miss Columbo a .32-caliber revolver and that the Columbo family had been shot in the head with a .32-caliber gun.

Sullivan said Miss Columbo arranged to meet Mitchell and Sobczynski near the Columbo house to help them carry out the killings, but the men never arrived on the three days, April 19, April 26 and May 3, 1976.

Sullivan said May 4, 1976, DeLuca told a friend, Burton Green, "I guess the hit men were bought off. We'll just have to do it ourselves."

THE MORNING of May 5, Green, the assistant manager at DeLuca's Walgreen store, talked with DeLuca, Sullivan said. Sullivan said DeLuca told Green, "Burt, it went down last night."

The trial will resume today at 10 a.m. before Judge R. Eugene Pincham in the Cook County Criminal Courts Building, 26th Street and California Ave., Chicago.

Haley goes home today

- Alex Haley is going home to Henning, Tenn., today to help kick-off a three-day, statewide festival honoring the Pulitzer Prize-winning author of "Roots." He will ride in a parade along his hometown's newly painted Main Street and crisscross the state in a "Welcome Home, Alex Haley" celebration. Haley has said inspiration for his novel, which traces his ancestry from Africa through American slavery, was born on the front porch of his grandmother's house with tales about their family's struggles as slaves. Henning, once a bustling cotton and sawmill town, now boasts only 605 residents.

- Former President Gerald Ford and President Carter will talk informally at the White House Friday. Carter told reporters recently he intends to meet Ford whenever the former chief executive is in Washington.

- Susan Ford accepted the Martha Graham Dance Award in New York this week for her mother, former first lady Betty Ford. She was accompanied by designer Halston at the evening affair at the Lunt Fontanne Theatre, which honored Mrs. Ford's contribution to the arts.

- In a will written last October, actress Joan Crawford left the bulk of her estate to six charities and disinherited two of her four adopted children. The details of the will were disclosed in Manhattan Surrogate Court Wednesday where Judge Samuel A. Spiegal signed an order authorizing the opening of two safe deposit boxes owned by the actress, who died last week. Under terms of the 15-page will, two adopted 30-year-old twin daughters, Cathy LaLonde and Cynthia Jordan, receive $77,500 each in a trust. Two other adopted children, Christina Koontz, 37 of California, and Christopher Crawford, 33, of Florida, were cut off. The total of her estate was not revealed.

Head Start kids hit the nature trail

by KURT BAER

"Now, what kind of egg do you think this is?" asked the ever-so-patient guide who was holding up a small, baby blue egg.

"An Easter egg!" replied a very small voice.

"Wrong," the guide said. "It may look like an Easter egg, but it's a pheasant egg . . ."

And so it went as a group of 30 youngsters, aged 3, 4 and 5, explored the Max McGraw wildlife farm in Dundee.

The kids belong to Arlington Heights' Head Start program, a preschool for children of low-income families, and one of four Head Start programs in the area sponsored by the Northwest Opportunity Center.

Their field trip started with a look at the farm's oversize egg incubators where thousands of duck and pheasant eggs are warmed at a time.

BUT THE PENS of ducklings and baby pheasants, cheeping and hopping under glowing heat lamps, were the real imagination grabbers on this trip.

Children in Head Start go to school from 9 a.m. to noon, or noon until 3 p.m. Monday through Thursday. Programs are operating in Arlington Heights, Palatine, Hanover Park and Des Plaines, and 124 children participate. Hot lunches and bus transportation are provided for all children.

From the baby bird houses, the children were led to the Nickoway nature trail at the McGraw farm where guide Jeff Wiles tried to explain to his young audience the differences between grass and moss, and how the burr oak tree got its name.

The Head Start kids were too young to follow the guidebook to the nature trail. But the warble of song birds and the smell and feel of the forest floor communicated as the printed word could not.

By the end of the half-day field trip, several of the children were being carried in the arms of adult volunteers; others were emptying dirt from their shoes. But most of them were leaving as they had come: holding hands with their classmates "buddy style."

on Thursadys.

THE HIGHLIGHT, he recalls, has been an occasion or two when he read someone's name on an arrest warrant, phoned him, directing him into the station and made the arrest himself.

"Needless to say, it doesn't take much to muster too much excitement back there."

He liked his patrol work, and he enjoys warm weather.

That, however, isn't the most impirtant part of it. What bothers him, he says, is that the village never charged him with anything, even after months and months of investigation, and it never gave him a hearing.

"I feel like I'm out on a limb on a tree," he says repeatedly, "and I don't know if the village is going to help me off that limb or if they're going to saw it off.

"I'm very disappointed that the village hasn't supported me — as I contended the day of the incident, as I contend now — that I acted within the department rules. A lot of officers are asking the same thing: What happens if I get in a tight spot? Is the village going to back me or ignore me?"

Jaworski doesn't begrudge Engelson his suit. "I think we both have the right to return to a natural lifestyle as fast as possible," he says.

BUT THERE HAS been little speed to it. He cannot change jobs, he says, because he is approaching 35 and few departments will take a chance on him with the litigation still pending.

He doesn't know what to do with his finances, how much to bank, how much to spend, how much credit to use.

The first year after the shooting, he cancelled vacation plans. Later, he considered buying a car but decided against it. He remodelled his house but only in a piecemeal fashion.

"It's just very hard to plan your lifestyle," he says. "Every decision I make, I think about it."

Meanwhile, the courts have taken two years to weight arguments, to decide right and wrong. They probably will take more years to do so. The village spent months interviewing and investigating to decide what happened.

That was not the case, Jaworski says, when he had to decide whether to use his gun.

"An officer, any officer, only has seconds."

permitted.

"We were told during committee hearings that there were people just waiting to make the stuff," Jaffe said. "And the really sad thing about it is that you're dealing with cancer patients who are going to throw their money after Laetrile instead of going in for other (cancer) therapies."

Jaffe called the House bill permitting physcians to prescribe Laetrile a "hoax that doesn't accomplish anything."

"THE BILL DOESN'T legalize Laetrile. We can't countermand the FDA. The whole thing is goofy," he said.

Dr. Leigh E. Rosenblum, vice president of medical services at Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge, largest cancer treatment center in the Northwest suburbs, said doctors would not decide whether to use Laetrile until after the state legislation has run its course.

"I'm sure we won't do anything until we're up against it. If we had to make the decision right now, my guess is that we would not use it," Rosenblum said.

Totten said he has talked to Gov. James R. Thompson about signing the Laetrile legislation. "I think he (Thompson) would be much more comfortable if the manufacture and sale is included in the bill," he said.

State Sen. David Regner, R-Mount Prospect, and State Sen. Robert T. Lane, D-Chicago Heights, are expected to sponsor the Senate Laetrile bill.

That, however, isn't the most impirtant part of it. What bothers him, he says, is that the village never charged him with anything, even after months and months of investigation, and it never gave him a hearing.

"I feel like I'm out on a limb on a tree," he says repeatedly, "and I don't know if the village is going to help me off that limb or if they're going to saw it off.

"I'm very disappointed that the village hasn't supported me — as I contended the day of the incident, as I contend now — that I acted within the department rules. A lot of officers are asking the same thing: What happens if I get in a tight spot? Is the village going to back me or ignore me?"

Jaworski doesn't begrudge Engelson his suit. "I think we both have the right to return to a natural lifestyle as fast as possible," he says.

BUT THERE HAS been little speed to it. He cannot change jobs, he says, because he is approaching 35 and few departments will take a chance on him with the litigation still pending.

He doesn't know what to do with his finances, how much to bank, how much to spend, how much credit to use.

The first year after the shooting, he cancelled vacation plans. Later, he considered buying a car but decided against it. He remodelled his house but only in a piecemeal fashion.

"It's just very hard to plan your lifestyle," he says. "Every decision I make, I think about it."

Meanwhile, the courts have taken two years to weight arguments, to decide right and wrong. They probably will take more years to do so. The village spent months interviewing and investigating to decide what happened.

That was not the case, Jaworski says, when he had to decide whether to use his gun.

"An officer, any officer, only has seconds."

permitted.

"We were told during committee hearings that there were people just waiting to make the stuff," Jaffe said. "And the really sad thing about it is that you're dealing with cancer patients who are going to throw their money after Laetrile instead of going in for other (cancer) therapies."

Jaffe called the House bill permitting physcians to prescribe Laetrile a "hoax that doesn't accomplish anything."

"THE BILL DOESN'T legalize Laetrile. We can't countermand the FDA. The whole thing is goofy," he said.

Dr. Leigh E. Rosenblum, vice president of medical services at Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge, largest cancer treatment center in the Northwest suburbs, said doctors would not decide whether to use Laetrile until after the state legislation has run its course.

"I'm sure we won't do anything until we're up against it. If we had to make the decision right now, my guess is that we would not use it," Rosenblum said.

Totten said he has talked to Gov. James R. Thompson about signing the Laetrile legislation. "I think he (Thompson) would be much more comfortable if the manufacture and sale is included in the bill," he said.

State Sen. David Regner, R-Mount Prospect, and State Sen. Robert T. Lane, D-Chicago Heights, are expected to sponsor the Senate Laetrile bill.

Midway flights cut cities for low fare

The Civil Aeronautics Board Wednesday slashed by almost two-thirds the number of cities under consideration for new low fare air links with Chicago's Midway Airport. The low-fare links were proposed last year by 11 airlines.

A CAB spokesman said the action cuts from 15 to six the number of routes on which the flights — with ticket prices 25 to 50 per cent below normal — may ultimately be allowed.

The spokesman said the board also decided to limit itself to discounts good for flights from Chicago to the other cities involved and not so-called "joint fares" involving a discount for part of a flight and regular fares for the rest of the trip. Only flights using Midway Airport in Chicago will be considered, the CAB said. Midway is much smaller than Chicago's O'Hare Airport which is one of the busiest in the nation. The CAB said it will examine the propsect of allowing the low cost flights between Midway and Cleveland, Detroit, Kansas City, Minneapolis-St. Paul, Pittsburgh and St. Louis.

It rejected consideration of similar service from Chicago to Buffalo, N.Y.; Cincinnati, Columbus, Ohio; Dayton, Ohio; Des Moines, Iowa; Indianapolis; Louisville; Memphis; and Omaha, Neb. "The potential benefits of including all 15 cities would not outweigh the administrative burdens and delays that would follow (as a result of considering discount service to all 15)," the board said.

Hit man testifies at Aleman trial

Louis Almeida, the key witness in the murder trial of reputed crime syndicate hit man Harry Aleman, testified in Cook County Circuit Court Wednesday he also has worked as an assassin for the mob. Aleman is charged with the Sept. 27, 1972 shotgun slaying of William Logan, 34, near Logan's home. Logan was a truck dispatcher and union steward. Almeida has testified he drove the car from whch Aleman shot Logan. Almeida, 34, testified that when he and another man were arrested on the Ohio Turnpike in 1975, the were carrying "a picture of a person we were supposed to go and kill in Pennsylvania."

Aleman's defense attorney, Frank G. Whalen, asked Almeida if he planned to carry out the 1975 planned assassination in Pittsburgh, Almeida said, "Yes sir . . . $10,000." "I take it at the time of your arrest you were a hired assassin, is that correct?" Whalen asked. "Yes," Almeida replied, adding he could not remember the name of the man he was hired to kill. Almeida was questioned most of Wednesday morning by Whalen about statements Almeida gave to police and federal investigators concerning the Logan murder.

Police spying incredible: Walker

"This is America . . . It is incredible," former Gov. Daniel Walker said Wednesday after learning Chicago police intelligence agents had spied on him for more than 13 years. The former governor said he examined his personal files as the result of a court order making the records available to persons who were spied on by the police unit known as the Red Squad. "At first I felt a sort of mild amusement," Walker said. "After all, the information in the files is common knowledge — it was in the newspapers.

"But then, I thought, this is America. All the information in my files related to political activity. It is incredible." The Walker files contain numerous reports on meetings or rallies he took part in or attended. Some file references are to political functions in private homes, some of the functions attended by police spies. Numerous newspaper clippings are in the file on the former governor, including many clippings which deal with the federal commission Walker headed after the disorders at the 1968 Democratic National Convention in Chicago. The report said there was a "police riot."

Edison to improve plant security

The National Regulatory Commission said Wednesday Commonwealth Edison Co. has agreed to correct deficient security precautions at the Quad Cities Nuclear Generating Station near Cordova, Ill. The NRC also said it will conduct stepped-up inspections of the plant to ensure the changes are made according to an agreement. The agreement covers procedures pertaining to general plant access, access to sensitive plant areas, guard response to security alarms, hardware use in prohibitive areas and detection devices.

The agreement comes in the midst of an NRC investigation of alleged lax security procedures at the Cordova nuclear power site. Allegations were conttined in a series of investigative reports published by the Moline Daily Dispatch April 26-28. NRC spokesman Jan Strasma said the NRC would announce the results of its investigation within a few weeks.

Slot machines seized

State police and FBI agents seized 21 slot machines Wednesday in gambling raids carried out with state warrants at two Lawrenceville fraternal clubs, police said. State police said 11 machines containing $245.95 were confiscated at the Elks Club and 10 machines containing $160.70 were seized at the Eagles Club. The money was turned over to the Lawrence County treasurer, police said. Police retained the machines pending trial and an order to destroy them. Police said charges of keeping a gambling place were pending.

Dist. 25 asked to delay lease of school to Roosevelt

by SHERYL JEDLINSKI

Residents in the Miner Junior High School area are circulating petitions asking the Arlington Heights Dist. 25 Board of Education to postpone making a decision on leasing the school to Roosevelt University until an environmental impact study is done.

The residents plan to ask the Arlington Heights Environmental Control Commission to study what effect establishing a branch of the university will have on the quality of life in Arlington Heights.

The group plans to attend the commission's meeting at 8 p.m. next Thursday.

"THERE ARE MANY, many questions that need to be asked and our intent is to bring these issues to the floor and allow time for answers," said Pauline Buss, 1507 E. Miner, one of those spearheading the petition drive.

Officials of Chicago-based Roosevelt University have asked the Dist. 25 board to allow them to lease either Miner, 1101 E. Miner, or Thomas Junior High School, 303 E. Thomas Ave., as a branch campus beginning in September, 1978. While noting that either of the schools would be acceptable, they picked Miner as their first choice because of its structural design and proximity to the Chicago and North Western Ry. station.

The board is to discuss the request at a public hearing scheduled for 7:30 p.m. June 2 at the administration building, 301 W. South St.

The board has decided to close one of its four junior high schools at the end of the 1977-78 school year, because of declining enrollment and rising budget deficits, but has not named a school for closing.

MRS. BUSS contends there are bigger issues involved than whose school will be closed. It is not a "mine-theirs" controversy, she said.

"There are some problems as to the quality of our lifestyle and it affects all of Arlington Heights," she said. "If they (Roosevelt) had picked Thomas I would be working just as hard to get answers."

The answers Mrs. Buss says she is seeking involve the impact Roosevelt will have on noise and air pollution levels, traffic and parking congestion, safety and village services and facilities such as the public library.

"I have four pages of questions about what this will do to the quality of our environment," she said. "Even just how much it costs for a 'no parking' sign, how many we'll need and who'll pay the cost."

OTHER RESIDENTS in the Miner area have expressed similar concerns. Parents of elementary school children worry the traffic that the university classes would generate could endanger the safety of children bicycling to Recreation Park and walking to Windsor School, which adjoins Miner.

Residents along Miner and Dryden streets say their neighborhood already is so heavily traveled by cars that they have difficulty backing out of their driveways. Others say parking is a problem on nights when community activities are going on at Windsor or Miner.

Commission chairwoman Jean Hanlon said she will wait for the Miner residents to present their case next week before deciding what role her group will play in the matter. The commission is an advisory arm of the Arlington Heights Village Board.

Dist. 59 talent program near end?

The fate of the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 talent development program for gifted children is up in the air.

The Dist. 59 Board of Education Wednesday voted not to reapply for state funding for the 2-year-old program by the May 26 deadline. The board, however, did direct administrators to ask for a 30-day extension in filing the funding application.

"I'd feel better getting further into the budget and knowing how many dollars we have in the pie before making a dollar commitment to this," board member Paul Kucharski said. "We have to assign priority uses for the funds we have and then go ahead with the programs that are most beneficial to the whole district."

ABOUT 40 teachers, principals and parents came to the special board meeting to speak in support of the program.

Board Pres. Harold Harvey and members Kucharski, and Sharon Chavoen voted not to reapply for state funding for the gifted program. Board members Judith Zanca, Emil Bahnmaier and Barbara Somogyi voted to apply for the funds. Board member Richard Stamm was absent.

"What they said tonight is that gifted education is not a priority to be planned for but rather a program to exist only if funds happen to be available," Charlene Bessey, gifted program coordinator, said. "The concern of teachers and parents fell on deaf ears tonight."

The talent development program serves about 450 gifted students in grades two through eight with pilot programs offered in advanced math, reading, music, social studies, science and creative writing and thinking.

Some 65 teachers are involved in the program on their own time with $17,000 for the program coordinator, the only expense the district bears, Mrs. Bessey said.

SUPT. ROGER BARDWELL said the $17,000 is one-tenth of 1 per cent of Dist. 59's budget and that such a savings would not be a significant help to the district's over-all financial problems.

The board's budget and finance committee currently is trying to cut $1 million in expenditures from the district's budget to ease the district's financial problems.

"I realize that $17,000 is a small part of our $16 million budget but there are a whole lot of inexpensive programs in that budget and sooner or later some of these programs have to be cut," Harvey said. "There's not a program we can cut that's not going to make someone unhappy. But the district is to the point where something has got to be done."

Mrs. Zanca said she belives the board is being "short sighted" if it deprives gifted students of the opportunities the talent development program now offers them.

"I'm uncomfortable having to come before this board to justify the existence of an outstanding, proven program with such a minimal cost," Mrs. Bessey told the board.

Dist. 25 asked to delay lease of school to Roosevelt

by SHERYL JEDLINSKI

Residents in the Miner Junior High School area are circulating petitions asking the Arlington Heights Dist. 25 Board of Education to postpone making a decision on leasing the school to Roosevelt University until an environmental impact study is done.

The residents plan to ask the Arlington Heights Environmental Control Commission to study what effect establishing a branch of the university will have on the quality of life in Arlington Heights.

The group plans to attend the commission's meeting at 8 p.m. next Thursday.

"THERE ARE MANY, many questions that need to be asked and our intent is to bring these issues to the floor and allow time for answers," said Pauline Buss, 1507 E. Miner, one of those spearheading the petition drive.

Officials of Chicago-based Roosevelt University have asked the Dist. 25 board to allow them to lease either Miner, 1101 E. Miner, or Thomas Junior High School, 303 E. Thomas Ave., as a branch campus beginning in September, 1978. While noting that either of the schools would be acceptable, they picked Miner as their first choice because of its structural design and proximity to the Chicago and North Western Ry. station.

The board is to discuss the request at a public hearing scheduled for 7:30 p.m. June 2 at the administration building, 301 W. South St.

The board has decided to close one of its four junior high schools at the end of the 1977-78 school year, because of declining enrollment and rising budget deficits, but has not named a school for closing.

MRS. BUSS contends there are bigger issues involved than whose school will be closed. It is not a "mine-theirs" controversy, she said.

"There are some problems as to the quality of our lifestyle and it affects all of Arlington Heights," she said. "If they (Roosevelt) had picked Thomas I would be working just as hard to get answers."

The answers Mrs. Buss says she is seeking involve the impact Roosevelt will have on noise and air pollution levels, traffic and parking congestion, safety and village services and facilities such as the public library.

"I have four pages of questions about what this will do to the quality of our environment," she said. "Even just how much it costs for a 'no parking' sign, how many we'll need and who'll pay the cost."

OTHER RESIDENTS in the Miner area have expressed similar concerns. Parents of elementary school children worry the traffic that the university classes would generate could endanger the safety of children bicycling to Recreation Park and walking to Windsor School, which adjoins Miner.

Residents along Miner and Dryden streets say their neighborhood already is so heavily traveled by cars that they have difficulty backing out of their driveways. Others say parking is a problem on nights when community activities are going on at Windsor or Miner.

Commission chairwoman Jean Hanlon said she will wait for the Miner residents to present their case next week before deciding what role her group will play in the matter. The commission is an advisory arm of the Arlington Heights Village Board.

Dist. 59 talent program near end?

The fate of the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 talent development program for gifted children is up in the air.

The Dist. 59 Board of Education Wednesday voted not to reapply for state funding for the 2-year-old program by the May 26 deadline. The board, however, did direct administrators to ask for a 30-day extension in filing the funding application.

"I'd feel better getting further into the budget and knowing how many dollars we have in the pie before making a dollar commitment to this," board member Paul Kucharski said. "We have to assign priority uses for the funds we have and then go ahead with the programs that are most beneficial to the whole district."

ABOUT 40 teachers, principals and parents came to the special board meeting to speak in support of the program.

Board Pres. Harold Harvey and members Kucharski, and Sharon Chavoen voted not to reapply for state funding for the gifted program. Board members Judith Zanca, Emil Bahnmaier and Barbara Somogyi voted to apply for the funds. Board member Richard Stamm was absent.

"What they said tonight is that gifted education is not a priority to be planned for but rather a program to exist only if funds happen to be available," Charlene Bessey, gifted program coordinator, said. "The concern of teachers and parents fell on deaf ears tonight."

The talent development program serves about 450 gifted students in grades two through eight with pilot programs offered in advanced math, reading, music, social studies, science and creative writing and thinking.

Some 65 teachers are involved in the program on their own time with $17,000 for the program coordinator, the only expense the district bears, Mrs. Bessey said.

SUPT. ROGER BARDWELL said the $17,000 is one-tenth of 1 per cent of Dist. 59's budget and that such a savings would not be a significant help to the district's over-all financial problems.

The board's budget and finance committee currently is trying to cut $1 million in expenditures from the district's budget to ease the district's financial problems.

"I realize that $17,000 is a small part of our $16 million budget but there are a whole lot of inexpensive programs in that budget and sooner or later some of these programs have to be cut," Harvey said. "There's not a program we can cut that's not going to make someone unhappy. But the district is to the point where something has got to be done."

Mrs. Zanca said she belives the board is being "short sighted" if it deprives gifted students of the opportunities the talent development program now offers them.

"I'm uncomfortable having to come before this board to justify the existence of an outstanding, proven program with such a minimal cost," Mrs. Bessey told the board.

Panel links girl's death to swine flu

The death of a 17-year-old South Carolina girl last month was attributed Wednesday to a probable "dead-end" swine flu virus that is not expected to affect government influenza shot recommendations for next fall and winter. The death of the unidentified girl was disclosed at a meeting in Atlanta of the federal Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices at the national Center for Disease Control. The committee was meeting to approve its immunization recommendations for the fall and winter. Dr. Bruce Dull, assistant director of the CDC and committee chairman, said an investigation into the girl's death was continuing. However, he said it was unlikely the death would have any affect on vaccine recommendations.

"It appears that this is a dead-end virus," Dull said, adding there was no spread of the infection to the girl's family or to the community, which was not identified. While there has been no evidence of the spread of swine influenza, Dr. Thomas Vernon of Denver, Colo., a member of the committee, said, "My own feeling is that we should keep this virus before us as the most likely candidate to cause the next (flu) epidemic." He said it would be wrong at this time to tell the public, "Aw, forget it."

Hint Jackson suspects in 'dives'

Two suspects sought in the multi-million dollar burglary murder of grocery store heiress Marjorie V. Jackson may be frequenting "honky tonks and dives," an investigator said Wednesday in Indianapolis. Wanted on charges of murder and unlawful flight to avoid prosecution are Howard R. Willard, 38, who has served three prison terms for theft and burglary, and Marjorie Louise Pollitt, 48, his former wife. Lt. Rbert Kirkman said the pair may have been forced to take 10 cents or less on the dollar to convert $100 bills — on which the FBI has circulated serial numbers — into unmarked smaller denomination bills.

The couple disappeared from a house they shared at Mooresville, 10 miles southwest of Indianapolis, after spending money freely and boasting to neighbors that Willard had inherited $12 million from an uncle. Mrs. Jackson, 66, widow of the former president of Standard Food Stores, distrusted banks and kept a large cache of cash hidden at her rundown northside brownstone ranch house.

Court nixes judges' pay efforts

The U.S. Court of Claims Wednesday rejected efforts by 140 federal judges to collect back pay on grounds inflation has eaten away much of their earnings. The court said in a written opinion it has no power to grant relief on the inflation issue "for the Constitution affords no protection from such an indirect, nondiscriminatory lowering of judicial compensation, not involving an assault upon the independence of judges." The jurists, represented by former Supreme Court Justice Arthur Goldberg, cited a constituional provision that judges' compensation "shall not be diminished during continuance in office." They aid this meant the executive and legislative branches were obligated to boost judicial salaries by whatever amount was needed to offset loss of buying power due to inflation.

Senate OKs Carter energy issue

One of President Carter's primary energy proposals — to consolidate federal energy programs into a single cabinet department — passed the Senate Wednesday night by a vote of 74 to 10. The vote came only seven hours after debate began on the far-reaching measure. The Senate rejected a series of amendments which would have set up a special division in the department for small business matters, given Congress veto power over rules and regulations promulgated by the department and widened public intervention in proceedings before the department. The Carter proposal still faces action in the House.

Vance meets Andrei Gromyko

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance met Soviet foreign minister Andrei Gromyko Wednesday behind the barbed wire of the Soviet mission in Geneva to try to find some agreement on arms reductions and Middle East peace. The talks were the first since the Soviets rejected two of President Carter's arms propoals in Moscow March 30. U.S. officials said Vance planned to propose regular consultations between the two superpowers on the Middle East.

Soviet experts to leave Sudan

The Sudan has ordered expulsion of all Soviet military experts serving with its armed forces and has given them one week to leave the country, the Egyptian Middle East news agency said Wednesday. The move signaled a further determination in Sudanese-Soviet relations which have been badly strained since 1971 when Sudanese President Jaafar Numeiry crushed a short-lived military coup led by Maj. Hashem Abdul-Ata.

47 suburbs sue Chicago to force water rate cut

Des Plaines and 46 other suburbs Wednesday filed suit against the City of Chicago to force it to reduce water rates to suburban users and to recoup $26 million in alleged overcharges since 1972.

"Chicago is billing us for services that benefit the residents of the City of Chicago, but not suburban residents," said Niles Mayor Nicholas Blase, organizer of the suburban opposition.

The class action suit, filed in Cook County Circuit Court, seeks a 38 per cent cut in current water rates, and a $26 million reimbursement for alleged overcharges in the past five years.

Des Plaines is one of 72 suburbs that buy water from Chicago. Forty-seven suburbs have joined the suit in response to recent rate increases and Blase said he still hopes the remaining 27 suburbs will join.

"CHICAGO GIVES free water to its hospitals and churches at a cost of about $5 million per year," said Louis Ancel of Ancel, Glink, Diamond and Murphy, the Chicago law firm representing the suburbs in the suit.

Ancel said the suburbs in effect are subsidizing these costs, plus the cost of building and maintaining Chicago fire hydrants, sewer mains, and the 4,150 miles of water mains in Chicago.

Blase said about 350,000 of Chicago's 500,000 water customers pay a flat monthly fee for water service, rather than paying a metered charge for actual use. He said this encourages Chicago residents to use more water and as a result the suburbs end up paying more for their water.

The average Chicagoan uses about twice as much water as his typical suburban neighbor, according to Chicago Water Dept. figures, Blase said.

The price of Chicago water has increased 50 per cent in the past five years, he said. The most recent increase came in January of this year, when the Chicago City Council approved a 21 per cent rate hike. This increase has not been passed on to Des Plaines residents.

IF WATER RATES in Des Plaines are increased in line with the Chicago rate hike, the water bill for the average homeowner would rise from $152 to $184 annually.

The city is not sure how long it can delay raising local water rates.

Blase said the suburbs decided to file suit after negotiations for a rate cut with Chicago's Acting Mayor Michael Bilandic broke down two months ago.

Suburbs joining the suit will pay their share based on population. The more municipalities contributing to the suit, the less each will have to pay.

The maximum amount Des Plaines will have to pay for the suit — unless it goes to the U.S. Supreme Court — is $5,723. If all 72 communities join the suit, Des Plaines will pay $2,860.

Panel streetlight hearing set tonight

A public hearing to determint streetlighting standards for residential and secondary roads will be at 8 p.m. today by the Arlington Heights Plan Commission.

William Bachem, village electrical engineer, has recommended the plan commission set standards of 22-to 30-foot high concrete or aluminum poles with orange sodium vapor lights on to 12-foot long bracket arms.

Some residents, especially those in the Scarsdale area, east of Arlington Heights Road and north of Central road, have objected to the height of the poles and to requiring bracket arms.

Parks to view request for skateboard area

Requests for a skateboarding area in Arlington Heights will be reviewed today by the facilities committee of the Arlington Heights Park District.

The meeting will begin at 8:30 a.m. at the Forest View Racquet Club, 800 E. Falcon Dr.

Thomas Thornton, parks director, said the park district has received requests for a skateboarding area from Arlington Heights residents. Some private individuals have expressed an interest in leasing land from the park district to build such a facility.

"The facilities committee will have to decide now if we want a skateboard facility and if they do, how to go about developing it and financing it," Thornton said.

Park district officials have studied the requirements for such a facility and have determined that if it is built it should be located in Recreation Park, Miner Street and Belmont Avenue, on a paved area between the swimming pool and the lighted baseball diamond. "Right now that is the only existing site we feel would be suitable for it," Thornton said.

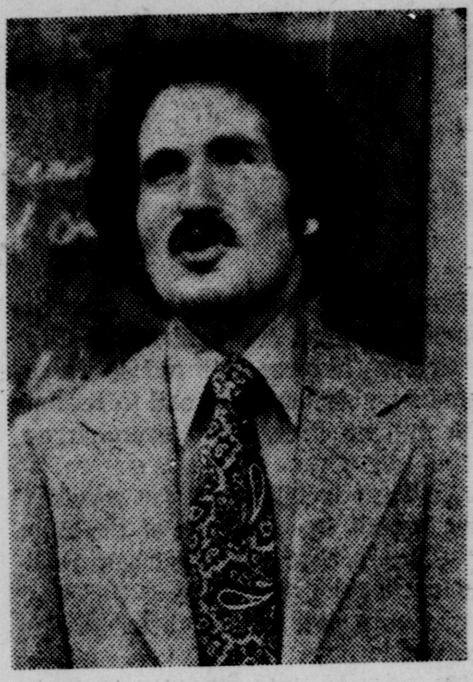
Dist. 214 'Kotter' gets big welcome



The real Gabe Kaplan.

by PAUL GORES

A few years ago Rick Neason of Arlington Heights was just another substitute teacher.

But that was before the TV comedy series "Welcome Back, Kotter" — before anyone knew of Neason's remarkable resemblance to Kotter star Gabe Kaplan, who plays an amiable high school teacher. And that was before Neason won the National Enquirer look-alike contest for being Kaplan's spittin' image. Now he's a celebrity.

A walk with Neason through the halls of Arlington High School would convince anyone of that.

"HI MR. KOTTER!," students shout as he walks down the hall. Some shout, "Hey Gabe!," some burst into laughter, others blush and almost all of them do a doubletake as Neason walks by.

Neason is used to the role, and he plays it to the hilt. He stops in the hall by a group of girls to gauge their reaction to his face.

"Where's the cafeteria?" Neason asks. But all he gets for an answer is a chorus of laughs and "I don't believe it."

"I would say they are probably more or less stunned," Neason said of the students who see him for the first time. "It's almost too much. It's like they can't believe it."

NEASON, 29, a native of Traverse City, Mich., said he has sported the Kotter-like hairstyle and mustache for five years before the TV show. He got his first teaching job at Prospect High School in 1970, went to Michigan two years later, moved back to Arlington Heights in 1976 and has been a substitute teacher for High School Dist. 214 since November.

He said the fact that he is at a different school nearly every day maintains the celebrity image.

Neason said he has a twin brother in Michigan, which has helped him deal with his sudden popularity.

"I've had to live with this for two years now (looking like Kotter), but that really helps, being a twin," Neason said. "It just means I have another twin. I'm used to looking like somebody else."

Neason said he gets along well wherever he goes, and sometimes the students like to get into the Kotter act.

"Some of the best students will play the Kotter kids, the Sweathogs," Neason said. "They're all pretty good kids, they just want to be actors."

STUDENTS AREN'T the only ones who make a fuss about Neason's resemblance to Kaplan. He said adults often are fooled by the resemblance, "especially when I'm someplace they might expect to see Kaplan, like the Arlington Park Hilton."

Neason met Palillo at the Hilton last year, and Neason claims Palillo helped him develop some of Kaplan's facial expressions.

Neason said that word of his resemblance to Kaplan has traveled to Kaplan himself.

"I suppose I'll meet him someplace, sometime," Neason said. "He knows the whole story, who I am and what I'm doing. I guess I'm an unusual guy."

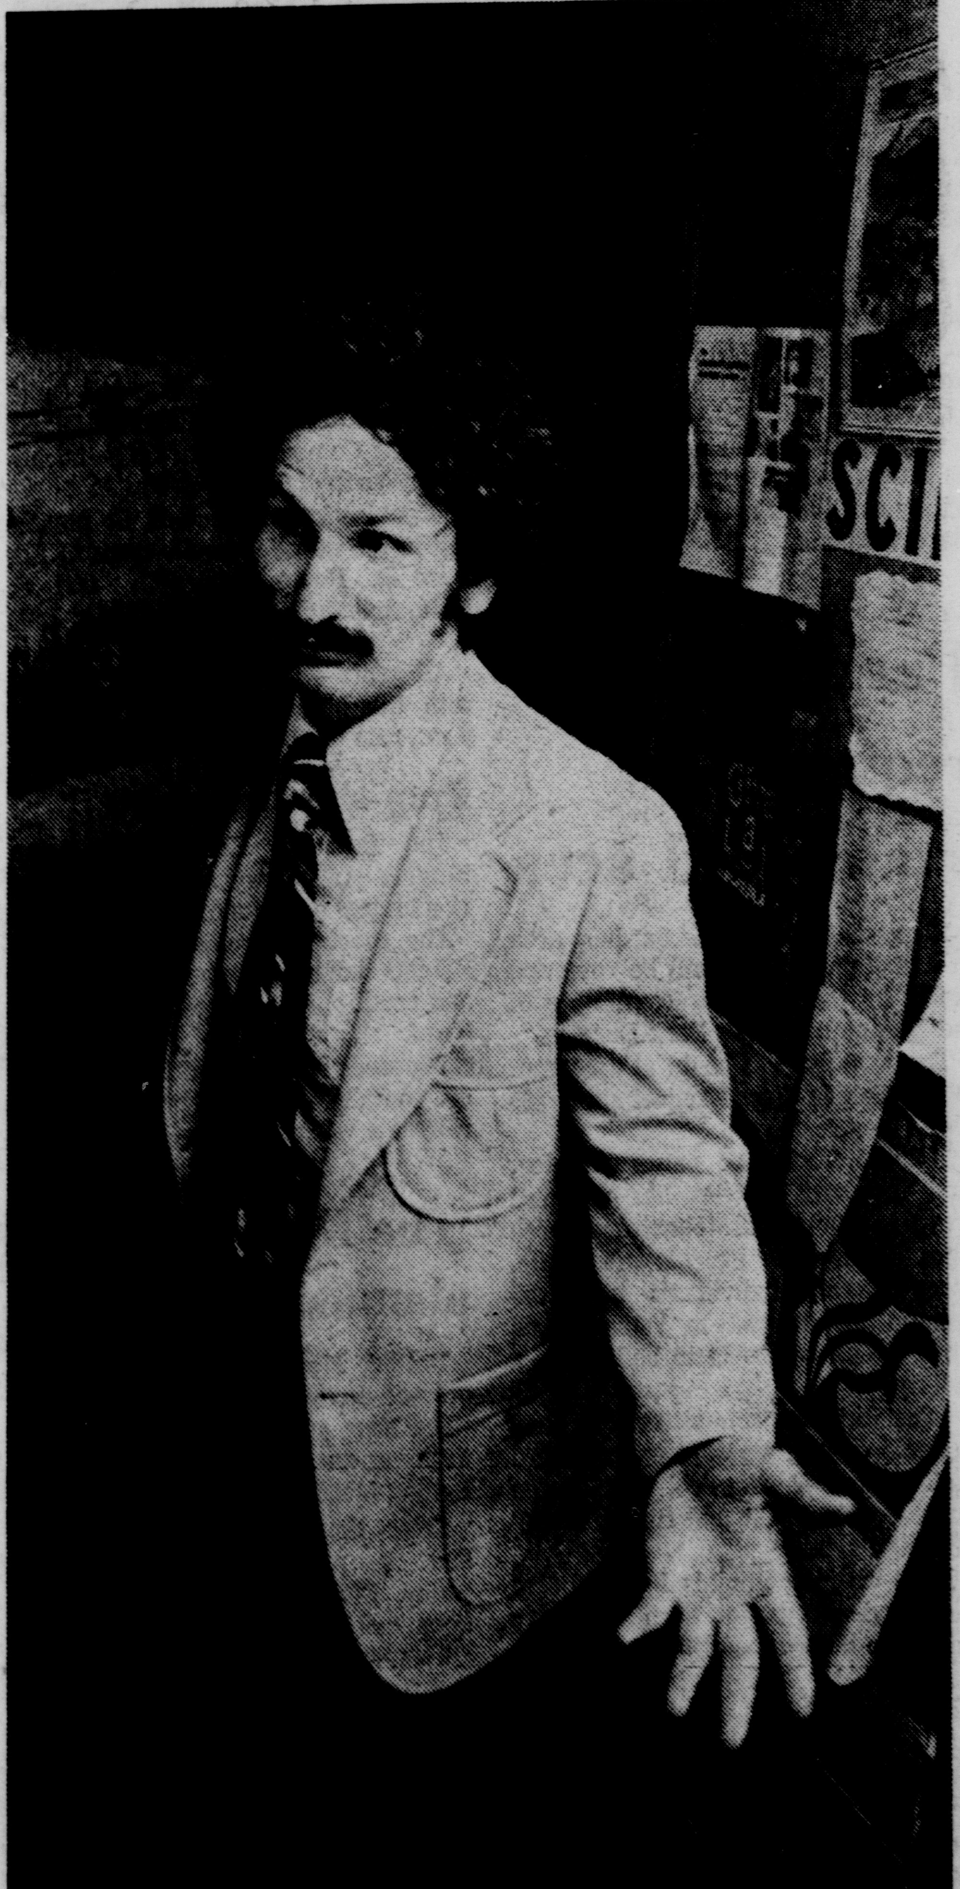
WELCOME BACK, Neason. Neason gets a cordial welcome from students where ever he substitute teaches in the Northwest suburbs.



SO WHAT'S A "SWEATHOG?" Neason prepares to greet his students with a Kotter impression when he walks in the room.

THE REACTION among students is always the same when Kotter's look-alike is around.

He said the fact that he is at a different school nearly every day maintains the celebrity image.

Neason said he has a twin brother in Michigan, which has helped him deal with his sudden popularity.

"I've had to live with this for two years now (looking like Kotter), but that really helps, being a twin," Neason said. "It just means I have another twin. I'm used to looking like somebody else."

Neason said he gets along well wherever he goes, and sometimes the students like to get into the Kotter act.

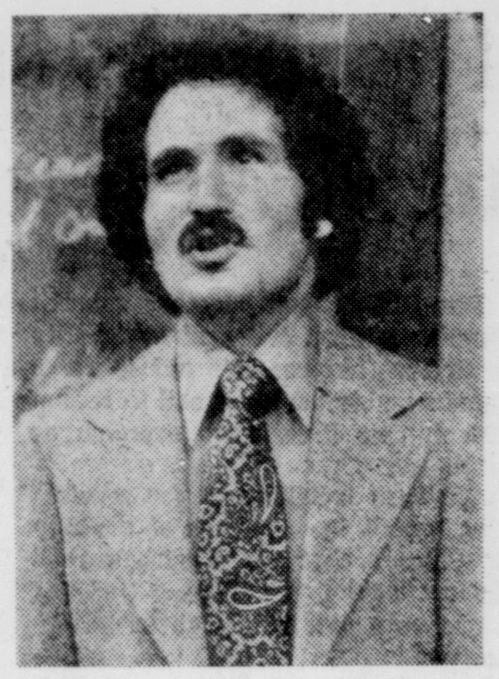
"Some of the best students will play the Kotter kids, the Sweathogs," Neason said. "They're all pretty good kids, they just want to be actors."

STUDENTS AREN'T the only ones who make a fuss about Neason's resemblance to Kaplan. He said adults often are fooled by the resemblance, "especially when I'm someplace they might expect to see Kaplan, like the Arlington Park Hilton."

Neason met Palillo at the Hilton last year, and Neason claims Palillo helped him develop some of Kaplan's facial expressions.

Neason said that word of his resemblance to Kaplan has traveled to Kaplan himself.

"I suppose I'll meet him someplace, sometime," Neason said. "He knows the whole story, who I am and what I'm doing. I guess I'm an unusual guy."



The real Gabe Kaplan.

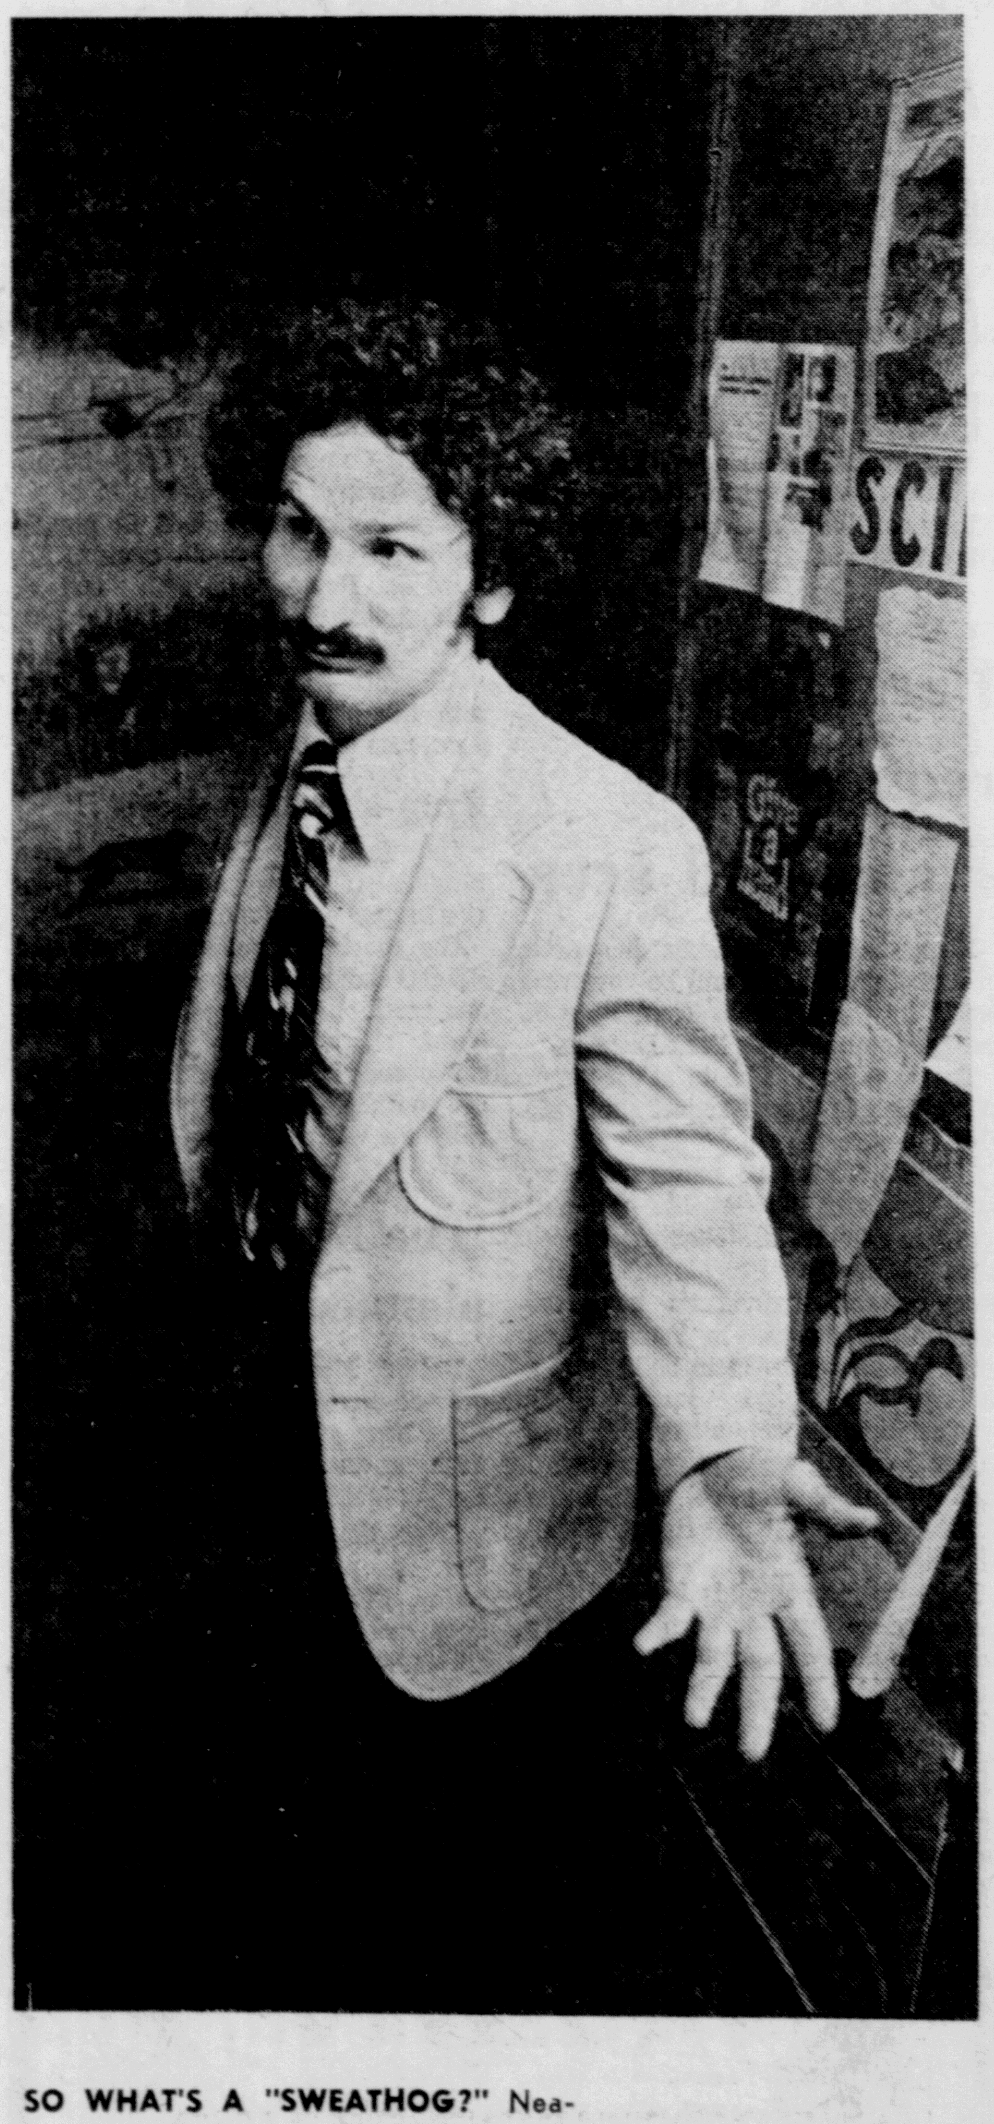
WELCOME BACK, Neason. Neason gets a cordial welcome from students where ever he substitute teaches in the Northwest suburbs.



SO WHAT'S A "SWEATHOG?" Neason prepares to greet his students with a Kotter impression when he walks in the room.

THE REACTION among students is always the same when Kotter's look-alike is around.

bu RUTH MUGALIAN

Sixty years ago there were 34,000 electric cars registered in the United States with 20 manufacturers producing the pollution-free vehicles.

Today there are fewer than 5,000 electric cars. But it's still called the car of the future.

Rolling Meadows businessmen and high school students who took a ride Wednesday in a demonstration model during a chamber of commerce luncheon, found the ride smooth and quiet.

But the price, limited speed, and short battery life left many saying that a lot of improvements will have to be made before they would buy the $9,000 automobile.

SPECTATORS WEREN'T impressed with the looks of the boxy car.

'It looks like an oversized golf cart," one of them said.

The car manufactured by a subsidiary of the American Motors Corp. and demonstrated by Gould Inc., is intended for short hauls at medium speeds.

"It's not yet a vacation car or a weekend car, but it certainly is a good second car," said Dr. Clint Christianson, associate director of energy research for Gould.

Right now only a handful of drivers are using the electric vehicle as a second car. But the U.S. Postal Service owns about 380 of them and has found they are perfect fo rthe slow, stop-start driving mail carriers do. American Telephone and Telegraph uses 10 of them for installing telephone systems. Thirty or 40 of the cars are being used as service vehicles for electric utility companies.

THE TOP SPEED of the car demonstrated Wednesday is 38 miles an hour. The battery has to be recharged about every 50 miles and the recharging process takes about eight hours. The battery has to be replaced every three years.

Harry O'Brien, executive director of the chamber of commerce, said the car is ideal for people who work in the same town in which they live.

"With so many businesses moving to the suburbs and so many people living close to work, it's an ideal system," he said. "It's even good for the guy who drives to the train station every day."

Christianson said studies have shown most people who drive to and from work usually average about 25 miles a day.

The electric car died early in the century with the invention of the self-starting engine for gasoline-fueled cars. The invention made it unnecessary to crank the cars, and gasoline engines soon replaced the electrics because they were faster.

THE NEW INTEREST in developing electric cars was sparked by the fuel shortage, Christianson said.

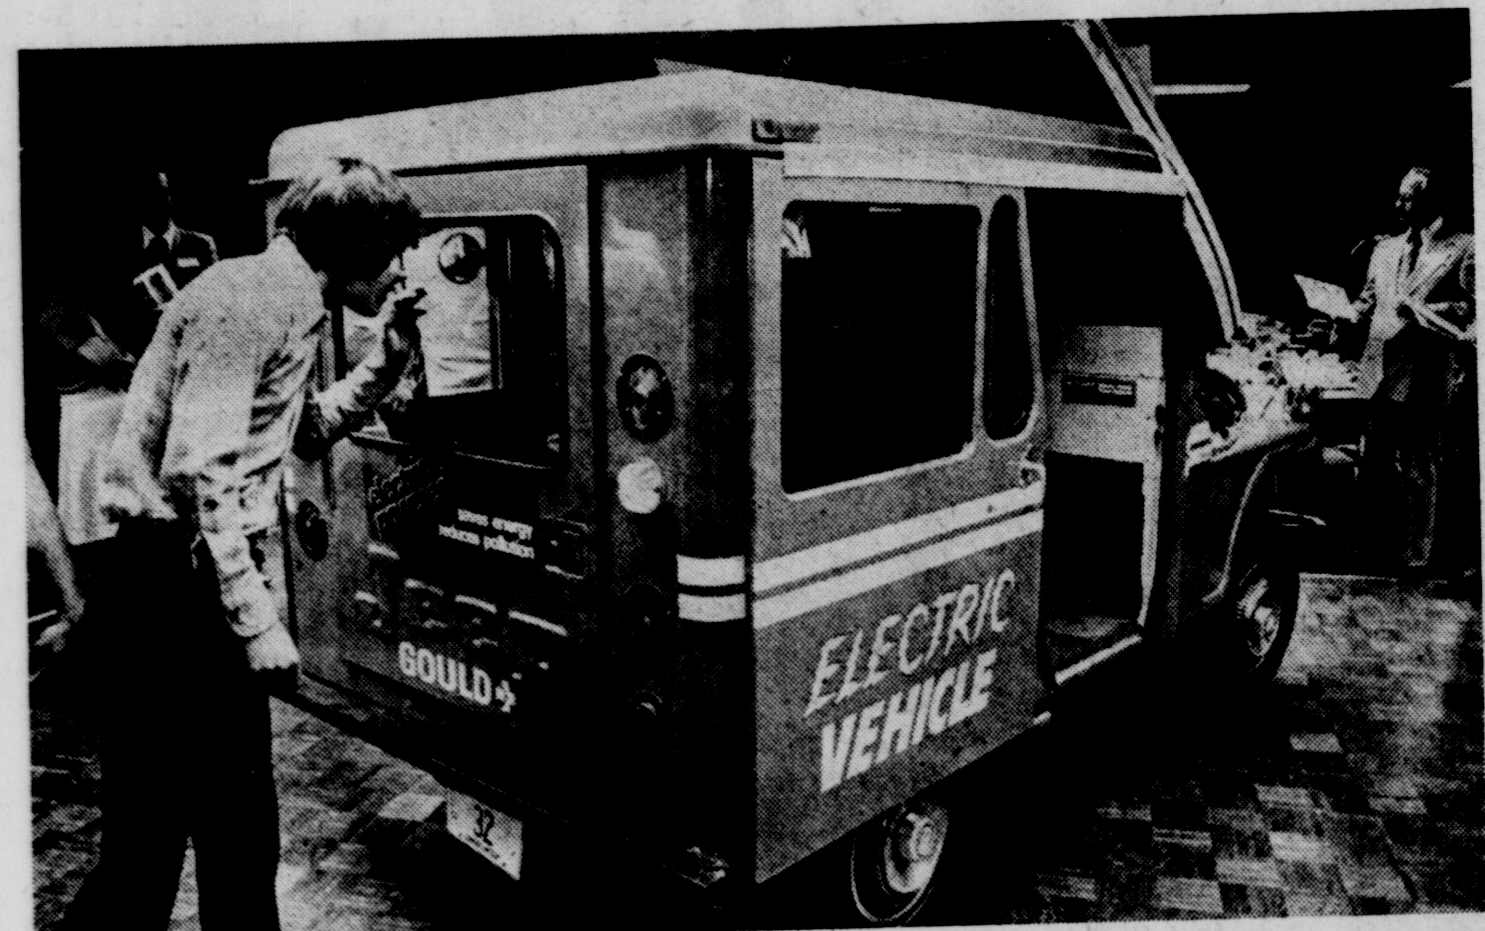
"We are due to run out of oil early in the next century," he said. "And the major use of oil is in transportation."

The students from physics and electronics classes at Rolling Meadows High School said if the body style of the car is improved, and if the price comes down a few thousand dollars, they might consider owning one.

"It would be a good car to come home late in," said one student. The car makes only a soft, high-pitched buzz, much quieter than a gasoline fueled auto.

The students also noted that with the energy crisis and pollution problems, further development of the car is necessary.

"It only has one fault," said Bob Hoekstra, 17. "You can't run out of gas."



IT MAY LOOK like an oversized golf cart, but the electric vehicle displayed by Gould Inc. in Rolling Meadows is billed as the car of the future because it uses no gasoline and does not pollute. The model pictured is identical to 380 cars that are being used by the U.S. Postal Service. The vehicle is ideal for slow, stop-start driving, officials say.

Prison report fails to resolve crisis: officials

A state-commissioned federal report on the Illinois prison system is unrea- on the Illinois prison system is unrealistic and fails to provide viable answers to the prison crisis, two corrections officials Wednesday said.

Acting Corrections Director Charles J. Rowe Wednesday called the $191,000 report one in which "reality got left by the wayside" and said the plan absolutely will not be adopted in full.

Dennis Wolff, warden of the Joliet Correctional Center, said the report points out many obvious problems but fails to propose "something meaningful" to deal with the problems.

THE REPORT, prepared last year and scheduled for release next month by the National Clearinghouse for Criminal Justice Planning and Architecture, labels the state's four maximum security prisons as dilapidated and dangerous to inmates.

It says the four prisons — Stateville, Joliet, Menard and Pontiac — should be closed.

Only one of the state's nine adult prisons, the minimum security institution in Downstate Vienna, was praised by the report. The 625-capacity prison is the state's newest, built in 1965, and is considered a model among the nation's corrections institutions.

The state's prison overcrowding crisis has been one of the chief concerns of Gov. James R. Thompson's administration, so much so that the corrections department has been given the largest percentage budget increase for fiscal 1978, 23.5 per cent compared with an average 3 per cent for other departments.

Rowe said Wednesday a Senate committee already has approved the budget, trimming it by only $750,000.

THE SCOPE OF the state's prison crisis was detailed by The Herald in March in a five-part series.

"Philosophically, I guess I could buy some of their thing," Rowe said. "Realistically, there's just no way unless the state wants to give us $500 million."

Rowe said he was "less than pleased" with the report, which cost the state $191,000. "If we impiemented every recommendation we would spend hundreds of millions of dollars and end up with bed space for only 5,700," Rowe said. "You would have to build 20 new prisons at a price of $500 million just to get the same amount of bed space we now have.

"I'm not in disagreement with the plan, but somehow reality got left by the wayside," Rowe said.

WOLFF, WHO IS warden of the state's oldest prison built in 1860, Wednesday said he had seen a preliminary draft of the report months ago and was concerned that the report offered unrealistic alternatives.

"My personal feelings were that some of the things were obvious. It doesn't take a lot of expertise to walk into these facilities and see that they are old. So what? We know about it, but what are we going to do about it?" he said.

"My professional concern was that the report did not include something meaningful to supplant these facilities," he said. "My reaction was that yes, we realize that these facilities are in need and I think the department as a whole is working diligently to deal with that, but it's not realistic to talk about the replacement of these prisons without some reasonable alternatives."

The report in part said the Joliet Correctional Center, which holds some 1,100, suffers from severe structural problems and should be abandoned. The report said an emergency $7 million renovation could make the facility temporarily suitable for a maximum 400 prisoners.

The state's adult prisons hold some 10,050 but projections are that the numbers could rise to 12,000 by the end of the year.

DANIEL WEIL, Thompson's corrections advisor, Wednesday said while he did not disagree with the concepts proposed in the report, "it is a question of where your priorities are and where the money is coming from."

In a related matter, Rowe's department Wednesday won House appropriations committee approval of a supplemental $2.1 million bill. The major portion of the money, $1.5 million, is to be used for additional clothing and supply needs, with $300,000 to be used to open the new Menard minimum security facility and another $300,000 for use at the Joliet facility.

Rwoe added he is working on a report due to Thompson June 1 that will recommend construction of a new medium security prison. Thompson has said he favors construction of a new facilty and has designated $25 million for capital improvements for the corrections department.

After 16 years, Yanks in Cuba

Passengers aboard MTS Daphne check out Havana shoreline upon arrival.

HAVANA, Cuba (UPI) — Hundreds of American tourists, arriving aboard a Greek-registered ship, toured Havana Wednesday as the first United States citizens in 16 years to arrive in Cuba directly from a United States port.

The 380 Americans, who sailed from New Orleans Sunday aboard the Liner Daphne, were greeted Tuesday by an enthusiastic crowd of cheering school children and well-wishers.

Four Cuban-born Americans aboard the ship were not allowed to get off the ship.

DR. DULCE MILANES and her husband, Dr. Sergio Fuentes, who now live in Grayslake, Ill., left Cuba in 1949 to intern in the United States. They protested their confinement aboard the ship, saying they are "nonpolitical."

"We are only interested in visiting with our relatives," Fuentes said.

The cruise was originally scheduled to sail for Montego Bay, Jamaica and Nassau when Carras Line officials received permission from the Cuban government to dock in Havana. The ship was to leave Cuba Thursday.

When they stepped ashore, the Americans were met by a crowd of Cubans who shook their hands.

ONE YOUNG student wrote a message on a pad in perfect English explaining he was taught to write English in school but never had the opportunity to speak it.

Their tour of Havana Wednesday included a jazz concert.

They also took a government-sponsored tour of the Ernest Hemingway Museum, Tropicana nightclub and Alamar housing development. They were welcomed by friendly crowds of curious Cubans wherever they went.

"It's fabulous," said Mildred Calloway, a nurse from Chicago. "It's nothing like I had heard it would be from Cubans in the U.S. I didn't see anyone hungry or poverty stricken. Of course, I haven't had a chance to meet the real working people like myself."

For Meghan, mom more important than $15 million

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — Meghan Kathleen Wilger, 6, told a judge she would rather live with her real mother than inherit about $15 million.

"The money made no impression on her," District Judge Samuel Caniglia said Wednesday of his decision on custody of the child. "She could have cared less."

Caniglia ruled Meghan must be returned to her natural mother, Mary E. Wilger, now Mrs. Tony Cox, rather than be adopted by her uncle and aunt.

MRS. COX SAID she had lived in a commune and taken a variety of illegal drugs, and was unsure of the name of Meghan's father. But that was before she married a golf pro in Council Bluffs, Ia., who could care for her daughter.

When Meghan was 18 months old, Mrs. Cox' brother, Timothy John Wilger of Omaha, took custody of the child. Mrs. Cox, then single, signed a handwritten document which read:

"I, Mary Wilger, being of sound mind and body give complete legal and total custody of my minor child, Meghan Kathleen Wilger, over to my brother, Timothy John Wilger."

Mrs. Wilger's great-aunt, Mabel Shaw Walker of New York, left a trust estate of $15 million with a stipulation that her niece alone could benefit from the proceeds. Upon Mrs. Wilger's death, the trust would go to her heirs, including Meghan, if the Wilgers were allowed to adopt her.

CANIGLIA SAID Mrs. Cox visited her daughter often while she lived with Mrs. Cox' brother and his wife, Isabel, and also helped support the child.

"I felt the document was not an abandonment or relinquishment and since she did give custody and nothing else, she could revoke it at any time she wanted to," the judge said.

"As soon as the mother became able to keep the child and secure enough to provide the child with what she needed, she demanded her back."

Court documents said that on Oct. 24, 1975, Mrs. Cox "seized and secreted away" Meghan. Timothy and Isabel Wilger filed suit demanding her return.

"Every child is entitled to the love, affection and care of her natural mother," Caniglia said. "The mother, in my opinion, had done nothing to forfeit that right.

"She was not unfit morally or physically to have her care and custody. I just felt a mother's love is worth more than the money involved; more than any amount of money."

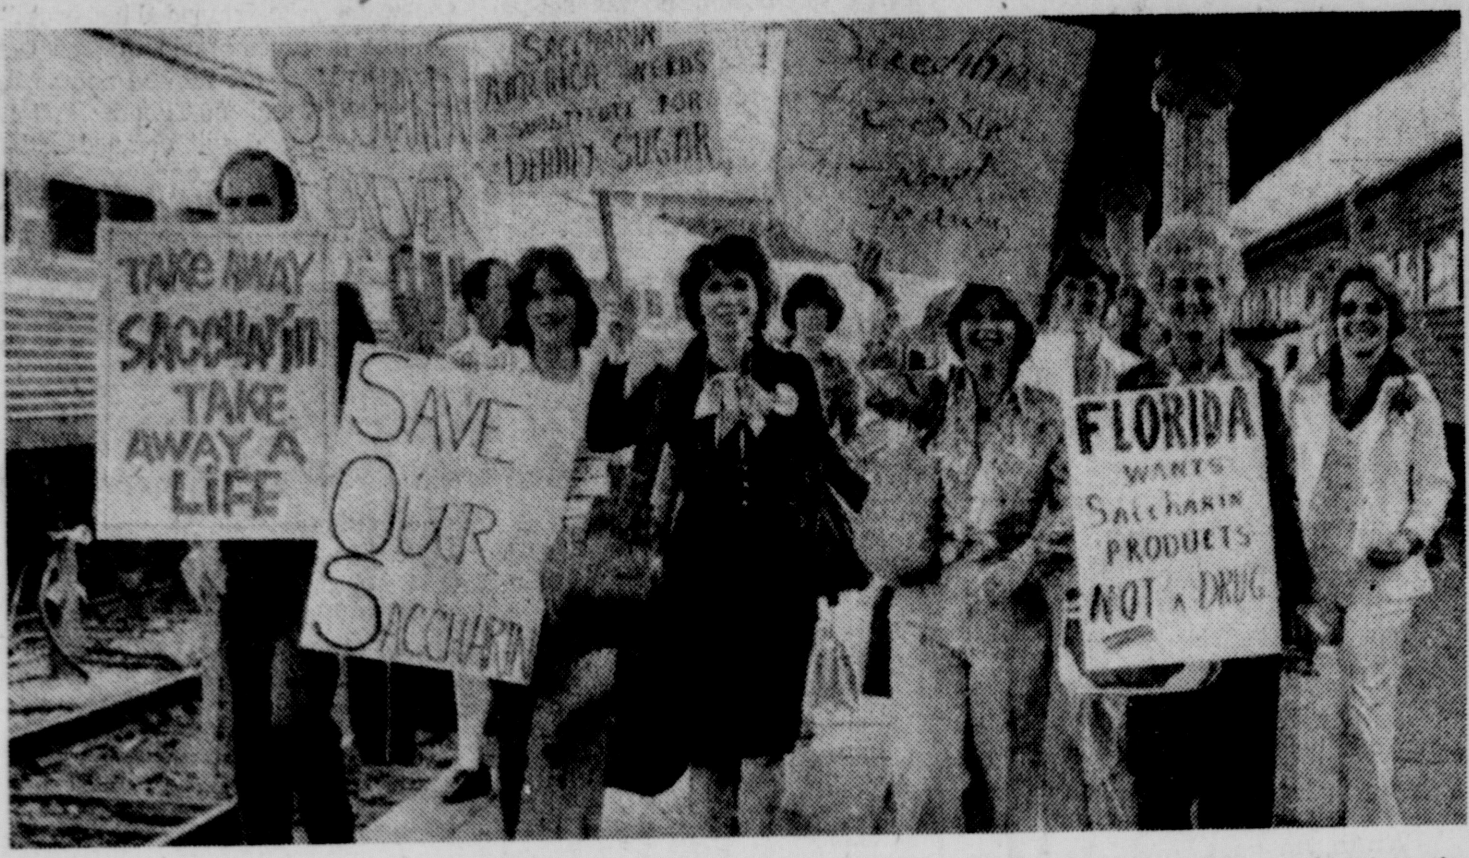
Diabetics need saccharin: medics

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Doctors treating diabetic children, and the father of a teen-age girl with the disease, told the government Wednesday its proposed saccharin ban would make such youngsters social cripples and endanger their health.

"Soft drinks are an American way of life, especially for teens," said K. David Stone of Kansas City, whose daughter, Jennifer, has diabetes. "Diabetic teen-agers have an added burden at this adolescent stage in their lives. They are more sensitive about being different.

'The many times that Jennifer's group goes to a drive-in for a snack, Jennifer orders Diet 7-Up. This way she is less tempted to add harmful calories to her diet and still feels part of the group."



TAKE AWAY SACCHARIN TAKE AWAY A LIFE
SAVE OUR SACCHARIN
FLORIDA WANTS SACCHARIN PRODUCTS NOT A DRUG

A GROUP OF diabetics from Atlanta arrive Wednesday at Washington's Union Station after overnight train ride on the "saccharin special." They plan to tell the Food and Drug Administration what they think of its proposed saccharin ban.

STONE SUBMITTED his testimony as the FDA opened two days of public hearings on its plan to outlaw use of saccharin as a sweetner in foods and beverages.

U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-10th, testified the government was "overreaching" its authority in enacting the ban.

He lobbied for passage of his bill which would require more FDA testing and if a casual link is found would require the government to put a warning on the product.

Mikva also favored another bill which would require the FDA to consider the risk-benefit factor before banning any substance.

The congressman said the recent move against saccharin served only to further diminish the FDA's credibility.

AMONG OTHER witnesses were two representatives of the "Heart of America Affiliate" of the American Diabetes Assn., Doctors Jerome Grunt and Judith Pfeffer.

Dr. Pfeffer, who works at Children's Mercy Hospital in Kansas City, said diet drinks and snacks help a child feel loved and "in the psychic sphere, health to a child means doing what all other children do."

"In mundane terms for an adolescent," she said, "this will mean being able to join friends at a fast food place and get a snack and diet drinks. Much social function, at any age, centers around food."

Grunt, who is responsible for treatment of 160 children at the same hospital, said there would be "very clear certain harm" to diabetics if saccharin is banned.

It is estimated that between 100,000 and 200,000 American children have diabetes.

MOST OF THE initial witnesses opposed the ban. A few sign-carrying demonstrators, arriving on the "saccharin special" train from Atlanta, waved placards. But the auditorium was only about half full and the proceedings were orderly.

Lawyer James Turner, author of "Chemical Feast," was one of the few proponents of the ban. He said it would be "tragic" if the FDA allows the debate over saccharin to disrupt the entire food safety law.

If the law is changed, he said, "we will find ourselves on the wrong end of a losing battle against a growing chemical environment."

Dr. Sebastian Ciancio, a dental professor from the University of New York at Buffalo who testified on behalf of the American Dental Assn., said saccharin is necessary for toothpaste, mouthwash and other dental care products.

He said the total amount of saccharin ingested by someone who brushes his or her teeth twice a day averages about .4 milligrams. That is less than three-one millionths of what was fed to the rats each day in the Canadian study, he said.

Yacht Sequoia to be sold for $286,000

PORTSMOUTH, R.I. (UPI) — An elusive Rhode Island financier Wednesday was declared high bidder in a government auction of "Sequoia," the yacht of American presidents from Herbert Hoover to Gerald Ford.

Thomas Aquinas Malloy's $286,000 bid was higher than 173 others, including one from Hustler Magazine publisher Larry Flynt, who came in fifth with a bid of $200,000, the same price the government paid for Sequoia in 1931.

Malloy, a middle-aged businessman who owns mansions in Rhode Island and Florida, refused to cmment. He said through his son he has never owned a yacht and made an 11th-hour decision to bid on Sequoia.

WILLIAM BURT, chief of the defense department Ship Sales Office in Portsmouth, said Malloy would be awarded a contract as soon as the financial standing of his firm, Leisure Craft Inc., is verified.

President Carter ordered the auction because he felt the $800,000 annual cost of maintaining Sequoia and paying her 59-member crew was excessive.

MALLOY'S SON said Leisure Craft was created Tuesday as a division of Malloy's U.S. Investment and Development Corp., a Rhode Island developer of condominiums and nursing homes. State records show the firm has not filed an annual report since 1975.

Second in line was a $252,000 bid from Gerald Chichester of West Hartford, Conn., who had hoped to turn Sequoia into a museum. Occidental Petroleum Corp. President Dr. Armand Hammer of Los Angeles bid $251,000. WSM Inc. of Nashville, Tenn., bid $230,000.

Built in 1925 and purchased for government use during the Hoover administration, lounges in Sequoia's teak deck house can accommodate up to 40 guests. There is room for 22 to dine and beds for six.

Want a finer lawn and landscaping now and pay as you live and play on it?

Warren's Turf Nursery, Inc. will arrange through the Landscaper and Garden Supply Dealer of your choice, to sod and landscape your lawn. You can take up to several years to pay as you enjoy your home and its landscaped surroundings.

Your Landscape Contractor will plant only the finest trees, plants, shrubbery and sod. The sod he will be planting will be BenSun (A-34) Kentucky Bluegrass and other fine bluegrasses developed by Warren' research who grow for you the finest lawns available today. Here is why:

Research facilities, established nearly a third of a century ago by Warren's Turf Nursery, Inc., have under observation over 1,000 strains and species of lawn grasses. Several of these new grass discoveries have had excellent ratings from universities who are doing turfgrass research. They have no financial interest in the sale of these new grasses.

One of these grasses is BenSun (A-34) Kentucky Bluegrass which outranks all other bluegrasses in most of the categories studied and tested. For example:

BenSun (A-34) is rated the most shade tolerant of any bluegrass.

BenSun (A-34) is the only grass to receive an excellent rating for wear tolerance.

BenSun (A-34) is rated near the top in disease resistance.

BenSun (A-34) has been under observation for twenty-five years and has been performance proven on hundreds of thousands of lawns, athletic fields and golf courses for the past eighteen years. No other recent bluegrass development has had such a long experience of successful ratings and performance.

BenSun (A-34) thrives in hot and cold climates, high and low altitudes and does well on good or poor soil.

BenSun (A-34) is the most hardy bluegrass available. When injured it springs back quickly, healing the injury in a very short time.

BenSun (A-34) was the only grass to remain green during the recent drought in England, Scotland and France. Tees at St. Andrews Golf course planted with BenSun (A-34) remained green even when not watered regularly.

So why wait . . . do it now and enjoy the rest of the summer doing the things you and your family enjoy most. Simple maintenance instructions your Landscape Contractor and Garden Supply Dealer will provide, will keep your home looking beautiful for many years.

If you want to do the work yourself, contract the Landscape Contractor or Garden Supply Dealer of your choice and purchase your sod and landscaping from him. Warren's Turf Nursery, Inc. will finance your new lawn and landscaping.

Perezes' arrests legal: judge

The judge in the Alfred Dinverno murder trial Wednesday ruled that two men charged with the crime were arrested legally.

"The testimony heard leads the court to believe that probable cause to arrest existed," said Judge Brian B. Duff of the Cook County Circuit Court.

George Lynch, attorney for defendants Antonio Perez and Arthur Perez, who are not related, charged that the pair had been arrested illegaly and that evidence had been seized illegally from them after their booking for the 1975 murder of Dinverno, a Palatine Township resident.

LYNCH ALSO contended that telephone conversations overheard by an informant, whic provided the basis informant. which provided the basis eavesdropping and therefore were illegal.

Lynch had sought to keep from being introduced as evidence a diamond ring that had belonged to Dinverno that Arthur Perez was wearing at the time of his arrest and address books containing the names of a state witness.

Duff refused to suppress the ring but agreed to withhold from evidence the address books.

"Probably cause for arrest existed partly because of the existence of the ring on Arthur Perez' hand," Duff said during the pretrial hearing. "The court finds that while the ring in question was in sight, the address books taken from them were not and they will be suppressed."

Attorneys for both sides today will argue a defense motion to suppress from evidence statements made by the defendants after their arrest.

The defendants contend the statements were involuntary because of "either physical or mental abuse" by police and state's attorneys.

Jury selection in the case is expected to begin Friday.

Woman and her Ferrari to be parked forever

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — A wealthy California woman will be buried Friday dressed in her lace nightgown and seated in the 1964 blue Ferrari automobile she loved, a funeral home director said Wednesday.

Porter Loring Jr. said the burial of millionairess Sandra Ilene West, 37, of Beverly Hills would take place 9 a.m. Friday at the Alamo Masonic Cemetery.

"We are anxious that she be buried in as dignified and discreet a manner as possible," Loring said. "Every effort will be made to make this as unsensational as possible."

A LOS ANGELES court had ordered Loring to carry out the desires of Mrs. West — that she be buried in a large grave next to her late husband, "in a lace nightgown which now clothes her remains in the driver's seat of her blue 1964 Ferrari automobile, the seat slanted comfortably and duly adjusted to accommodate such remains."

The California court, however, ordered the luxury car be encased in a large crate to preserve dignity. The funeral home has taken precautions to keep its preparation of the body from public view. Loring said security would be provided at the cemetery.

Mrs. West was a student of Egyptology and the practice of burying Egyptian kings with their worldly possessions.

She left a handwritten will leaving most of her fortune, valued at $2.5 million to $5 million to her brother-in-law, Sol West of Comfrot, Tex., providing he carry out her burial request.

SHE ALSO LEFT another, more formal will, leaving the bulk of the estate to San Antonio attorney Fred Semaan, who described himself as a confidant of the dead woman.

A court hearing is scheduled in Los Angeles to determine which of the wills to honor in dividing the estate.

Mrs. West died March 10 from injuries suffered in a 1976 traffic accident. Cause of her death was not officially declared.

George Lynch, attorney for defendants Antonio Perez and Arthur Perez, who are not related, charged that the pair had been arrested illegaly and that evidence had been seized illegally from them after their booking for the 1975 murder of Dinverno, a Palatine Township resident.

LYNCH ALSO contended that telephone conversations overheard by an informant, whic provided the basis informant. which provided the basis eavesdropping and therefore were illegal.

Lynch had sought to keep from being introduced as evidence a diamond ring that had belonged to Dinverno that Arthur Perez was wearing at the time of his arrest and address books containing the names of a state witness.

Duff refused to suppress the ring but agreed to withhold from evidence the address books.

"Probably cause for arrest existed partly because of the existence of the ring on Arthur Perez' hand," Duff said during the pretrial hearing. "The court finds that while the ring in question was in sight, the address books taken from them were not and they will be suppressed."

Attorneys for both sides today will argue a defense motion to suppress from evidence statements made by the defendants after their arrest.

The defendants contend the statements were involuntary because of "either physical or mental abuse" by police and state's attorneys.

Jury selection in the case is expected to begin Friday.

Woman and her Ferrari to be parked forever

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — A wealthy California woman will be buried Friday dressed in her lace nightgown and seated in the 1964 blue Ferrari automobile she loved, a funeral home director said Wednesday.

Porter Loring Jr. said the burial of millionairess Sandra Ilene West, 37, of Beverly Hills would take place 9 a.m. Friday at the Alamo Masonic Cemetery.

"We are anxious that she be buried in as dignified and discreet a manner as possible," Loring said. "Every effort will be made to make this as unsensational as possible."

A LOS ANGELES court had ordered Loring to carry out the desires of Mrs. West — that she be buried in a large grave next to her late husband, "in a lace nightgown which now clothes her remains in the driver's seat of her blue 1964 Ferrari automobile, the seat slanted comfortably and duly adjusted to accommodate such remains."

The California court, however, ordered the luxury car be encased in a large crate to preserve dignity. The funeral home has taken precautions to keep its preparation of the body from public view. Loring said security would be provided at the cemetery.

Mrs. West was a student of Egyptology and the practice of burying Egyptian kings with their worldly possessions.

She left a handwritten will leaving most of her fortune, valued at $2.5 million to $5 million to her brother-in-law, Sol West of Comfrot, Tex., providing he carry out her burial request.

SHE ALSO LEFT another, more formal will, leaving the bulk of the estate to San Antonio attorney Fred Semaan, who described himself as a confidant of the dead woman.

A court hearing is scheduled in Los Angeles to determine which of the wills to honor in dividing the estate.

Mrs. West died March 10 from injuries suffered in a 1976 traffic accident. Cause of her death was not officially declared.

Low-income families sought for rent subsidies

The Northwest Opportunity Center, Arlington Heights, is seeking low-income families eligihle for apartment rent subsidies in the Northwest suburbs.

In two months, the Opportunity Center has used only 60 of the 125 apartment units allocated to it by the Cook County Housing Authority, Michael Al Raimondi, center director, said Tuesday.

"We've advertised the (rent subsidy) program with our clients as much as possible and we've still got about 65 units available to assist people," Raimondi said.

THE OPPORTUNITY Center does not assign families to apartments, but rather helps them fill out applications for the Cook County Housing Authority which administers the program.

"The housing authority has selected the Opportunity Center to act as a conduit for the rent subsidy program in the Northwest suburban area," Raimondi said. "Most of the people who could use the program already live or work in the area."

The rent subsidy plan is called Section 8 and it pays 75 to 85 per cent of the fair market rent. Landlord participation is voluntary.

"WE ASSUME THAT all, or most of the people who have applied for Section 8 have found housing because we have not heard back from them," he said.

The maximum rents which can be subsidized are $175 for a studio, $199 for a one-bedroom, $234 for a two-bedroom, $271 for a three-bedroom and $306 for a four or more bedroom apartment in a non-elevator building.

In an elevator building the maximum rents are $193 for a studio, $219 for a one-bedroom, $258 for a two-bedroom, $297 for a three-bedroom and $337 for a four or more bedroom apartment.

Low-and moderate-income singles, families and senior citizens can apply for the rent subsidy if they are within the following income limits:

One person $9,900; 2 persons $11,300; 3 persons $12,800. 4 persons $14,200; 5 persons $15,100; 6 persons $16,000; 7 persons $16,900 and 8 persons $17,800.

Persons who want to know more about the plan can call Tom Manning at the Opportunity Center, 255-3456.

H.C. PADDOCK, 1852 - 1935

Ditch Day: it's all in good fun

Life is full of reminders of how complex society has become. Life also is full of reminders of how bureaucracy can foul up a good thing.

The most recent example of both tenets can be found in the eight-day suspensions meted out to four Hoffman Estates High School students who were fingered as the "ring leaders" of the annual Senior Ditch Day.

Much like pranks at Halloween and turning on fire hydrants on a scorching summer day, modern society has come to accept high school seniors skipping classes for a day to celebrate having endured four more years of education.

Principal Thomas Hillesheim and three members of the High School District 211 board refused to accept this tradition.

Hillesheim handed out the suspension and board members Jody Albrecht, Anna Countryman and Robert Seger upheld the decision.

The seniors fooled the school administration this year and an estimated 180 seniors ditched class.

Possibly Hillesheim was embarrassed because the seniors were able to ditch without him learning about it.

He clearly overreacted. When cooler heads, like District Supt. Richard Kolze and the school board could have injected a bit of rationality into the incident, they failed to do so.

Hillesheim contends that the penalties were severe because the students violated privacy laws by using telephone lists that included unlisted phone numbers.

That sounds like the voice of a good bureaucrat, but it certainly does not justify eight-day suspensions. Several other area high school principals said suspensions are not handed out for ditch days at their schools.

What might be the ultimate absurdity of the situation was added by the school's police consultant Dave Nurczyk, who stated the district's standard policy for possession or smoking of marijuana in the schools is a three-day suspension.

Serious conduct violations or criminal behavior cannot be condoned and should be dealt with harshly, but the response to this victimless incident will do nothing more than create ill will and hard feelings throughout the community.

Hillesheim, Kolze and the school board should rethink their position, which has blemished the record of several honor students, and remove the suspensions.

Anything less can only serve to harden the lines between school officials and students — a line which already is too firmly drawn.

O'Hare area beware

Northwest suburban residents should cast a wary eye toward New York's Kennedy Airport, where residents of the neighboring Queens borough have been protesting approval by the government of landings by the controversial Concorde supersonic jet.

Residents tied up a freeway last week and plan another demonstration Sunday to publicize their opposition to the racket the Concorde will bring to their neighborhoods.

The Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which operates the airport, had refused permission for the plane to land, but a U.S district judge ruled it could not ban the craft. Two air lines flying Concorde announced immediately they would use Kennedy.

Congress killed subsidies for development of an American supersonic passenger jet because of the potential environmental damage; now Britain and France, which went ahead with the Concorde, are trying to make their venture profitable by tapping into the American market.

Once the dust settles at Kennedy, can anyone doubt that efforts will be made to bring the craft to O'Hare and other international airports?

Berry's world

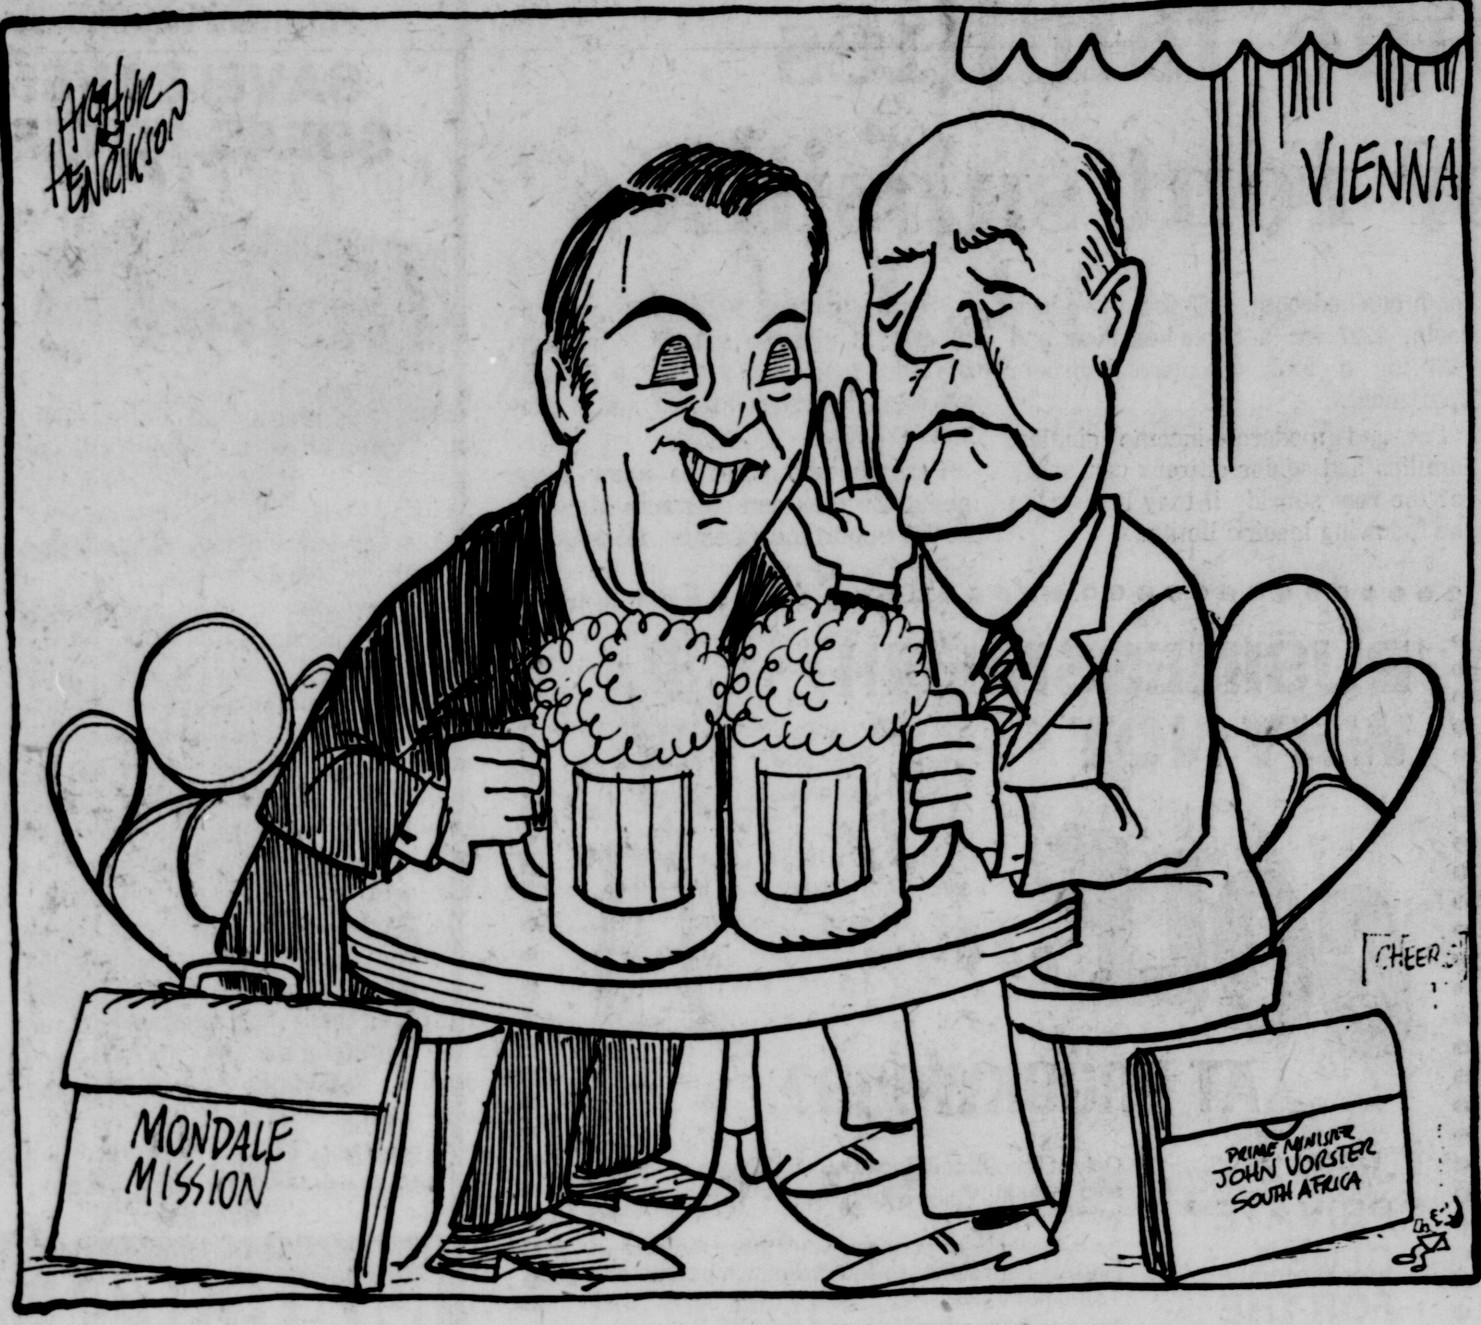
"Just think! If we'd been on the Concorde, we'd be home by now!"



Mr. Vorster, I bring you greetings from Andy Young!

'8-day suspension unfair'

Two years ago this month, I was a senior at Arlington High School. I was active in student activities and graduated in the top 3 per cent of my class. But before I was graduated, I participated in that harmless activity known as "Senior Ditch Day." I had never cut a day of school in four years, and for cutting school that day, I sat in detention study hall the following day for seven hours with the other seniors who ditched.

All of these activities were brought to mind by the article in the Saturday, May 14, Herald about "Ditch Day." Aside from the completely unfair eight-day suspensions given to the "organizers" at Hoffman Estates High School, there were statements in the story which aren't true and need to be corrected.

First, having parents call with an excuse, or even calling and telling the truth does no good. My mother called Arlington's office, and I served detention (missing another whole day of classes) along with kids whose parents didn't call. Our penalties certainly weren't "a visit to the dean to an after-school detention."

SECONDLY, IT was grossly unfair for students to be singled out as "organizers" at Hoffman Estates. Ask any high school student who has gone through area high schools and they will tell you that the date is spread by word of mouth and it is just mutually agreed upon. No one organizes "Ditch Day."

Also, at Arlington, there was no disruption following up on all of us who had cut the day we all came back. The secretaries conveniently had our detention slips already written up, and we stood in orderly lines for about 30 minutes to receive our punishments.

Finally, the bottom line on the protests against "Ditch Day" wasn't mentioned in the story by any of the principals interviewed, yet it was made clear to us why we were all slapped with detentions. The school lost state aid for every one of us who wasn't in school that day. The major reason for the abolition of "Ditch Day" is money, yet no one had the courage to tell the whole truth.

Elida S. Witthoef
Arlington Heights

Your May 14th front page article stirs me to respond with this parent's point of view about senior ditch day.

I definitely disagree with the eight-day suspension given to those honor roll students.

My son joined senior ditch day at Maine West — and he did it with my blessing and approval, on one condition only. That when I called in for him to report his absence I told the truth about what he was doing.

I FELT THAT to lie would not set a very good example. I also wanted the school to know that I approved. The boy had always been an honor roll student, had been conscientious all these years in attendance and studying and had never played "hookey." So why not one day off at the end — especially since it was with my knowledge and approval?

Granted the school loses money each day on each student who isn't there. But how much do they lose on those chronic habitual absentees that they have put up with for the last four years? Which student was the trouble maker? Which one got the eight days suspension? Which ones learned honorable values when their parents called-in-sick for them?

And speaking of honorable, my admiration goes to Chris Sebastiani for her honesty. Thank you, Chris, for a quality that's seen all too rarely these days.

'ERA a moral breakdown'

If it worked in Indiana — paying young people to write letters in behalf of ERA, and illegally signing them with names taken from phone books — why not in Illinois? Attention, legislators when you receive batches of letters pro-ERA. Perhaps you could do some spot checking.

Let us sincerely hope there is no connection between the mass exodus on senior ditch day (at Hoffman High) May 9, and/or the "free" day Conant students received May 13, both schools located in Hoffman Estates.

When the proponents of ERA threaten to force out legislators in states which do not ratify, and even stoop to telling people where to, or not to, spend their vacations — based on the same reasoning, it is time to call a halt.

Money means power, and power means responsibility to others than one's self. Do women really want to turn around and do the same things that caused them to object to their own positions? ... Arm-twisting, cheating, making sure those of opposing views do not receive employment. Wake up America — are we going to accept a complete moral breakdown as a way of life?

Soviet energy gun story scary topic

Aviation Week and Space Technology magazine now has publicized what could be the scariest story of the year — that the Soviet Union has made a breakthrough in the development of an energy gun that could stop any missile attack. But Jimmy Carter is still ho-humming the subject: "We have no evidence . . . that the Soviets have achieved any major breakthrough in the kind of weapon described. I think that is . . . a report that is based on some inaccuracies."

Aviation Week now has replied in good temper, and with some documentation, that "it is apparent from (the President's) response that his acquaintance with the subject is extremely recent and his initial briefers were less than complete. President Carter's briefers did not tell him that an Aviation Week story had been offered to the appropriate Pentagon officials for review for both accuracy and security well before publication. Some changes were requested by the Pentagon on security and some, but not all, were made. None was requested on accuracy."

One hopes there is some more assuring explanation for the President's complacence other than a lack of interest or knowledge. Perhaps the new weapon is being developed in this country, too, and the President doesn't want to tip his hand.

MEANWHILE, over at the Pentagon, all is business as usual. A spokesman there dismissed the magazine's account of a Soviet energy gun that could checkmate this country's strategic doctrine. He said it was only "a remote possibility." Like Sputnik?

The Pentagon's general attitude on the possibility of such a charged-particle ray able to bring down attacking missiles calls to mind a famous statement from Ernest Rutherford, the distinguished British physicist, before he died in 1937.

"The energy produced by the breaking down of the atom is a very poor kind of thing. Anyone who expects a source of power from the transformation of the atom is talking moonshine." My second favorite quote from Lord Rutherford is his answer when Stephen Leacock asked him what he thought of Einstein's theory of relativity. Replied Dr. Rutherford: "Oh, that stuff. We never bother with that in our work."

One hopes that the Pentagon's reaction to the news of a Russian energy gun isn't just another Rutherfordism. If the Russians are as far along in testing as Aviation Week contends, the world will find out soon enough. The possession of such a weapon may be signaled by a crisis provoked at an early date and then the unveiling of the Soviet breakthrough in the most intimidating way. In that case, the Soviets' energy gun won't be the scariest story of the year but of the era.

Airlines' major problem is post-crash survival

Martha Angle and Robert Walters

In Washington

WASHINGTON — In the middle of a recently released government report is a sentence which unfortunately has been the epitaph for hundreds of people involved in airline accidents in recent years: "Many of the occupants survived the impact only to die in the post-crash fire."

That startling statement comes from a report on "U.S. Air Carrier Accidents Involving Fire," a document which went virtually unnoticed when it was made public earlier this year by the National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB), the federal agency which conducts the official government investigation of all major air accidents.

As recently as the early 1960s, untested technology, inexperienced personnel and inadequate safety systems made commercial aviation an accident-prone business.

But that situation changed drastically during the past decade. The arrival of the "jet age" brought turbine-powered engines with a far lower failure rate than the piston-driven engines of earlier propeller aircraft.

Those more reliable aircraft were flown and maintained by more experienced personnel. At the same time, sophisticated radar and computer technology brought an unprecedented degree of precision to the task of air traffic control.

THE RESULT has been the virtual disappearance of the mid-air collision between two planes or the mid-flight disintegration of an airliner — accidents in which the force of impact invariably resulted in the instant death of all aboard.

Today's typical accident occurs on takeoff or landing. Passengers often survive the crash itself, only to perish because they cannot escape from the fire, smoke and fumes inside the plane.

Jets use a kerosene-based fuel which is far less flammable than the gasoline consumed by piston-driven engines — a major change which should have reduced post-crash fires. But the NTSB study found that fire as an element in airline accidents rose from 18.6 per cent during the 1955-64 decade to 25.3 per cent during the 1965-74 decade.

Although the NTSB has the authority to investigate all major air crashes and report on their causes, it can only recommend improved safety measures to the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA), which regulates airline safety.

BUT THE FAA has been transfixed for years with the problem of "air-worthiness" while ignoring "crash-worthiness" at a time when post-crash survivability has become the major safety problem in the industry.

In low-key bureaucratic language The NTSB report notes that the FAA has done little more than drag its feet in dealing with the situation.

For instance, aircraft passenger cabins are constructed almost exclusively of synthetic materials which emit not only dense smoke but also carbon monoxide and cyanide when ignited. Planes manufactured in the early or mid 1960s can be flown today with passenger compartment materials which comply with FAA flammability requirements dating back as far as 1948, the NTSB report points out.

In late 1974 and early 1975, the FAA proposed a trio of new safety standards to cut down on toxic fumes, dense smoke and other often fatal effects of post-crash fires — but during the more than two years which have ensued, the regulations have remained in draft form and unenforced.

A fundamental cause of that dawdling lies in the fact that the FAA, like so many federal agencies which have come to be dominated by the industries they are supposed to regulate, places a higher premium on maintaining good relations with the manufacturers and operators of passenger planes than on protecting the people carried on those planes.

The FAA belatedly has scheduled public hearings on post-crash survivability, to be held next month in Washington. But the agency no longer can justify any further delays in dealing with a situation where countless lives are at stake.

Ditch Day: it's all in good fun

Life is full of reminders of how complex society has become. Life also is full of reminders of how bureaucracy can foul up a good thing.

The most recent example of both tenets can be found in the eight-day suspensions meted out to four Hoffman Estates High School students who were fingered as the "ring leaders" of the annual Senior Ditch Day.

Much like pranks at Halloween and turning on fire hydrants on a scorching summer day, modern society has come to accept high school seniors skipping classes for a day to celebrate having endured four more years of education.

Principal Thomas Hillesheim and three members of the High School District 211 board refused to accept this tradition.

Hillesheim handed out the suspension and board members Jody Albrecht, Anna Countryman and Robert Seger upheld the decision.

The seniors fooled the school administration this year and an estimated 180 seniors ditched class.

Possibly Hillesheim was embarrassed because the seniors were able to ditch without him learning about it.

He clearly overreacted. When cooler heads, like District Supt. Richard Kolze and the school board could have injected a bit of rationality into the incident, they failed to do so.

Hillesheim contends that the penalties were severe because the students violated privacy laws by using telephone lists that included unlisted phone numbers.

That sounds like the voice of a good bureaucrat, but it certainly does not justify eight-day suspensions. Several other area high school principals said suspensions are not handed out for ditch days at their schools.

What might be the ultimate absurdity of the situation was added by the school's police consultant Dave Nurczyk, who stated the district's standard policy for possession or smoking of marijuana in the schools is a three-day suspension.

Serious conduct violations or criminal behavior cannot be condoned and should be dealt with harshly, but the response to this victimless incident will do nothing more than create ill will and hard feelings throughout the community.

Hillesheim, Kolze and the school board should rethink their position, which has blemished the record of several honor students, and remove the suspensions.

Anything less can only serve to harden the lines between school officials and students — a line which already is too firmly drawn.

O'Hare area beware

Northwest suburban residents should cast a wary eye toward New York's Kennedy Airport, where residents of the neighboring Queens borough have been protesting approval by the government of landings by the controversial Concorde supersonic jet.

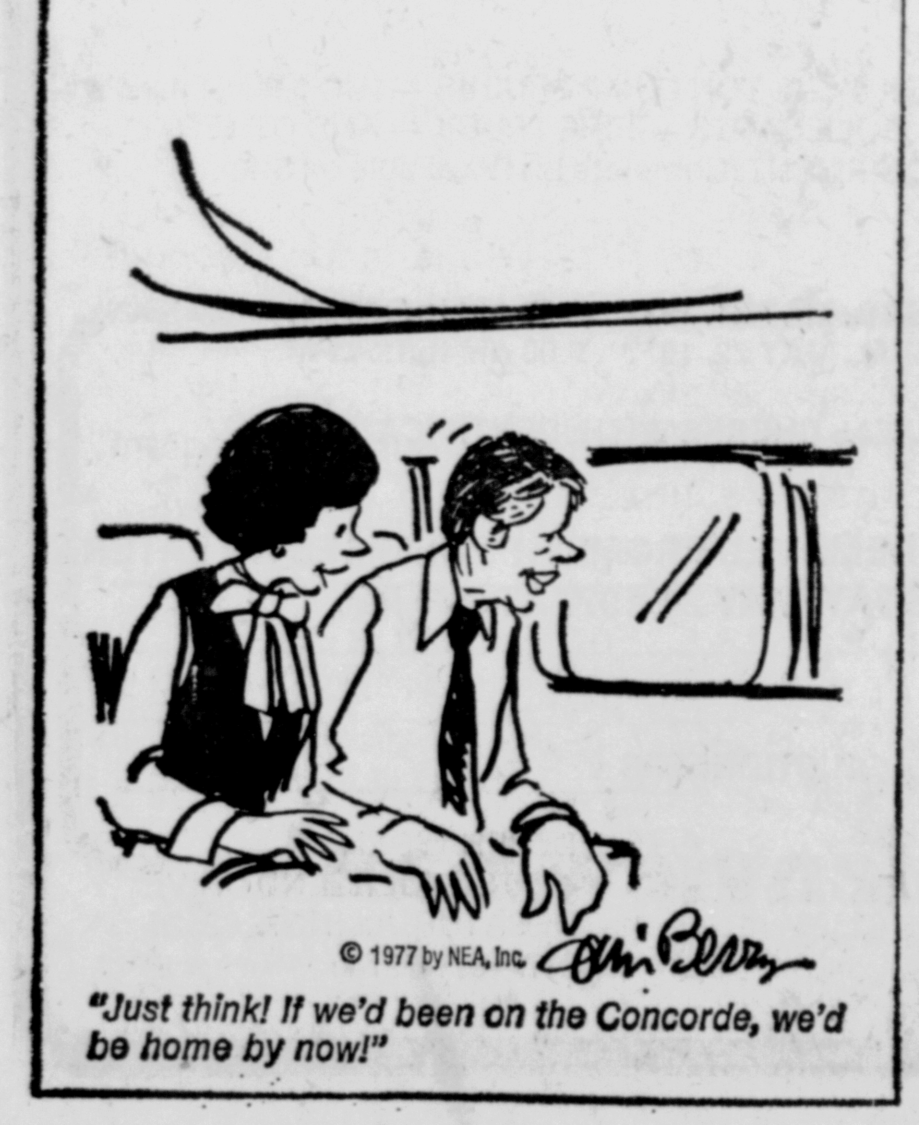
Residents tied up a freeway last week and plan another demonstration Sunday to publicize their opposition to the racket the Concorde will bring to their neighborhoods.

The Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which operates the airport, had refused permission for the plane to land, but a U.S district judge ruled it could not ban the craft. Two air lines flying Concorde announced immediately they would use Kennedy.

Congress killed subsidies for development of an American supersonic passenger jet because of the potential environmental damage; now Britain and France, which went ahead with the Concorde, are trying to make their venture profitable by tapping into the American market.

Once the dust settles at Kennedy, can anyone doubt that efforts will be made to bring the craft to O'Hare and other international airports?

Berry's world



"Just think! If we'd been on the Concorde, we'd be home by now!"

Two years ago this month, I was a senior at Arlington High School. I was active in student activities and graduated in the top 3 per cent of my class. But before I was graduated, I participated in that harmless activity known as "Senior Ditch Day." I had never cut a day of school in four years, and for cutting school that day, I sat in detention study hall the following day for seven hours with the other seniors who ditched.

All of these activities were brought to mind by the article in the Saturday, May 14, Herald about "Ditch Day." Aside from the completely unfair eight-day suspensions given to the "organizers" at Hoffman Estates High School, there were statements in the story which aren't true and need to be corrected.

First, having parents call with an excuse, or even calling and telling the truth does no good. My mother called Arlington's office, and I served detention (missing another whole day of classes) along with kids whose parents didn't call. Our penalties certainly weren't "a visit to the dean to an after-school detention."

SECONDLY, IT was grossly unfair for students to be singled out as "organizers" at Hoffman Estates. Ask any high school student who has gone through area high schools and they will tell you that the date is spread by word of mouth and it is just mutually agreed upon. No one organizes "Ditch Day."

Also, at Arlington, there was no disruption following up on all of us who had cut the day we all came back. The secretaries conveniently had our detention slips already written up, and we stood in orderly lines for about 30 minutes to receive our punishments.

Finally, the bottom line on the protests against "Ditch Day" wasn't mentioned in the story by any of the principals interviewed, yet it was made clear to us why we were all slapped with detentions. The school lost state aid for every one of us who wasn't in school that day. The major reason for the abolition of "Ditch Day" is money, yet no one had the courage to tell the whole truth.

The not so poor vending machines just love to be nickeled and dimed

SNACK FOODS, sandwiches and other eatables are placed in a vending machine by Joan Beirau of Cockrell Food and Vending Services.

Some people kick them.

One angry Northwest suburban company president took aim and shot one. They have been cussed, battered and generally malinged by people who just don't understand the ways of the vending machine.

It isn't easy to please all the customers, say members of the Illinois Automatic Merchandising Council. That's why they've coined the slogan, "We're with you" for Illinois Automatic Merchandising Week, which ends Friday.

"DON'T SHOOT US. We'll give you your money back," was the response from Cockrell Food & Vending Services, Inc., in Schaumburg, after the shooting incident a few years ago, recalls Cockrell's vice president of operations Gino Dal Cerro. He still has a can with a slug lodged inside as a memento of the occasion.

As president of the Illinois Automatic Merchandising Council, Dal Cerro sees the need for increased consumer understanding of the industry. Sometimes it's hard for customers to figure why the vending machine prices for coffee, candy, and just about everything else, continue to climb, he said.

"We've been nickeled and dimed in every area," Dal Cerro said. Just as the days of the 15 cent candy bar are in the past, the prospects are no brighter for the industry's mainstay: coffee.

Twenty and 25 cent per cup coffee prices are commonplace in Chicago area vending machines. Dal Cerro says a vending operator would have to charge 30 to 35 cents to make a decent profit margin on coffee sales, "but I don't think the public will put up with it."

ALTHOUGH THE long-term outlook for the vending industry is good, Dal Cerro says, executives will have to take a new look at their pricing system to stay in business.

That means customrs will pay more for food and other items which traditionally were subsidized by profits on coffee sales. The most recent figures for vending machines sales in Illinois showd $529,124,000 in 1975 sales, he said, predicting a 6 to 8 per cent annual increase.

Dal Cerro said a new, scaled-down version of the dollar coin would be a boon to the industry. Dollar bill changers could be eliminated, and coin-counting machines could replace the time consuming task of counting dollar bills.

Dal Cerro's call for a revamped dollar coin is seconded by Larry Bernier, president of the Vending Consultants, Inc. division of Autoviable Services, Inc., 600 Bonnie Lane, Elk Grove Village.

"One of the problems this industry has always faced, and more so with today's inflation, is being unable to raise prices in anything but nickel increments," Bernier said. This nickel-a-clip price increase turns some customers away from vending machine purchases, he says.

"SOME PEOPLE in our industry have advocated a 2½ cent coin. That would give us more flexibility," Bernier said. "If we could charge 22½ cents for coffee it wouldn't be as bad as 25 cents." Although he offers "cautious optimism" for the vending industry, Bernier notes coffee price hikes have cut profit margins. Coffee accounts for 35 per cent of his sales.

Like other vending operators, Don Hesch of AH Entertiners Inc., 1151 Rohlwing Rd., Rolling Meadows, noted his customers are more choosy when the prices start to rise. Food and beverage offerings tailored to individual accounts' needs and a general increase in Chicago area employment have contributed to sales "ahead of last year," Hesch said.

Fraser elected UAW president

To the strains of "Solidarity Forever" and the skirling of bagpipes, the 1.4-million member United Auto Workers union Wednesday elected Douglas A. Fraser as the third postwar president of the nation's largest independent industrial labor union. Fraser promised to carry on the liberal-progressive traditions of two predecessors, the late Walter P. Reuther and retiring president Leonard Woodcock. What had been expected to be an election by acclamation of the 2,786 voting delegates to the union's 25th Constitutional Convention in Los Angeles was delayed when a local leader from Dearborn, Mich., Henry "Hank" Wilson, nominated himself as an opponent to Fraser.

Blue Shield reduces payments

The Blue Shield Assn. said Wednesday it will stop routine payment for 28 medical procedures which cost subscribers $27.4 million a year. Blue Shield President William Ryan said the company will pay for the 28 procedures when physicians can prove a clear need for them. But he said the 18 surgical procedures and 10 diagnostic procedures will not be approved routinely. "The point of this program is to encourage medical professionals to think about the costs of the procedures they order," Ryan said. Among the procedures to be discontinued are the basal metabolic rate and protein bound iodine tests; removal of carotid tumors; two kinds of interruption of portions of the sympathetic nerves in the back to treat hypertension; one type of hemorrhoid removal surgery; and fixation or suspension of a floating kidney.

Average home price hits $51,600

Americans paid an average price of $51,600 to buy a new home during the first three months of this year — 38 per cent more than they did three years ago, the government said Wednesday. It was the first time ever that the average cost of new homes went above the $50,000 level, according to a quarterly survey conducted by the Census Bureau and the Dept. of Housing and Urban Development. The $51,600 average price of a new home during the January-March quarter was 5.3 per cent above the final three months of 1976, about double the rate of increase in any three month period since the first quarter of 1975, the study said.

'Good terms with allies U.S. goal'

The Carter administration will aim for good relations with traditional U.S. allies and tough bargaining with the Soviets and Chinese, according to Chicago attorney and columnist Alex Seith. Coordinated economic policies will be important with allies in Europe and other nations — a foreign policy that is "American in the old sense," Seith told executives at a Wednesday Elk Grove Assn. of Industry and Commerce meeting in Elk Grove Village. Seith write a syndicated column on foreign relations. He is a partner in the Chicago law firm of Lord, Bissell & Brook and serves as chairman of the county zoning board of appeals. "It's going to be go-slow time in our relations with China," Seith said, noting that internal political struggles face the Far East nation. Seith, a member of the presidential advisory board on ambassadorial appointments, believes that the nomination of retiring United Auto Workers president Leonard Woodcock as chief liaision officer in China will be well-received there.

Energy plan urged to be scrapped

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce suggested Wednesday that President Carter's energy plan be scrapped in favor of an end to price controls on oil and new natural gas, new environmental laws, less regulation and more leasing of federal lands for energy resources. The proposal was greeted with a barrage of criticism from some Democrats on the House Ways and Means Committee. "We believe there is an alternative approach to the energy crisis," said chamber president Richard Lesher in testimony to the committee in the third day of hearings on President Carter's energy plan.

Woolworth's to ban Tris clothes

The F. W. Woolworth Co., in the face of a federal government suit, is ordering its stores to remove all Tris-treated clothing from market shelves. Tris, a fire retardant chemical used on children's sleepwear, has been shown to cause cancer in laboratory animals. The Consumer Product Safety Commission banned Tris-treated clothing April 7. Woolworth's order, delivered the same day the Justice Dept. filed suit in New York against the retailer for continuing to sell the Tris-treated sleepwear, was the second notification given its outlets, the company said.

Old age, ideas no longer face oblivion here

NEW YORK — In the American economy, the two greatest crimes traditionally have been to be old and to be old-fashioned.

The feeling here is that clemency is about to be granted for both these terrible offenses.

The distaste for age always has been the dark underside of the American obsession with youth. Personally, the ultimate American accolade is to tell a person that he or she looks younger than the calendar would suggest; publicly, we casually consign our most experienced citizens to the economic discard pile, insisting on compulsory retirement and then penalizing those who keep on producing.

Louis Rukeyser

ONE OF THE central facts about the next generation of American life is that it will be an older generation. People are living longer and reproducing less. The implications of this run right through the economy — bad for manufacturers of disposable diapers and jungle gyms, good for salesmen of travel, leisure and other activities aimed at the more mature.

Okay, then, so we may be moving into a world where older Americans will no longer have to hang their heads and hide the birthday candles. But what does that have to do with absolving the second great American crime: to be old-fashioned? After all, even the most ancient among us likes to be told that he or she thinks young.

Fair enough. What I am suggesting is not that we are heading into an era of closed-mindedness, but that we are no longer going to be quite so apt to buy bad ideas because they are presented as new.

Take the polemical efforts of John Kenneth Galbraith, who through the ever lengthening decades invariably has attempted to portray himself as the Thoroughly Modern Millie of American economics. To criticize his proposals was, by his definition, to unmask oneself as a refugee from another era entirely.

THE GALBRAITHIAN slur is no longer going to work very well in this country — because the average American is less concerned with labels than with results.

Those like Galbraith who forever want to substitute their own judgment for that of the uncontrolled marketplace might more properly be consigned intellectually to a much earlier, and less remarkable, century — to the Middle Ages, perhaps, when it was accepted naturally that freedom of choice was much too dangerous to be left to the masses.

But in the long run, the suspicion here that we are going to reject all name-calling and simply recognize that we have been missing the major bet by under-utilizing the old — in human flesh and in ideas, alike. That will not make us truly "old-fashioned," but it might make us truly mature.

The not so poor vending machines just love to be nickeled and dimed

SNACK FOODS, sandwiches and other eatables are placed in a vending machine by Joan Beirau of Cockrell Food and Vending Services.

Some people kick them.

One angry Northwest suburban company president took aim and shot one· They have been cussed, battered and generally malinged by people who just don't understand the ways of the vending machine.

It isn't easy to please all the customers, say members of the Illinois Automatic Merchandising Council. That's why they've coined the slogan, "We're with you" for Illinois Automatic Merchandising Week, which ends Friday.

"DON'T SHOOT US. We'll give you your money back," was the response from Cockrell Food & Vending Services, Inc., in Schaumburg, after the shooting incident a few years ago, recalls Cockrell's vice president of operations Gino Dal Cerro. He still has a can with a slug lodged inside as a memento of the occasion.

As president of the Illinois Automatic Merchandising Council, Dal Cerro sees the need for increased consumer understanding of the industry. Sometimes it's hard for customers to figure why the vending machine prices for coffee, candy, and just about everything else, continue to climb, he said.

"We've been nickeled and dimed in every area," Dal Cerro said. Just as the days of the 15 cent candy bar are in the past, the prospects are no brighter for the industry's mainstay: coffee.

Twenty and 25 cent per cup coffee prices are commonplace in Chicago area vending machines. Dal Cerro says a vending operator would have to charge 30 to 35 cents to make a decent profit margin on coffee sales, "but I don't think the public will put up with it."

ALTHOUGH THE long-term outlook for the vending industry is good, Dal Cerro says, executives will have to take a new look at their pricing system to stay in business.

That means customrs will pay more for food and other items which traditionally were subsidized by profits on coffee sales. The most recent figures for vending machines sales in Illinois showd $529,124,000 in 1975 sales, he said, predicting a 6 to 8 per cent annual increase.

Dal Cerro said a new, scaled-down version of the dollar coin would be a boon to the industry. Dollar bill changers could be eliminated, and coin-counting machines could replace the time consuming task of counting dollar bills.

Dal Cerro's call for a revamped dollar coin is seconded by Larry Bernier, president of the Vending Consultants, Inc. division of Autoviable Services, Inc., 600 Bonnie Lane, Elk Grove Village.

"One of the problems this industry has always faced, and more so with today's inflation, is being unable to raise prices in anything but nickel increments," Bernier said· This nickel-a-clip price increase turns some customers away from vending machine purchases, he says.

"SOME PEOPLE in our industry have advocated a 2½ cent coin. That would give us more flexibility," Bernier said. "If we could charge 22½ cents for coffee it wouldn't be as bad as 25 cents." Although he offers "cautious optimism" for the vending industry, Bernier notes coffee price hikes have cut profit margins. Coffee accounts for 35 per cent of his sales.

Like other vending operators, Don Hesch of AH Entertiners Inc., 1151 Rohlwing Rd., Rolling Meadows, noted his customers are more choosy when the prices start to rise. Food and beverage offerings tailored to individual accounts' needs and a general increase in Chicago area employment have contributed to sales "ahead of last year," Hesch said.

Business briefs

Fraser elected UAW president

To the strains of "Solidarity Forever" and the skirling of bagpipes, the 1.4-million member United Auto Workers union Wednesday elected Douglas A. Fraser as the third postwar president of the nation's largest independent industrial labor union. Fraser promised to carry on the liberal-progressive traditions of two predecessors, the late Walter P. Reuther and retiring president Leonard Woodcock. What had been expected to be an election by acclamation of the 2,786 voting delegates to the union's 25th Constitutional Convention in Los Angeles was delayed when a local leader from Dearborn, Mich., Henry "Hank" Wilson, nominated himself as an opponent to Fraser.

Blue Shield reduces payments

The Blue Shield Assn. said Wednesday it will stop routine payment for 28 medical procedures which cost subscribers $27.4 million a year. Blue Shield President William Ryan said the company will pay for the 28 procedures when physicians can prove a clear need for them. But he said the 18 surgical procedures and 10 diagnostic procedures will not be approved routinely. "The point of this program is to encourage medical professionals to think about the costs of the procedures they order," Ryan said. Among the procedures to be discontinued are the basal metabolic rate and protein bound iodine tests; removal of carotid tumors; two kinds of interruption of portions of the sympathetic nerves in the back to treat hypertension; one type of hemorrhoid removal surgery; and fixation or suspension of a floating kidney.

Average home price hits $51,600

Americans paid an average price of $51,600 to buy a new home during the first three months of this year — 38 per cent more than they did three years ago, the government said Wednesday. It was the first time ever that the average cost of new homes went above the $50,000 level, according to a quarterly survey conducted by the Census Bureau and the Dept. of Housing and Urban Development. The $51,600 average price of a new home during the January-March quarter was 5.3 per cent above the final three months of 1976, about double the rate of increase in any three month period since the first quarter of 1975, the study said.

'Good terms with allies U.S. goal'

The Carter administration will aim for good relations with traditional U.S. allies and tough bargaining with the Soviets and Chinese, according to Chicago attorney and columnist Alex Seith. Coordinated economic policies will be important with allies in Europe and other nations — a foreign policy that is "American in the old sense," Seith told executives at a Wednesday Elk Grove Assn. of Industry and Commerce meeting in Elk Grove Village. Seith write a syndicated column on foreign relations. He is a partner in the Chicago law firm of Lord, Bissell & Brook and serves as chairman of the county zoning board of appeals. "It's going to be go-slow time in our relations with China," Seith said, noting that internal political struggles face the Far East nation. Seith, a member of the presidential advisory board on ambassadorial appointments, believes that the nomination of retiring United Auto Workers president Leonard Woodcock as chief liaision officer in China will be well-received there.

Energy plan urged to be scrapped

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce suggested Wednesday that President Carter's energy plan be scrapped in favor of an end to price controls on oil and new natural gas, new environmental laws, less regulation and more leasing of federal lands for energy resources. The proposal was greeted with a barrage of criticism from some Democrats on the House Ways and Means Committee. "We believe there is an alternative approach to the energy crisis," said chamber president Richard Lesher in testimony to the committee in the third day of hearings on President Carter's energy plan.

Woolworth's to ban Tris clothes

The F. W. Woolworth Co., in the face of a federal government suit, is ordering its stores to remove all Tris-treated clothing from market shelves. Tris, a fire retardant chemical used on children's sleepwear, has been shown to cause cancer in laboratory animals. The Consumer Product Safety Commission banned Tris-treated clothing April 7. Woolworth's order, delivered the same day the Justice Dept. filed suit in New York against the retailer for continuing to sell the Tris-treated sleepwear, was the second notification given its outlets, the company said.

Old age, ideas no longer face oblivion here

Louis Rukeyser

NEW YORK — In the American economy, the two greatest crimes traditionally have been to be old and to be old-fashioned.

The feeling here is that clemency is about to be granted for both these terrible offenses.

The distaste for age always has been the dark underside of the American obsession with youth. Personally, the ultimate American accolade is to tell a person that he or she looks younger than the calendar would suggest; publicly, we casually consign our most experienced citizens to the economic discard pile, insisting on compulsory retirement and then penalizing those who keep on producing.

ONE OF THE central facts about the next generation of American life is that it will be an older generation. People are living longer and reproducing less. The implications of this run right through the economy — bad for manufacturers of disposable diapers and jungle gyms, good for salesmen of travel, leisure and other activities aimed at the more mature.

Okay, then, so we may be moving into a world where older Americans will no longer have to hang their heads and hide the birthday candles. But what does that have to do with absolving the second great American crime: to be old-fashioned? After all, even the most ancient among us likes to be told that he or she thinks young.

Fair enough. What I am suggesting is not that we are heading into an era of closed-mindedness, but that we are no longer going to be quite so apt to buy bad ideas because they are presented as new.

Take the polemical efforts of John Kenneth Galbraith, who through the ever lengthening decades invariably has attempted to portray himself as the Thoroughly Modern Millie of American economics. To criticize his proposals was, by his definition, to unmask oneself as a refugee from another era entirely.

THE GALBRAITHIAN slur is no longer going to work very well in this country — because the average American is less concerned with labels than with results.

Those like Galbraith who forever want to substitute their own judgment for that of the uncontrolled marketplace might more properly be consigned intellectually to a much earlier, and less remarkable, century — to the Middle Ages, perhaps, when it was accepted naturally that freedom of choice was much too dangerous to be left to the masses.

But in the long run, the suspicion here that we are going to reject all name-calling and simply recognize that we have been missing the major bet by under-utilizing the old — in human flesh and in ideas, alike. That will not make us truly "old-fashioned," but it might make us truly mature.

Harper faculty contract awaits board approval

by RENA COHEN

Harper College faculty will receive an average pay raise of $900 next year, if the board of trustees ratifies a settlement reached Wednesday morning after a series of talks that saw two deadlines pass without an agreement.

The pact calls for a $650 across-the-board increase for Harper's 209-member faculty, plus 1.5 per cent of an individual's current salary, except where the increased salary would exceed the maximum set for the job.

Chief faculty negotiator David Macaulay said the maximum salary range provision means 28 faculty members who are near the top of their academic ranks will receive only a partial pay raise. Some will receive as little as $300, Macaulay said.

The settlement amounts to a 5 per cent salary increase, compared to the 13 per cent the faculty demanded when talks started Feb. 8.

LAST YEAR the board granted a 7.5 per cent pay raise which put another $1,375 in the faculty pockets.

"Five per cent at a time when the cost of living has gone up 6.4 per cent in the last twelve months is not real good," Macaulay said.

The 5 per cent settlement includes no fringe benefits, although the faculty did achieve minor revisions in its dental, medical and maternity benefits.

The agreement also grants increases ranging from $490 to $630 in the pay ceilings governing the five academic ranks at Harper. A compromise on one of the major stumbling blocks during the talks, this provision ensures all faculty members will receive some raise, but still prevents those near the top of their ranks from earning the full increase.

Macaulay said the increase in pay ceilings will not appear in the signed agreement between the faculty and the board but will be confirmed in a sideletter to the contract.

"IF IT'S PART of the signed agreement, the board is more or less committed to it," Macaulay said. "Since it's in a sideletter, there's some doubt about whether or not the pay ceiling actually will be increased. That's a low doubt, but it's a nagging possibility."

The agreement adds $505 to the $15,900 maximum salary now set for associate instructors; $570 to the $18,250 maximum for instructors; $630 to the $21,000 maximum for assistant professors; $520 to the $24,140 maximum for associate professors; and $490 to the $27,760 for full professors.

Other provisions of Wednesday's agreement include:

- Recognition of the Harper faculty senate's year-old affiliation with the American Federation of Teachers. The board previously had balked at granting formal recognition to the union, which now will become the faculty's official bargaining agent for negotiations next year.
- Addition of grievance procedures and selected working conditions to the scope of next year's negotiations. Previously talks have covered only salary and monetary fringe benefits.

Professional negotiator Ted Clark, hired to represent the Harper board, said, "The board is pleased we were finally able to arrive at a mutually acceptable agreement. We think it's fair and equitable to the faculty and the board."

Macaulay said the faculty was spurned in its efforts to eliminate quotas imposed on the proportion of faculty who can belong to a given academic rank, and failed to extract a promise that full-time faculty be given priority over part-time staff to teach overload and summer school courses.

Despite the fact the April 7 and May 5 deadlines for completion of the talks were not met and Harper faculty rejected an earlier 3.5 per cent increase offered by the board, negotiations this year were the smoothest in recent Harper history.

Firm oversight established on spy operations

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Intelligence Committee said in its first annual report Wednesday that Congress has established firm oversight of U.S. spy activities and predicted "we will not see a repetition of the widespread abuses of the past."

In a 40-page report on its first year of existence, however, the panel said there can be no absolute guarantee against abuses of power by intelligence agencies.

It said proposed new legislative charters, guidelines and restrictions for intelligence agencies are still being worked out. President Carter, earlier this week, lent his support to recommendations that the vague administrative charter governing the CIA be replaced by a congressional code.

"The intelligence agencies," the report said, "are now functioning under the control of the President, the Director of Central Intelligence, and the heads of the various intelligence entities, and . . . they are now fully and properly accountable to the Congress.

Young works behind scene to improve world relations

by DANIEL SOUTHERLAND

ANDREW YOUNG

WASHINGTON — Andrew Young, the quiet diplomat?

Is there another side to America's outspoken and controversial ambassador to the United Nations?

Indeed there is, if you can believe some of the African specialists in, of all places, the State Dept. where grumbling about the "Andrew Young problem" has been widespread.

WHAT SOME STATE Dept. officials who live with the Africa problem day in and day out are saying is that Young has been to a great extent responsible for improvements in America's relations with a number of black African nations.

"He's done quite a good job, but a lot of it doesn't get public," said one State Dept. specialist, pointing to U. S. relations with Tanzania, Zambia and even Mozambique.

"If Zaire hadn't happened, we would have had significant movement with Angola as well," the official said.

But what this official and others most often single out is Young's quiet efforts to improve U. S. relations with Nigeria, black Africa's richest and most heavily populated country.

Young has just visited Nigeria for the second time since he became ambassador to the United Nations. Last year, Sec. of State Henry A. Kissinger had planned a trip to the West African country, but the Nigerian government asked him not to come. After this rebuff to Kissinger, U. S.-Nigerian relations appeared to reach a low point. But relations have improved considerably in recent months, thanks in no small measure, officials say, to the efforts of Young.

NIGERIA, WHICH exported $5 billion worth of oil to the United States last year, currently is mounting a drive to attract American investors, and negotiations are under way to establish a joint U. S.-Nigerian economic commission.

Young has his critics in the State Dept., of course. Some officials find his "open mouth" diplomacy extremely unsettling. But there also are those within the department who allege that the bureaucrats are far too comfortable with fixed ideas and could profit from the shock of fresh thinking. Young sees himself as a force for change, preparing public opinion — and the buraucracy — to accept new directions in foreign policy.

"Andy Young makes people over here think — justify past policies and rethink what they're doing," said one State Dept. official in defense of Young's self-professed role as foreign policy "point man" for the Carter administration.

While Young's public remarks on South Africa have raised questions about his suitability as a diplomat, they too appear to have helped improve America's image among the black African nations.

When President Carter first announced a month ago that he had designated Vice-President Walter F. Mondale to focus on U. S. policy in Africa, the move was widely interpreted as an attempt to rein in the outspoken Young. But State Dept. officials deny that this is the case. Some say that if anyone's role has been diminished, it has not been that of Young but that of the assistant Sec. of State for African Affairs, William E. Schaufele Jr., a carry-over from the Kissinger days, who, officials say, is soon to be replaced as part of a changing U. S. policy on Africa.

Rhodesia boosts racial tensions, Young says

MAPUTO, Mozambique (UPI) — UN Ambassador Andrew Young Wednesday accused Rhodesia of trying to internationalize racial tension in southern Africa and involve Cuban troops.

Young said recent "hot pursuit" raids by Rhodesian troops into neighboring countries, including Botswana, were deliberate attempts by Rhodesian Premier Ian Smith to pull in Cuban troops on the side of the black guerillas.

"We have told Mr. Smith we will not be drawn into the conflict on his behalf under any circumstances," Young said.

Such attacks, he said, were making it extremely difficult for Western initiatives in the area to succeed.

Britain, with the backing of the United States, has proposed the turnover of power in Rhodesia from whites to the black majority in 1978. There are 275,000 whites in Rhodesia and 6.1 million blacks.

YOUNG, WHO IS attending a five-day UN conference on Rhodesia and South West Africa (Namibia), continused his low-key "corridor diplomacy," holding private meetings with William Eteki, secretary general of the 48-nation Organization of African Unity, other OAU and Tanzanian officials and scheduling talks with Angolan delegates.

"We are pleased by the new U.S. policy and the new leadership," Eteki said after their meeting, "though the United States could do more in bringing pressure against the racist regimes." Eteki has been one of Africa's sharpest critics of Washington.

Peter Onu, an OAU assistant secretary general for political affairs, called Young "the right man in the right place at the right time."

"We have high hopes his ideals will be translated into action this time by the United States," he said.

Young, under questioning, said severing all communications links between South Africa and the United States was "almost impossible for us," but hinted the United States might be receptive to some point of selective economic sanctions.

Young works behind scene to improve world relations

by DANIEL SOUTHERLAND

WASHINGTON — Andrew Young, the quiet diplomat?

Is there another side to America's outspoken and controversial ambassador to the United Nations?

Indeed there is, if you can believe some of the African specialists in, of all places, the State Dept. where grumbling about the "Andrew Young problem" has been widespread.

WHAT SOME STATE Dept. officials who live with the Africa problem day in and day out are saying is that Young has been to a great extent responsible for improvements in America's relations with a number of black African nations.

"He's done quite a good job, but a lot of it doesn't get public," said one State Dept. specialist, pointing to U. S. relations with Tanzania, Zambia and even Mozambique.

"If Zaire hadn't happened, we would have had significant movement with Angola as well," the official said.

But what this official and others most often single out is Young's quiet efforts to improve U. S. relations with Nigeria, black Africa's richest and most heavily populated country.

Young has just visited Nigeria for the second time since he became ambassador to the United Nations. Last year, Sec. of State Henry A. Kissinger had planned a trip to the West African country, but the Nigerian government asked him not to come. After this rebuff to Kissinger, U. S.-Nigerian relations appeared to reach a low point. But relations have improved considerably in recent months, thanks in no small measure, officials say, to the efforts of Young.

Mondale meets with Austrian chief

VIENNA (UPI) — Vice President Walter Mondale conferred Wednesday with Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky on the eve of Mondale's confrontation with South African Premier John Vorster on black rights in the white supremacist nation.

Mondale and Kreisky, sipping tomato juice in the garden of the Austrian leader's villa, discussed the Middle East and human rights problems in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

Speaking of Kreisky afterward, Mondale said, "He is not only quite a leader of this county — his experience, his knowledge, and his personal experience with leaders throughout the world makes him an important international resource for people interested in a secure and stable world.

"TODAY WE DREW ON his knowledge and experience to better understand many of the issues which our nations confront together."

Kreisky is highly regarded in Washington for his outspoken statements on human rights. One of the issues that Mondale and Kreisky discussed related to the October conference in Belgrade to review the 1975 Helsinki agreements.

Kreisky recently returned from a trip to Syria and Egypt and Mondale was reported anxious to get Kreisky's observations on the Middle East as the Carter administration seeks to encourage a Middle East peace settlemtn.

MONDALE WAS TO MEET with Vorster on Thursday. Vorster has made clear South Africa will not tolerate what it regards as interference in its internal affairs and has no intention of giving up its policies of separate development for its blacks.

"I am always hopeful and I have come to the meeting with an open mind to have very serious discussions," Vorster said on arriving Tuesday.

An important American goal is to convey to Vorster the Carter administration's human rights ideals without alienating the premier who could use his influence to achieve black majority rule in Rhodesia and independence in South West Africa.

The Austrian section of Amnesty International meanwhile appealed to Vorster to release "all prisoners of conscience and those banned and the abolition of torture and the death penalty."

Battle reenactment slated at race

A reenactment of a Revolutionary War encampment will be staged Saturday and Sunday at Dam No. 1 on the Des Plaines River near Wheeling.

The event, which is being conducted in conjunction with the 20th annual Des Plaines River Canoe Marathon race, will feature coordinated marching units, regimented militia foot soldiers and several drum and bugle corps.

"This slice of military history will be a colorful reenactment of the 18th Century and will include American, British and Indian marching groups with drills of that period and mock battles between the respective units," said Gary Arden, a participant in the program.

The event, sponsored by the Northwest Territorial Alliance, will take place each day between 9:30 a.m. and 5 p.m. The mock battles will occur about 3 p.m. both days. The entrance to Dam No. 1 is on Dundee Road, east of Milwaukee Avenue.

In addition to the drills and mock battles, there will be reenactments of camp life, tomahawk-throwing and artillery-firing demonstrations by more than 100 soldiers in 18th century costumes.

Bill to lower utility bills defeated

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — A "lifeline" bill to lower residential electricity bills, hotly debated since its introduction in January, was soundly defeated by the Illinois House Wednesday, 58-99.

The bill's sponsor, Rep. William Marovitz, D-Chicago, said the bill was intended to encourage energy conservation by big businesses while giving homeowners relief from soaring electric bills.

But foes rejected the bill on grounds it would give help to some who do not really need it and shift the utility costs to commercial and industrial users who might therefore be driven from the state.

Several attempts were made in committee to make the bill a "poor people's bill" by limiting it to certain welfare recipients, the elderly and the disabled.

But Marovitz resisted the efforts, saying lifeline was never intended as a social welfare program but a plan to ease electric costs across-the-board. The bill applied only to electricity, not natural gas.

Marovitz did chop in half the rate reduction from 22 per cent to 11 per cent, reducing the impact on industry from $165 million to $82.5 million. But the concession was not enough to get lifeline through the House.

The Illinois Public Action Council, disappointed by the outcome, vowed to file unfair lobbying charges against major utilities with the Illinois Commerce Commission and promised a continued fight. "Lifeline will not die with this session," it said.

EARLIER, THE House helped Gov. James R. Thompson keep his fiscal 1978 budget intact by refusing to approve a $42.3 million 5 per cent cost-of-living hike for welfare recipients.

Nearly all those who voted against the bill said they would have voted for it if the state had enough money. Thompson himself later echoed that theme and said he plans to propose a public aid cost-of-living boost next year when money is not so tight.

Backers of the bill, however, said there is enough money for the increase. Rep. Corneal Davis, D-Chicago, said Public Aid Dept. officials had promised to back a cost-of-living hike "if the ineligibles are off the rolls.

"There has been a $38 million reduction in aid to families with dependent children," Davis said. "But where is the money going? We give it to big shot doctors."

In other action:

- The House passed two measures aimed at helping rape and incest victims. The bills (H1185, H1186), sponsored by Rep. Aaron Jaffe, D-Skokie, would expand the definition of rape to include the threat of force, limit the use of consent as a defense for rape in certain cases and would define aggravated sexual assault as assault committed under certain circumstances such as rape of helpless persons and women in hospitals. The second bill would require the appointment of a guardian in court cases when a minor is a victim of sexual abuse.
- An anti-abortion bill failed on a test vote in the Senate, but supporters said they can muster enough votes for final passage later. Opponents said the bill (S580), is unconstitutional and would make persons who performed abortions subject to prosecution for murder.
- The Senate approved, 51-5, a bill (S557) which would require construction costs for public buildings to include money for art. Under provisions of the bill, local residents would help decide what art pieces would be included.
- Four bills aimed at eliminating "redlining" by insurance companies in low income areas were overwhelmingly approved by the Senate. S525, S526 and S528 would prohibit insurance companies from not renewing policies based on residence, age, sex or race and make it harder to cancel policies. The other bill (S473), would prevent companies from canceling policies because claims were made.
- The House approved measures to appropriate $2 million in bonding money for library construction grants of up to 25 per cent of the construction costs for downstate libraries and up to 50 per cent of the annual appropriation for the Chicago Public Library.

Raising drinking age bill not a dry issue just yet

Efforts temporarily stalled Wednesday to stop 19-and 20-year-olds from hoisting a stein of beer or sipping a glass of wine in Illinois will not evaporate.

The legislation, came within one vote of passage in the Illinois Senate and sponsors of the measure used parliamentary procedures to keep the bill alive.

"I had a lot of people apologizing to me today, but I asked where the hell were they," said State Sen. Frank Ozinga, D-Evergreen Park, the bill's sponsor.

OZINGA SAID HE will call the bill for another vote next week and hope that public pressure will convince at least one more senator to back the measure.

"I think there will be enough conversation between now and then to get the bill through," he added.

Lawmakers argued that traffic accident and deaths have increased since 19 and 20 year-olds were allowed to begin drinking beer and wine in 1973. The proposed legislation would not prevent home-rule communities from keeping the lower age.

State Sen. Bradley Glass, R-Northbrook, an opponent of raising the age, said he was surprised the legislation came so close to passage. The vote was 29-23, one short of the necessary majority.

"I did not think there was that much support for the bill," Glass said, adding staff research he has studied has not shown a direct link between the lowered drinking age and increased traffic accidents and fatalities.

State Sen. John Nimrod, R-Glenview, a co-sponsor of the bill, said he expects some of the senators who were absent Tuesday will favor the legislation when it is called again.

Bill to lower utility bills defeated

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — A "lifeline" bill to lower residential electricity bills, hotly debated since its introduction in January, was soundly defeated by the Illinois House Wednesday, 58-99.

The bill's sponsor, Rep. William Marovitz, D-Chicago, said the bill was intended to encourage energy conservation by big businesses while giving homeowners relief from soaring electric bills.

But foes rejected the bill on grounds it would give help to some who do not really need it and shift the utility costs to commercial and industrial users who might therefore be driven from the state.

Several attempts were made in committee to make the bill a "poor people's bill" by limiting it to certain welfare recipients, the elderly and the disabled.

But Marovitz resisted the efforts, saying lifeline was never intended as a social welfare program but a plan to ease electric costs across-the-board. The bill applied only to electricity, not natural gas.

Marovitz did chop in half the rate reduction from 22 per cent to 11 per cent, reducing the impact on industry from $165 million to $82.5 million. But the concession was not enough to get lfeline through the House.

The Illinois Public Action Council, disappointed by the outcome, vowed to file unfair lobbying charges against major utilities with the Illinois Commerce Commission and promised a continued fight. "Lifeline will not die with this session," it said.

EARLIER, THE House helped Gov. James R. Thompson keep his fiscal 1978 budget intact by refusing to approve a $42.3 million 5 per cent cost-of-living hike for welfare recipients.

Nearly all those who voted against the bill said they would have voted for it if the state had enough money. Thompson himself later echoed that theme and said he plans to propose a public aid cost-of-living boost next year when money is not so tight.

Sun's energy used to heat swim pool, home

Who needs natural gas when you've got 'Ol' Sol

by JOE FRANZ

Terry Turzynski and his family have been swimming in their outdoor pool in Palatine for a month already, and it doesn't have a heater — at least not a conventional heater.

Rather than relying on natural gas like most persons with outdoor pools, the Turzynskis use the sun's energy to keep the water at a comfortable temperature. They also use solar energy to heat their 2,600-square-foot English Tudor-style home.

Turzynski, who is president of Natural Energy Systems Inc. of Illinois, which he operates out of his home, said the temperature of the water in his pool is about 80 degrees and that it will continue to get warmer as summer approaches.

"IT'LL GO UP to 90 degrees with no problem," he said. "There's a control on it to keep the water from getting too hot."

Turzynski's firm, which sells, installs and services solar energy equipment, said a solar heater for a swimming pool costs about $2,600 and will save the average homeowner $350 to $400 a year on his natural gas bill.

"When you take that and throw in the natural gas increases that will occur every year, you're talking about the system paying for itself in four to five years," he said. "Solar is a much more cost effective way of heating a swimming pool."

"It wasn't the cost of the gas heater with me," Turzynski said. "It was the cost of heating the pool for four or five months a year. I couldn't see throwing the money away on utilities when I could heat it with solar."

SOLAR ENERGY recently received a shot in the arm when the Illinois Commerce Commission ordered that no new natural gas connections be authorized for swimming pool heaters or other devices that state officials deemed as unnecessary users of natural gas.

The energy to heat Turzynski's pool comes from seven solar panels on the roof of his home and five on the canopy over the pool's patio. All the panels face south to ensure maximum exposure to the sun.

The water in the swimming pool is heated by circulating it through the solar panels until the desired pool temperature is reached.

A special covering is kept over the 16-by-32-foot pool when it is not in use to prevent heat from escaping. The pool is below ground level.

BESIDES PROVIDING recreation for Turzynski, his wife, Judy, and the couple's two sons, the swimming pool is used to store energy to heat and cool their four-bedroom home. The pool will provide up to four days storage when the temperature is 10 degrees below zero.

Turzynski estimates that the solar energy systems will provide his home with 60 to 70 per cent of its total energy needs. He expects it to provide 30 to 40 per cent of the heat, 40 to 50 per cent of the air conditioning and 80 per cent of the hot water.

"In California they get 100 per cent out of a system like this," he said. "Here you need a back-up system, but there it's not needed."

Until recently, the Turzynskis' 3-year-old home was heated by a natural gas furnace.

"THE NATURAL gas system now is completely disconnected," he said. "I'm going to install an electrical back-up system, but it will be November or December before it's needed."

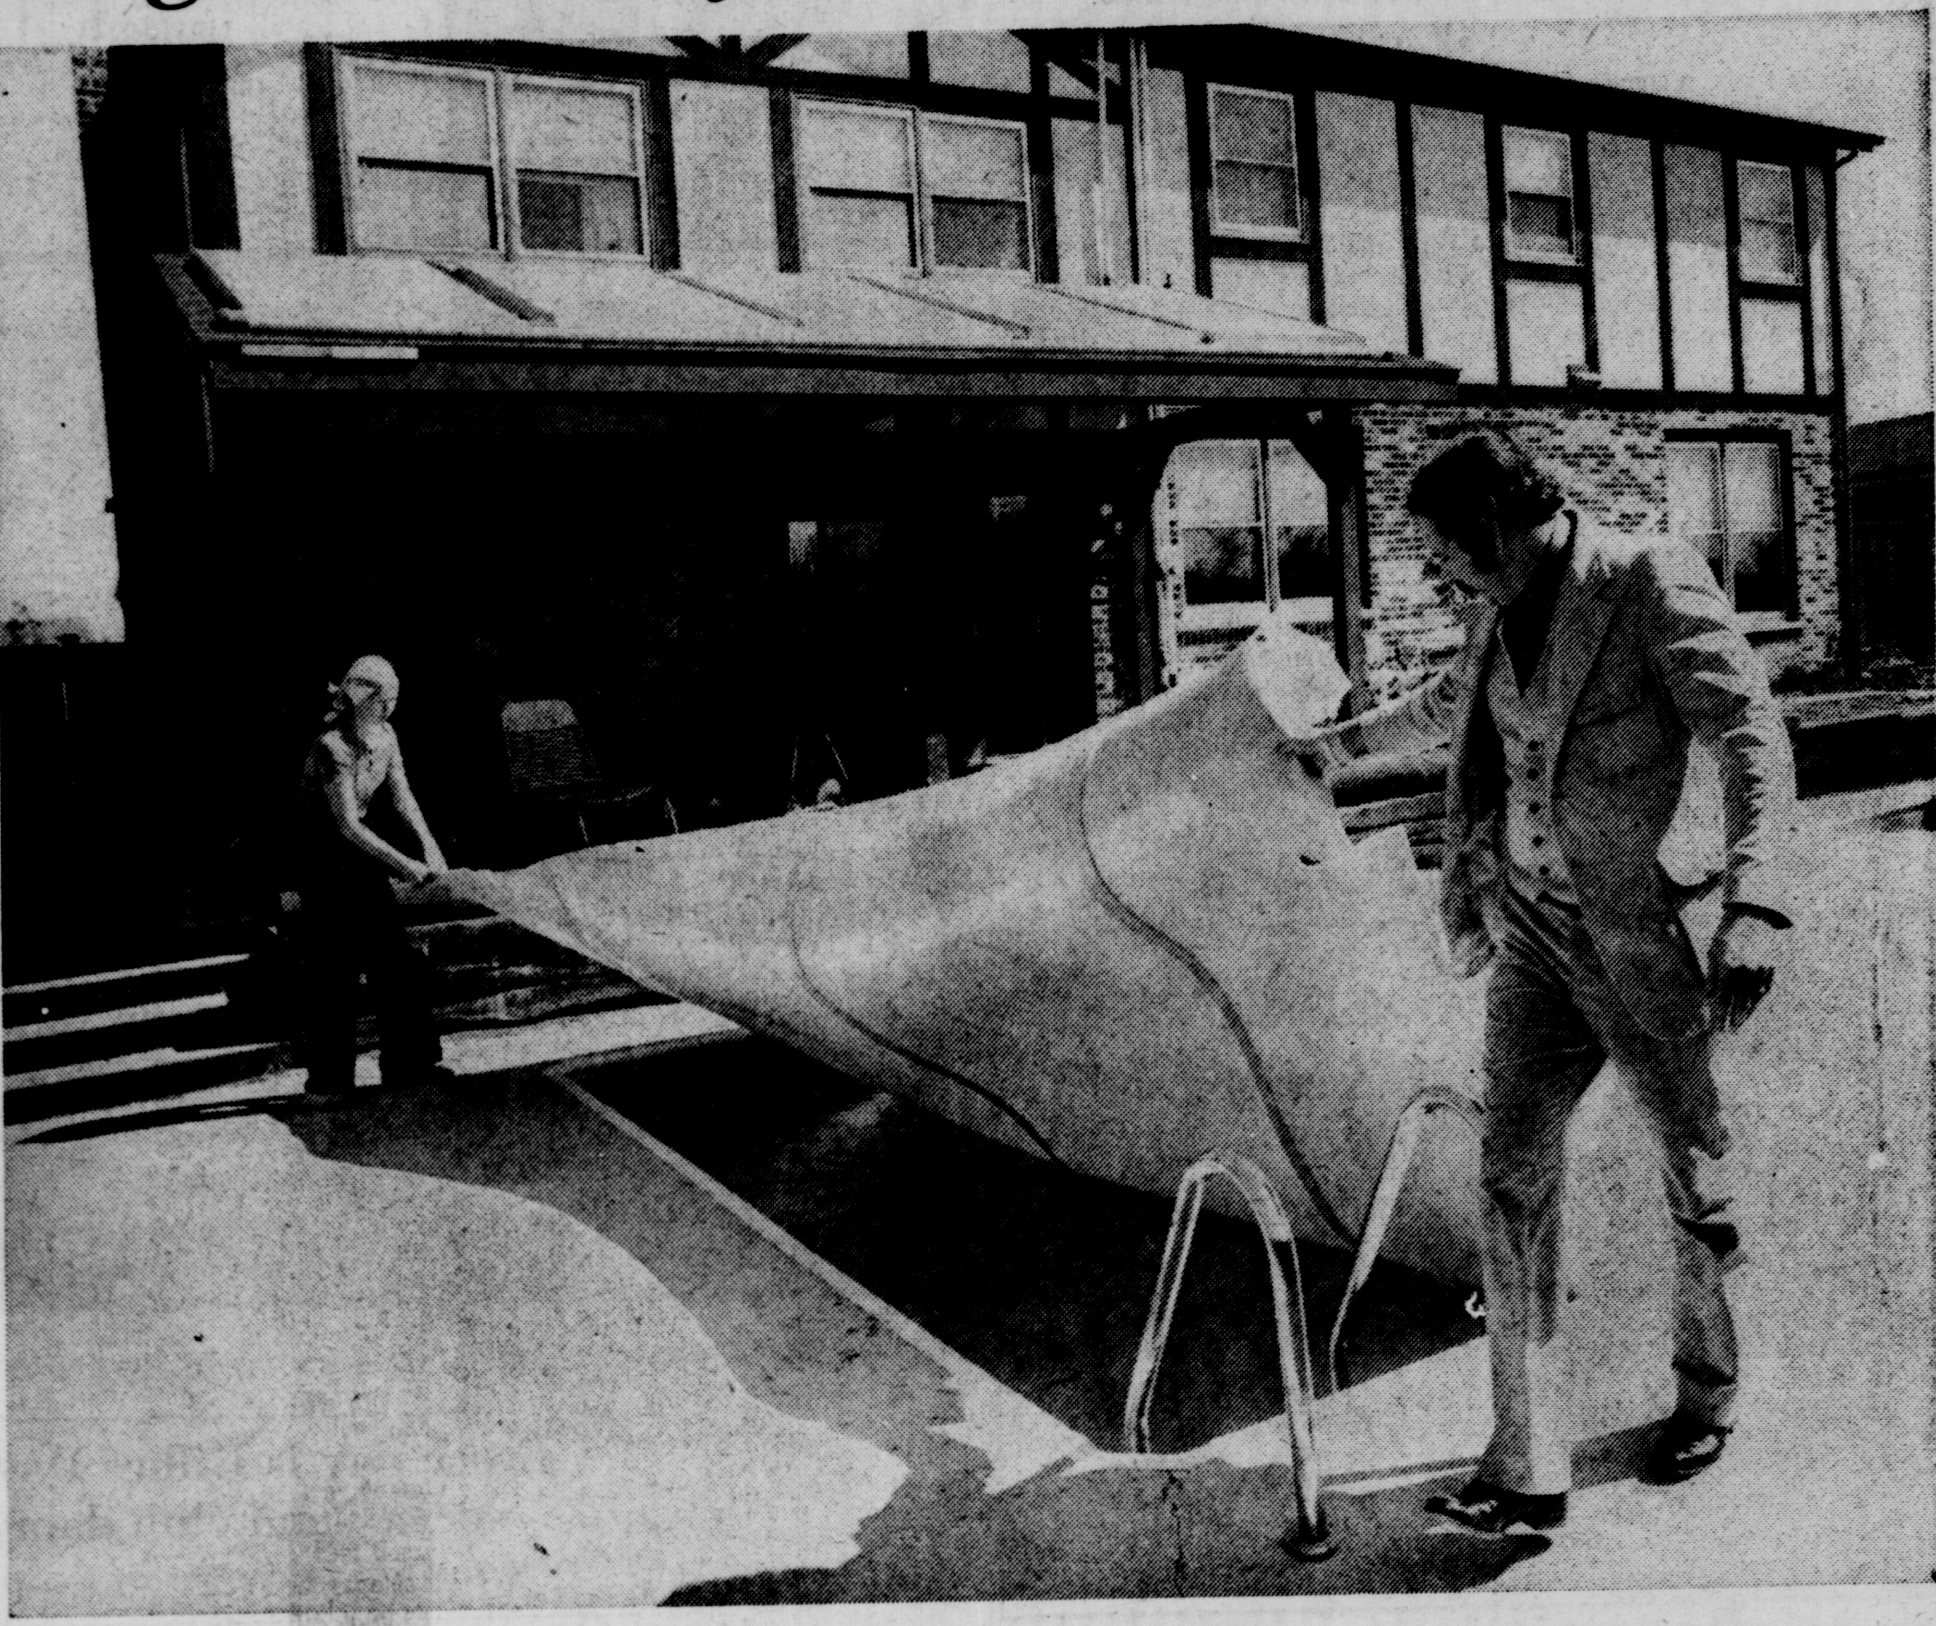
Although Turzynski's firm sells solar heating and hot water systems, he said its primary focus currently is on selling equipment to heat swimming pools.

"That's what we're doing marketing-wise," he said. "We're mainly interested in swimming pools because most people are not going to be converting the heating system in their homes at this point."

Turzynski, who started his business last October, said the firm will begin installing solar swimming pool heaters in the next few weeks.

HE SAID HE decided to convert his home heating and hot water system to solar energy because he believes it will be more economical in the long run.

He said converting a home to solar energy costs about $9,600, about twice the cost of a conventional heating and air conditioning system.



TERRY TURZYNSKI and his wife, Judy, remove the cover from their solar-heated swimming pool in Palatine. They and their two sons have been swimming in the pool for the last month. The temperature of the water in the pool last week was about 80 degrees.

"By heating the house we have 100 per cent use of the solar energy equipment," he said. "When you talk about a pay off period of four to 10 years, it's a matter of whether you pay the utility companies or pay for the solar heating system."

Turzynski said he believes solar energy is here to stay, and that it will continue to grow in popularity. He said it has not gained wide acceptance because until recently other forms of energy were more economical.

"I think you're going to see a lot of new homes with solar energy first," he said. "Then I think you're going to see more retrofitting of existing homes to solar as the price of energy goes even higher.

U.S. to pay big share of 80 solar-heat projects

by EDWARD K. DeLONG

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nudging the nation another step toward a sun-powered future, the government says it will pick up more than two-thirds of the $19 million tab for putting solar equipment on 80 buildings in 33 states.

The smallest grant — $450 — goes to the Long Beach, Calif., Fire Dept. It will pay 3 per cent of the estimated $15,000 cost of providing "a little bit of solar heating to the building and a whole lot of solar hot water" on a a new fire station.

Puzzled Energy Research and Development Administration officials say $450 was all the aid Long Beach requested, although more was available.

THE LARGEST grant — $540,558 — goes to a new Xerox Corp. office building in Stamford, Conn. It will pay 88 per cent of the $615,558 cost of installing 10,000 square feet of solar collectors in a visually attractive design.

ERDA officials said the government agreed to pay the lion's share at Xerox because a large Connecticut installation was desirable and the company "wouldn't put the system in without the help. At least that is the assumption."

Dr. Henry Marvin, solar program chief for ERDA, announced selection of the 80 projects Tuesday and said the grants for them total $12.6 million. The winners were picked from among 337 applications.

They included existing or planned offices, schools, motels and hotels, fire stations, police stations, libraries and manufacturing plants. All but one in Hawaii will tap solar power for heating, and many will include solar hot water or sun-powered air conditioners.

THE GOVERNMENT will pay an average 68 per cent of the cost of putting solar equipment on each building, Marvin said, with the balance being paid by the owner.

"Our purpose . . . isn't charity," Marvin said. "It is to get some data on solar equipment. This is a program that more than anything else helps the (fledgling solar energy) industry get its feet on the ground."

The new selections represent the second phase of a five-year program launched in April 1976, when an initial round of 32 grants was announced. Marvin said the third and final round will be announced in August.

Some projects picked Tuesday, such as a city public library in New Rochelle, N.Y., were rejected in the first round but were resubmitted with improvements. Marvain said he was impressed with how much the general quality of solar designs had improved in the past year.

"THESE ARE much better projects than what we've seen before," Marvin said.

Ronald Scott of the ERDA heating and cooling program said the New Rochelle library design submitted last year was "technically inferior," but the city and its architects "took it all in good heart."

He said: "They went back and pulled their act together and came in this time with an excellent program."

Farmers' markets go mod

by JAMES M. WOOD

CLEVELAND — The humble farmers' market, long a makeshift fixture on rural roadsides, is making a popular comeback in urban centers.

The downtown versions are anything but makeshift.

Boston's Quincy Marketplace, an elegantly restored structure, provides better protection for shoppers, more lease space for merchants, and draws large crowds to the city's redeveloped waterfront.

FOR MORE THAN 40 years the restaurants and shops in Los Angeles' Farmers' Market — a mixture of stucco and frame buildings and awning-covered food stalls — have attracted both long-time city residents and tourists. Currently there is a waiting list for prospective tenants.

Because the outdoor fruit and vegetable peddlers at Cleveland's West Side Market consistently draw large numbers of people, no matter what the weather, it has become a cliche visit for campaigning politicians. Advance men frequently stage handshaking and photography "events" at the market because their candidate is guaranteed a crowd.

But what about the city that doesn't have the tradition of Los Angeles or Cleveland, or a fine old building to restore like Boston?

Take Gary, Ind., for example. The city lost its shabby but popular farmers' market during the early 1960s when bulldozers cleared a stretch of downtown land as part of an urban-renewal program.

IN HIS FIRST campaign, Mayor Richard G. Hatcher promised local residents he would, if elected, get new

Being a landlord no 'life of Riley'

Don G. Campbell

About real estate

Renting is really a great deal. You simply make a one-time investment, lie back in your hammock and live comfortably on the monthly rental checks.

"Great Deal?" Well, perhaps that's a slight over-statement.

Dear. Mr. Campbell: After reading a recent column of yours in which you talked about a landlord's "duties," I am convinced youdo not own property and have to put up with tenants.

How about the tenant whose boy blocks the toilet repeatedly, necessitating plumber services? How about the other tenant who ordered a new bath and fixtures to the tune of over $500? Columns headed "Landlord's Duties" are discrimination! After so many bad experiences with renters, I am going to get rid of my property and sit back and take the dividends from Exxon, Philadelphia Electric and a few others. Before you give out opinions on "duty," stop and think about the tenant who leaves the dirty stove, the dirty carpeting and gouged walls. That little security deposit is nothing and does not begin to repair damages. — A. P. N. (Allentown, Pa.)

I think you've been reading me too selectively. The article you referred to did spell out some of the responsibilities of the landlord, but, on balance, you'll find that I usually take a guarded attitude toward the purchase of single-family residences as income-producing investments — for the very reasons you outline.

Most people have no idea of the headaches they're assuming when they become landlords.

You're quitt right: I don't own rental property. After having watched my brother's experience as a landlord, I know exactly what you mean. Have you ever had a tenant literally take the kitchen sink with him when he moved?

Dear Mr. Campbell: I agree that it makes no sense to pay off a home, even if you have the cash available. But can you explain what would be the most beneficial route to take in our situation?

My husband and I both expect to retire from the Air Force in eight years. We anticipate that our retirement home will cost $80,000-$90,000 to build on property we already own.

We have $40,000 in savings, $10,000 in stock, $30,000 in equity on a $60,000 home and $20,000 in equity on a $40,000 home that we rent.

Since our retirement income will be half of what we currently earn, should we put a sizable amount down on our retirfment home to keep monthly payments low, or put the minimum amount down and recoup some in income tax returns?

There also is a possiblity we may be assigned to retirement about five years before the normal date. — Mrs. W. E. P. (Wichita Falls, Tex.)

I would certainly make a minimal downpayment on the retirement home in order to maximize income tax savings during your years of high income.

At retirement — whether it comes at your normal retirement age or prematurely — you may have to reappraise your position and refinance the home, using the equity in your present home (and your rental property if you elect to sell it) to reduce the paymens on your new home.

Dear Mr. Campbell: When you evict tenants who are delinquent in their rent, do the courts compel them to pay the back rent they owe? —Mrs. M. E. (Allentown, Pa.)

The immediate purpose of the eviction is to get the present tenants out so that the property can become productive again. Unfortunately, recovering back rent frequently requires additional legal action.

Dar. Mr. Campbell: I thought that when you engaged a real estate broker to sell your house, he was supposed to advertise it and so forth? I signed with one about two months ago and, so far, he's run just one ad. When I ask him about it, he just says he's doing things "his way." —Mr. T. O. (Philadelphia, Pa.)

Your broker's actions are certainly odd. It's to his advantage to sell the house, but I'm afraid that you can't tell him how much advertising to buy. You certainly shouldn't renew your listing with him, however.

Being a landlord no 'life of Riley'

Don G. Campbell

About real estate

Renting is really a great deal. You simply make a one-time investment, lie back in your hammock and live comfortably on the monthly rental checks.

"Great Deal?" Well, perhaps that's a slight over-statement.

Dear. Mr. Campbell: After reading a recent column of yours in which you talked about a landlord's "duties," I am convinced youdo not own property and have to put up with tenants.

How about the tenant whose boy blocks the toilet repeatedly, necessitating plumber services? How about the other tenant who ordered a new bath and fixtures to the tune of over $500? Columns headed "Landlord's Duties" are discrimination! After so many bad experiences with renters, I am going to get rid of my property and sit back and take the dividends from Exxon, Philadelphia Electric and a few others. Before you give out opinions on "duty," stop and think about the tenant who leaves the dirty stove, the dirty carpeting and gouged walls. That little security deposit is nothing and does not begin to repair damages. — A. P. N. (Allentown, Pa.)

I think you've been reading me too selectively. The article you referred to did spell out some of the responsibilities of the landlord, but, on balance, you'll find that I usually take a guarded attitude toward the purchase of single-family residences as income-producing investments — for the very reasons you outline.

Most people have no idea of the headaches they're assuming when they become landlords.

You're quitt right: I don't own rental property. After having watched my brother's experience as a landlord, I know exactly what you mean. Have you ever had a tenant literally take the kitchen sink with him when he moved?

Dear Mr. Campbell: I agree that it makes no sense to pay off a home, even if you have the cash available. But can you explain what would be the most beneficial route to take in our situation?

My husband and I both expect to retire from the Air Force in eight years. We anticipate that our retirement home will cost $80,000-$90,000 to build on property we already own.

We have $40,000 in savings, $10,000 in stock, $30,000 in equity on a $60,000 home and $20,000 in equity on a $40,000 home that we rent.

Since our retirement income will be half of what we currently earn, should we put a sizable amount down on our retirfment home to keep monthly payments low, or put the minimum amount down and recoup some in income tax returns?

There also is a possiblity we may be assigned to retirement about five years before the normal date. — Mrs. W. E. P. (Wichita Falls, Tex.)

I would certainly make a minimal downpayment on the retirement home in order to maximize income tax savings during your years of high income.

At retirement — whether it comes at your normal retirement age or prematurely — you may have to reappraise your position and refinance the home, using the equity in your present home (and your rental property if you elect to sell it) to reduce the paymens on your new home.

Dear Mr. Campbell: When you evict tenants who are delinquent in their rent, do the courts compel them to pay the back rent they owe? —Mrs. M. E. (Allentown, Pa.)

The immediate purpose of the eviction is to get the present tenants out so that the property can become productive again. Unfortunately, recovering back rent frequently requires additional legal action.

Dar. Mr. Campbell: I thought that when you engaged a real estate broker to sell your house, he was supposed to advertise it and so forth? I signed with one about two months ago and, so far, he's run just one ad. When I ask him about it, he just says he's doing things "his way." —Mr. T. O. (Philadelphia, Pa.)

Your broker's actions are certainly odd. It's to his advantage to sell the house, but I'm afraid that you can't tell him how much advertising to buy. You certainly shouldn't renew your listing with him, however.

Housing industry continues to make gains

by JAMES HILDRETH

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The housing industry continued its robust recovery from the exceptionally cold winter in April, with builders beginning construction at the third fastest rate in the past year, the U.S. Commerce Dept. said Tuesday.

The department said over-all housing starts were at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.87 million last month, an actual 11 per cent drop from the 2.11 million starts in March, but still an optimistic figure, experts said.

Single-family houses were started at an annual rate of 1.44 million units, the second highest level since the government began keeping such records in 1959. In March, single-family homes were started at a 1.52 million annual rate, the most ever.

COURTENAY SLATER, the Commerce Department's chief economist, said the 11 per cent dip in April was expected because "the March level was unusually high."

The latest figures seem to demonstrate that the high cost of housing has not deterred home buyers.

The Census Bureau said its latest figures showed that the average price of a new home was $47,500, up 12 per cent from a year ago. In some sections of the country, such as California, housing costs are considerably above that level.

Analysts say the main reason for the housing demand was that mortgage money was abundant at some of the lowest rates in three years.

"THESE ARE very excellent figures," said Michael Sumichrist, chief economist for the National Assn. of Home Builders. "As I have said before, this will be a very good year, in fact a record year for housing."

The Commerce Dept. said that during the first four months of 1977, 551,600 housing units were actually started compared with 418,100 units during the same period last year.

The department said permits issued for starting housing construction, an indicator of future building activity, declined by 10 per cent to an annual rate of 1.534 million units. But the rate was still 42 per cent above April 1976.

Housing industry continues to make gains

by JAMES HILDRETH

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The housing industry continued its robust recovery from the exceptionally cold winter in April, with builders beginning construction at the third fastest rate in the past year, the U.S. Commerce Dept. said Tuesday.

The department said over-all housing starts were at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.87 million last month, an actual 11 per cent drop from the 2.11 million starts in March, but still an optimistic figure, experts said.

Single-family houses were started at an annual rate of 1.44 million units, the second highest level since the government began keeping such records in 1959. In March, single-family homes were started at a 1.52 million annual rate, the most ever.

COURTENAY SLATER, the Commerce Department's chief economist, said the 11 per cent dip in April was expected because "the March level was unusually high."

The latest figures seem to demonstrate that the high cost of housing has not deterred home buyers.

The Census Bureau said its latest figures showed that the average price of a new home was $47,500, up 12 per cent from a year ago. In some sections of the country, such as California, housing costs are considerably above that level.

Analysts say the main reason for the housing demand was that mortgage money was abundant at some of the lowest rates in three years.

"THESE ARE very excellent figures," said Michael Sumichrist, chief economist for the National Assn. of Home Builders. "As I have said before, this will be a very good year, in fact a record year for housing."

The Commerce Dept. said that during the first four months of 1977, 551,600 housing units were actually started compared with 418,100 units during the same period last year.

The department said permits issued for starting housing construction, an indicator of future building activity, declined by 10 per cent to an annual rate of 1.534 million units. But the rate was still 42 per cent above April 1976.

Home ownership among blacks on the increase

The trend toward home ownership among blacks has been increasing at a faster pace than among the nation's population as a whole.

As a result, according to a study by an economist, home lenders should expect mortgage demand among blacks to accelerate faster than among whites.

The study, by Andrew F. Brimmer, former governor of the Federal Reserve Board, was commissioned by the U.S. League of Savings Associations. The league is the primary trade organization of the savings and loan business.

ACCORDING TO census figures, while the over-all percentage of homeownership in the United States grew from 61.9 per cent in 1960 to 62.9 per cent in 1970, an increase of only one percentage point, the percentage of homeowners among black families grew from 38.4 per cent in 1960 to 41.5 per cent in 1970, a 3.1 percentage point rise.

The Census Bureau's most recent annual housing survey, published this year, confirms that the faster homeownership trend among blacks has continued since the last complete census figures, which were cited by Brimmer. According to these later figures, black homeownersahip had climbed to 43.8 per cent by 1975, an increase of 2.3 per cent in five years. In the same 5-year period, homeownership among all families in the United States had risen to 64.6 per cent, an increase of only 1.7 per cent.

In central cities, the homeownership trend among blacks is outpacing that of the general population at an even faster rate. Since 1960, while the percentage of homeowners among all central city residents was growing by 2.2 per cent (to 49.6 per cent in 1975 from 47.4 per cent in 1960), the percentage of black homeowners among all blacks in central cities was climbing by 5.8 per cent (to 37.2 per cent in 1975 from 31.4 per cent in 1960).

"These data lead to a key conclusion: The demand for homeownership among blacks is growing faster than that for the nation at large," said Brimmer.

"CONSEQUENTLY, one should expect the demand for mortgages by blacks also to be expanding at a faster pace than is true of whites."

Brimmer also noted that homes owned by blacks are more likely — by a slight margin — to be mortgaged by those owned by whites; 63.3 per cent of all black-owned single family homes are mortgaged, compared to 61.2 per cent of white-owned homes.

Brimmer undertook the study to determine the extra risks involved in increased lending for inner-city homes.

He said an analysis of inner-city lending experience in Pittsburgh demonstrated that "the percentage of blacks in a neighborhood is not statistically significant in explaining delinquency rates."

HOWEVER, HE said the same analysis showed that delinquency rates varied directly with the age of the mortgaged property, a finding which he said "is not an optimistic one with respect to a program of expanded urban lending."

If lenders are going to increase their volume of mortgages for inner-city homes — to meet the accelerating demand for mortgages among blacks, for example — they should expect to encounter increased risks, Brimmer said. Even though the higher risks do not stem from racial factors, there is ample evidence of extra risk in inner-city lending, the study showed.

Brimmer suggested intensified counseling of borrowers seeking inner-city mortgages, pooling of high-risk mortgages, charging mortgage interest rates that correspond to the risk of the loan and a share-risk-mortgage insurance program as some of the techniques that could reduce inner-city lending risks.

As a result, according to a study by an economist, home lenders should expect mortgage demand among blacks to accelerate faster than among whites.

The study, by Andrew F. Brimmer, former governor of the Federal Reserve Board, was commissioned by the U.S. League of Savings Associations. The league is the primary trade organization of the savings and loan business.

ACCORDING TO census figures, while the over-all percentage of homeownership in the United States grew from 61.9 per cent in 1960 to 62.9 per cent in 1970, an increase of only one percentage point, the percentage of homeowners among black families grew from 38.4 per cent in 1960 to 41.5 per cent in 1970, a 3.1 percentage point rise.

The Census Bureau's most recent annual housing survey, published this year, confirms that the faster homeownership trend among blacks has continued since the last complete census figures, which were cited by Brimmer. According to these later figures, black homeownersahip had climbed to 43.8 per cent by 1975, an increase of 2.3 per cent in five years. In the same 5-year period, homeownership among all families in the United States had risen to 64.6 per cent, an increase of only 1.7 per cent.

In central cities, the homeownership trend among blacks is outpacing that of the general population at an even faster rate. Since 1960, while the percentage of homeowners among all central city residents was growing by 2.2 per cent (to 49.6 per cent in 1975 from 47.4 per cent in 1960), the percentage of black homeowners among all blacks in central cities was climbing by 5.8 per cent (to 37.2 per cent in 1975 from 31.4 per cent in 1960).

"These data lead to a key conclusion: The demand for homeownership among blacks is growing faster than that for the nation at large," said Brimmer.

"CONSEQUENTLY, one should expect the demand for mortgages by blacks also to be expanding at a faster pace than is true of whites."

Brimmer also noted that homes owned by blacks are more likely — by a slight margin — to be mortgaged by those owned by whites; 63.3 per cent of all black-owned single family homes are mortgaged, compared to 61.2 per cent of white-owned homes.

Brimmer undertook the study to determine the extra risks involved in increased lending for inner-city homes.

He said an analysis of inner-city lending experience in Pittsburgh demonstrated that "the percentage of blacks in a neighborhood is not statistically significant in explaining delinquency rates."

HOWEVER, HE said the same analysis showed that delinquency rates varied directly with the age of the mortgaged property, a finding which he said "is not an optimistic one with respect to a program of expanded urban lending."

If lenders are going to increase their volume of mortgages for inner-city homes — to meet the accelerating demand for mortgages among blacks, for example — they should expect to encounter increased risks, Brimmer said. Even though the higher risks do not stem from racial factors, there is ample evidence of extra risk in inner-city lending, the study showed.

Brimmer suggested intensified counseling of borrowers seeking inner-city mortgages, pooling of high-risk mortgages, charging mortgage interest rates that correspond to the risk of the loan and a share-risk-mortgage insurance program as some of the techniques that could reduce inner-city lending risks.

Apartment dweller paying for realty tax increase

Bernard Meltzer

On real estate

The following letter deals with a new type of apartment lease which may beome the standard, due to rising costs and continued inflation.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: We live in a large apartment complex, and for the last few years we have had added to our rent "in reference to the addendum in our lease" a percentage of the real estate tax increase.

Since we do not own our apartment and it is not a condominium unit, why do we, the tenant, have to be burdened with this charge in addition to the yearly increase in rent? — Is this legal?

I am finding more and more instances where apartment leases contain escalator clauses. Years ago these clauses were found only in commercial and industrial leases. They provide for the tenant to pay any increases in the cost of insurance, real estate tax, etc.

Such a clause is a matter of negotiation, and nobody forces you to sign one. However, the day may come when this will be the only type of lease possible.

True, you should not be burdened with the costs that the landlord must pay. However, a landlord cannot be expected to lease you an apartment and lose money. One nice thing about the escalator clause is that it enables you to see why you are being charged additional rent.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: We will be having a new neighbor soon and understand he is planning to put a fence next to our property. We would like to know if he can put this fence on the exact dividing property line or does he have to place the fence on his property a certain distance from that line? — Need to know.

If you and your neighbor agree to divide the cost of the fence, it can be placed on the dividing line and it becomes a party fence.

If this is the case, you will also be responsible for half the maintenance. I assume that you are not interested in a fence, or else you would have installed one before this.

If you do not share in the cost, then the fence must be placed entirely on your neighbor's property. It is said that "good fences make good neighbors," but in this case your neighbor may not be very happy if he must bear the entire burden.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: We recently bought a lovely old house that rambles and rambles. Many of our friends think we're crazy to have taken on such a big place, but we like it that way.

There is a lovely libraryhin the house with wood paneled walls. Though it's in good condition, the walls look sas in good condition, the walls look asthough they could stand some tender, loving care. What can I use to spruce up the wood and make it looc less dry? — Fixing up.

If the wood paneled walls are waxed, nothing should be necessary other than dusting. If you say they look "dry" I would suggest that you use a liquid wax. When rubbed a little, you should have a nice polish...

Dear Mr. Meltzer: We have moved into our new house and are delighted with it. My husband says that he's very suspicious about there being termites, even though the man we bought it from vowed there were none.

How can we be sure whether the house is termite-free? — Want to be sure.

If you are at all suspicious that your house has termites, consult an exterminator immediately. This is something that requires professional opinion and care.

Termites can do great damage to wood, and it would be well worth it for you to consult a reliable exterminating firm and set your mind at ease.

If you do not share in the cost, then the fence must be placed entirely on your neighbor's property. It is said that "good fences make good neighbors," but in this case your neighbor may not be very happy if he must bear the entire burden.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: We recently bought a lovely old house that rambles and rambles. Many of our friends think we're crazy to have taken on such a big place, but we like it that way.

There is a lovely libraryhin the house with wood paneled walls. Though it's in good condition, the walls look sas in good condition, the walls look as-though they could stand some tender, loving care. What can I use to spruce up the wood and make it looc less dry? — Fixing up.

If the wood paneled walls are waxed, nothing should be necessary other than dusting. If you say they look "dry" I would suggest that you use a liquid wax. When rubbed a little, you should have a nice polish...

Dear Mr. Meltzer: We have moved into our new house and are delighted with it. My husband says that he's very suspicious about there being termites, even though the man we bought it from vowed there were none.

How can we be sure whether the house is termite-free? — Want to be sure.

If you are at all suspicious that your house has termites, consult an exterminator immediately. This is something that requires professional opinion and care.

Termites can do great damage to wood, and it would be well worth it for you to consult a reliable exterminating firm and set your mind at ease.

League plans to help inner city

The U.S. League of Savings Associations recently moved to boost housing rehabilitation efforts to preserve and upgrade older city neighborhoods.

League Pres. John A. Hardin said former National Assn. of Home Builders executive vice president, Nathaniel H. Rogg, has been commissioned to draft a program aimed at expanding the housing rehabilitation industry, including the promotion of increased lending in city neighborhoods.

The league is the primary trade association for the savings and loan business.

"WE AMERICANS cannot go on forever building new homes and apartments on the outskirts of cities and letting older housing rot from neglect," Hardin said.

"We have seen the consequences of wasting energy and natural resources," he said. "Today, we are running out of fuel and precious natural resources. The lesson should be the same in housing. This nation will run out of shelter unless we make up our minds to conserve what we have built."

"We in the savings and loan business recognize that providing livable housing in the cities and preserving the quality of those neighborhoods is a complex undertaking. It involves many risks. It requires cooperation on the part of a lot of people: Builders, lenders, real estate brokers, local governments and the community residents," Hardin said.

"But it can also be a sound investment. People are moving back to the city neighborhoods. Young families appreciate the convenience and the social and cultural benefits of city life. Demand is rising for decent city homes," he said.

HARDIN SAID the new program will propose ways of involving in rehabilitation work some of the residential construction resources — expertise, management, equipment and labor — that are now heavily concentrated in new construction.

In addition, it will include initiatives designed to increase the amount of financing for housing rehabilitation and purchases in older sections of the nation's cities.

He said the program also will seek to define the roles of home lenders, local government officials, government regulatory agencies, existing community groups and others in facilitating development of a strong, proficient housing rehabilitation industry.

Proposals for needed state and federal legislation and suitable local building code adjustments also will be included in the program.

ROGG, WHO WILL draft the program, said that in the first phase of the program he will concentrate on finding out how much housing rehabilitation and mortgage lending currently is under way in urban areas.

"There may be more rehabilitation activity and inner-city financing going on than most people would assume," Rogg said.

"Before we can stimulate more rehabilitation work among building contractors and more lending by financial institutions for city properties, we need to know what is now being done and how it is being financed," he said. "Next we need to ask building contractors who have done urban rehabilitation and lenders who have made inner-city loans what problems they have had to cope with."

Rogg said contractors in the past have shied away from inner-city construction work because of problems such as construction site security costs, reluctance of craftsmen to work in some urban neighborhoods, lack of space for employe parking, building codes that make rehabilitation unnecessarily expensive and the element of surprise attached to rehabilitation.

HE SAID THAT planning and cost estimating can be fairly precise for a new building, but with a structure to be rehabilitated, "you never know what you're going to find behind the next wall or under the flooring."

Lenders financing inner-city housing have had to face many problems, Rogg said. A recent difficulty has been reluctance by fire and hazard insurance underwriters to insure property in vast sections of some of the larger cities, making mortgage loans in these areas impossible.

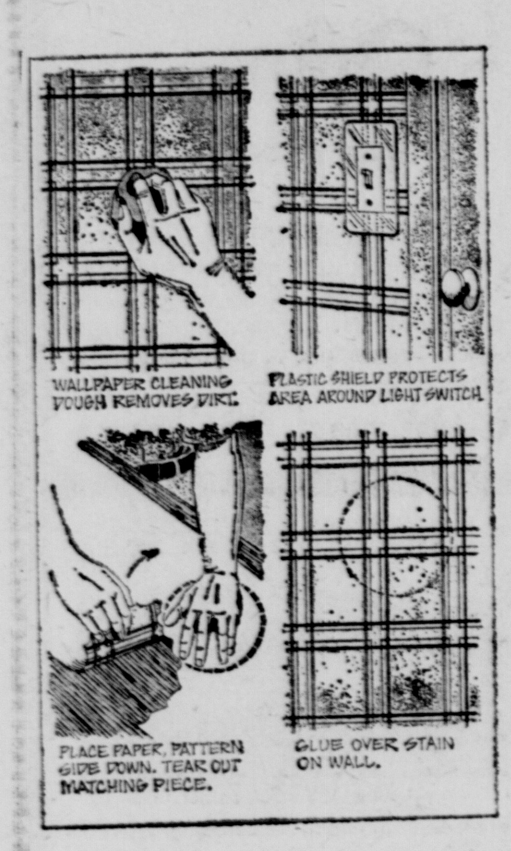
Use bread to clean wallpaper? Some say it works

Dear House Doctor: How does one keep wallpaper clean when there are small children in the family? They pivot around corners by grasping the walls. The areas around light switches are black and their art is displayed on the paper in the bedroom. Mrs. B.J.D

Some day, we may learn how to accomplish the impossible. At this time, though, we are making very little progress in this direction. Here are a few suggestions that should help remove or hide the dirt and stains.

Hardware and paint stores have wallpaper cleaning dough. The dough is rubbed across the surface with a kneading motion so as to fold the dirt collected into the dough.



WALLPAPER CLEANING DOUGH REMOVES DIRT.

PLASTIC SHIELD PROTECTS AREA AROUND LIGHT SWITCH.

PLACE PAPER, PATTERN SIDE DOWN. TEAR OUT MATCHING PIECE.

GLUE OVER STAIN ON WALL.

Some readers have told me they used wads of fresh bread for cleaning and obtained good results. Artists' art gum will remove some of the most stubborn dirt stains.

You can reduce the damage around the light switch by installing a clear plastic shield beneath the switch cover plate. Hardware stores sell these.

Grease stains must be attacked promptly. The best idea is to get a small amount of fullers earth, which garages and filling stations often use under thier grease racks. Make a paste of the fullers earth and a nonflammable cleaning fluid and spread this over the stain. Apply a fresh batch when the first is dry.

Crayon marks should be carefully scraped away. Then, dampen a cloth with cleaning fluid and carefully wipe away any stain that remains. If a ring appears, use the above mentioned method for removing grease stains.

Ball point ink cannot be removed. Ink eradicator will remove other ink marks, but it may also remove the color from the paper. You can touch up these spots with water color paints.

Paperhangers usually leave partial rolls on the job. If you have matching paper, the following method will work when others fail.

Place the paper on a table with the pattern side down. Mark an area on the back of the paper that will cover the stain or damage and will match the pattern on the wall.

Then, holding the marked section flat, tear the excess paper from around it. This will feather the back edge of the paper. Apply the patch over the stain, using wallpaper paste or rubber cemetn.

Outpatients clinic

Mrs. R.E.W. — You cannot remove the scratches that your dog made on your newly refinished mahogany table. However, there is a special furniture polish that contains a stain, and this may hide the scratches.

T.J. McK — I didn't think any town in America was so far back in the woods that the hardware store people never heard of tile grout. All I can tell you is that it is a white powder that is mixed with water to form a paste used for filling the spaces between ceramic tiles.

H.L.H. — Either epoxy cement or white glue will repair the split table leaf, but, to be effective, the part must be properly clamped together until the glue dries.

Dear House Doctor: You recently mentioned an electric heating cable to be used to melt ice along the lower edge of a roof. I cannot find one in Cincinnati, Ohio. Where can one be purchased? W.W.

These cables have many uses other than the one I mentioned. They can be buried in the earth of greenhouses and cold frame seed beds, or used to keep cattle watering troughs from freezing. Ask a nurseryman in your city where they may be found.

Dear House Doctor: My daughter recently moved into her own apartment and left a room literally wallpapered with posters. These are attached with wax or with double-faced plastic tape. Advice from paint stores as to how to remove them has been of no help. Mrs. R.C.J.

Your statement about "wax" is too indefinite for me to help, but the plastic tape can be removed with a chemical called trichlorethylene. A paint manufacturer may be able to tell you where you can buy this chemical.

Herman Baum

The house doctor

Dear House Doctor: We have an 18-year-old house that has thermal glass windows. Condensation forms between the glass. Can I repair this myself? H.G.

When your home was built, thermal glass was guaranteed leakproof for only five years. Design improvement has now extended guarantee to 20 years. Neither you nor anyone else can repair the broken seals that permit the entrance of moisture. New thermal glass is required.

Dear House Doctor: Whenever we draw hot water, the water heater makes a gurgling noise. I tried draining the tank but it did not help. How can this be fixed? A.J.S.

Sand and other sediments collect at the bottom of a water heater tank. The cold water inlet pipe extends to the bottom of the tank and into this sediment, resulting in the noise when cold water flows into the tank.

Turn off the water supply and drain the tank. Remove the faucet near the bottom of the tank and use a stiff wire or metal rod to bread up the sediment, which can then be flushed out.

Big rush on for one-family homes: Hardin

Single-family homes are being built at a record pace, thanks in part to the coming of age of the post-World War II baby boom kids, said the president of the U. S. League of Savings Associations.

"The baby boom kids have grown up, and they're entering the prime home-buying years," said John A. Hardin. "We'll be seeing many new, young home buyers for the next five years."

Hardin is president of the league, the largest trade association serving the savings and loan business.

SINGLE-FAMILY housing starts are running at an annual rate of more than 1.5 million units, well ahead of the record 1.3 million starts in 1972 during the peak of the 1972-73 housing boom.

The current housing boom is being fueled by "a plentiful supply of mortgage money and reasonable mortgage rates," Hardin said.

League economists project that savers will have deposited $19 billion to their accounts at savings and loan associations by mid-year, Hardin said. "That means our institutions have plenty of money to lend," he said.

Hardin, who also is president of First Federal Savings of Rock Hill, S.C., said he agreed with predictions that the savings and loan business would lend a record amount of money this year.

Savings associations loaned more than $75 billion in 1976. Hardin said the business' loan volume "could be close to $90 billion" this year.

Many tax shelters offered in real estate: executive

Small as well as large investors are being attracted to tax shelters provided by various types of public and private real estate syndications, said Richard R. Wood, president of the Real Estate Securities and Syndication Institute, an affiliate of the National Assn. of Realtors.

"There are many real estate tax sheltering opportunities," he said. "Many investors view real estate tax shelters as being comparable to tax-free income which they associate with municipal bonds."

WOOD SAID the multi-billion dollar tax shelter real estate syndications are mainly in income-producing property such as shopping centers, office buildings and apartment complexes.

"Many Americans live in new apartments, work in modern office buildings and shop in fully-enclosed shopping malls without realizing many of those top level real estate facilities would not be there except for tax shelter real estate syndication," he said.

Investors are interested in projects involving many kinds of real estate facilities, and are attracted, he said, because capital appreciation often is faster and larger than in corporate investment and offers at least equivalent security. Real estate investment also serves as a protector against inflationary elements, he said.

He listed these additional factors of a limited partnership in a real estate tax shelter syndication offering:

- Minimum investment can be as low as $1,000 per interest.
- The objectives of the investment are to preserve and protect the investor's capital, to provide the investor with cash distributions which do not constitute taxable income, and provide long-term appreciation of the value of the partnership's capital.
- A limited partner is a passive investor whose liability is limited to the original investment.
- A limited partnership permits a flow of income tax benefits to the investor.
- Real estate tax shelter syndications are regulated in most states by both federal and state securities commissions, assuring the investor of proper information and disclosure and a fair allocation of fees and profits.

"Tax shelters involving real estate provide new commercial buildings and complexes," Wood said. "They create jobs and help stimulate the nation's economy. Many real estate projects under way across the nation are very large and complicated and require very sophisticated management. The real estate syndicators who are members of our affiliate, the Real Estate Securities and Syndication Institute, are highly educated professionals who handle these projects."

He said investors interested in such tax shelters should also understand the risks in a specific real estate syndication, make sure all aspects are disclosed, identified, and minimized as much as possible. Investors should examine carefully all financial and legal aspects of the project and assure themselves of the experience and reputation of the general partner of the limited partnership, he said.

Nonresidential construction gains: Dodge

March contracts for new construction advanced 9 per cent to a total of more than $9.9 billion, it was reported recently by the F. W. Dodge Division of McGraw-Hill Information Systems Co.

McGraw-Hill Information Systems Co. produces Dodge Reports on construction activity and Sweet's Catalog Files of construction product information.

George A. Christie, vice president and chief economist for the firm said: "Sharp gains in housing and in commercial and industrial building were the construction industry's main sources of support in the past month."

Christie said "March contracting data confirmed that more is happening in construction markets than just a housing recovery. With the setback of the economy's recovery now behind us, we expect to see further improvement — as had occurred in March — in the critical area of industrial and commercial building."

NONRESIDENTIAL building contract value, at more than $3 billion was up 22 per cent in March, paralleling the gains in most other basic economic indicators in that month.

"Almost all of March's increase was concentrated in commercial and industrial building contracts (up more than 40 per cent), as institutional building value was little improved over last year's amount," Christie said.

March contracts for residential building reached more than $5.1 billion for a gain of 42 per cent over last year. He noted that after seasonal adjustment, the past month's dollar value of residential building hit a new high, exceeding the previous peak set in March 1973. The current month's activity however, fell short of the record for the number of dwelling units started.

Without a single new electric power project initiated in March, total nonbuilding construction contract value fell 41 per cent to about $1.7 billion despite sizable gains in highway and sewer and water contracting, Christie said.

"It's possible that we may experience a setback in the previously booming field of electric utility construction," Christie said. "This industry, which has been moving rapidly into nuclear generation, must now reconsider its future in the light of the President's recent energy message. It, among other things, carried a strong emphasis on coal as a source of electrical energy.

At the end of the first quarter of 1977, total construction contract value, at $24.1 billion, was 8 per cent ahead of the comparable period of 1976.

Ashley doubts U.S. can meet Carter's energy goals

Despite his agreement with President Carter about the seriousness of the nation's energy problems, the chairman of the House of Representatives' Ad Hoc Committee on Energy voiced reservations about the ability of the nation to reach goals suggested by the President in his energy proposals.

Rep. Thomas L. Ashley, D-Ohio, who chairs the House committee that will consider the President's program, made the remarks recently to the National Assn. of Realtors.

While agreeing with the President's assessment that the energy crisis is equal to problems faced in wartime, Ashley questioned the following goals established by the President:

- To reach a point by 1985 where 90 per cent of the nation's homes are adequately insulated. Asheley expressed doubt that the Federal Energy Administration's estimates of the insulation industry's capacity and size of the labor force are realistic.

- To have 2.5 million solar-heated homes by 1985. "Installation of solar energy equipment in a new home is costly," he said, "and retrofitting an existing home may cost up to $15,000 — far beyond the proposed maximum $2,000 tax credit."

The President's intention is to give preferential treatment to homeowners in the allocation of cheaper fuels, principally natural gas and oil. And, while prices of those fuels will rise, he said, they still will be far cheaper than solar installations. That will discourage many families from converting, he said.

- To have 100 new nuclear plants on stream by 1985. Ashley views this goal as highly optimistic, since it currently takes about 12 years from initial conception of a nuclear plant to operational status.

- To add 400 million tons of coal production by 1985. He questions this goal because of monumental logistical problems such as size of the labor force and availability of railroad freight cars.

As for the other side of the coin, Ashley noted that the American people and Congress apparently join with the President and him in recognizing the seriousness of the energy problems.

"Speaker (Thomas P.) O'Neill, D-Mass., immediately announced formation of the 40-person energy committee. We will call witnesses, including present and past cabinet members, and we will develop some realistic legislation," Ashley said.

construction under-way on the desolate property. Hatcher was elected, and residents wasted no time pressuring him to keep his promise. For starters, residents wanted their market back.

Hatcher turned to a family of planners and architects, brothers and sister James, William, and Joyce Whitley of Cleveland, to design a new market.

The result, which recently received an honor award from the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development for design excellence, is an imaginative, low-cost farmers' market.

Deceptively simple, the Whitley's market consists of three lightweight roof structures supported by nine slender columns topped by flagpoles. Hanging from these white, triangular space frames are brightly colored tents, lights, and signs. They hover above a landscaped plaza surrounding an outdoor foundation. Circling the fountain is a 70-foot-wide concrete rink for roller skating in summer and (when it is flooded) ice skaters in winter.

THE PLAZA IS both a market and a recreation center.

The City of Gary paid $320,000 for the facility and spends approximately the facility and spends approximately is partially defrayed by small monthly fees collected from local farmers and merchants who sell their wares at the new market.

During harvest season, farmers bring only those goods which they believe they can sell in a single day. They reduce their prices as required during the day to make sure there are not leftovers at night.

Any farmer (or ambitious entrepreneur with a truck who knows a farmer) can bring his produce downtown and open up business under an awning. The merchandise doesn't have to be food. It can be plants, pottery, baked goods from the church guild, or "antiques" from neighboring garages.

ARCHITECT William Whitley has traveled extensively through Africa, where he saw many successful community markets.

"The best parts are the color, activity, chaos, and noise. That's a product more of people than the physical structure," he said.

James Whitley's trips to Canada reinforced his brother's observations.

"Farmers' markets and roadside stands along the highways to Toronto are modest structures, but almost always well-designed and attractive places," he said.

The architects tried to achieve the same eye-catching appeal with their new market. The structure appears to float at half-mast on flagpoles. The roof supports whatever is needed in the way of props for community or market events and doesn't impede the movement of people beneath it. The roof can be fitted with panels if protection from weather is required.

The Whitleys selected steel as the basic construction material in an attempt to get Gary's steel industry involved in the urban redevelopment program.

BUT EVEN MORE important, the market has provided area residents with a low-cost entry into business. The new center permits mom-and-pop operations to compete with the supermarket chains.

Farmers' markets are not a panacea; the Whitleys would be the first to admit that. But such markets do respond to an item on most mayors' shopping lists — the need for low-cost urban-renewal projects that are easy to build and that create new jobs.

Gary's modest farmers market meets this need.

Sox produce early; Knapp notches 5th

by BOB GALLAS

Sometimes a little kick in the right place is all it takes to spur an individual on to success.

Just ask Chris Knapp.

Knapp, a 23-year-old righthander who struggled through his first seven starts before going 10 innings for his first complete game last time out, went 8-2/3 innings Wednesday night and got the win as the Sox topped Kansas City 7-4 before 20,041 fans at Comiskey Park.

He attributes his success to a little more kick or at least the bend of a knee — his knee.

"The last two times out I've been bending my knee a little more and turning my hand differently. That helps hike the ball a little better and keeps me on top of the ball," said Knapp who is now the winningest pitcher on the staff with a 5-1 record.

Knapp, who had given up two runs on six scattered hits over eight innings before the heat got to him in the ninth, was KOd by the Royals who added a pair of runs in the final frame. Knapp gave up an opening double to Tom Poquette and an RBI single to Fred Patek but almost pitched his way to a complete game by striking out the next two hitters, pinch hitter Pete LaCock and leadoff man Dave Nelson.

But Hal McRae singled in a run and manager Bob Lemon quickly went to the bullpen for Lerrin LaGrow who came on and threw but three pitches to get Al Cowens to ground out to end the game and earn the save, LaGrow's sixth.

Lemon's appearance was greeted with a hearty round of of boos from the crowd, who wanted Knapp to get the complete game, but Knapp said he was ready to go.

"The heat was awful and Bob (Lemon) didn't want me to pitch to (John) Mayberry, who was up after Cowens. The complete game didn't matter, just the win," Knapp said.

The Sox batted around in the second inning, scoring five runs, the big blow coming off the bat of Oscar Gamble, who parked a 3-1 Dennis Leonard pitch into the right field upper deck for his fifth home run of the year, a three-run shot.

Leonard, who was charged with all seven Sox runs, departed in the sixth when the Sox added two more on three successive singles to open the Record is whopping 14-2 this month

A mayday is no disaster for Cubs

It takes a good team to win baseball games no matter who supplies the opposition and no matter if the winning skein reaches 14 out of a possible 16.

That's what the Cubs have done through the hot and wondrous days of May. Starting with a victory at Cincinnati on the first day of the month, the Cubs have gone 14-2 for May.

The stretch includes two six-game winning streaks, one of which is current, and it has given the team a 21-11 record, which puts them just two games behind Pittsburgh in the National League East.

Tonight, at 6:30, Rick Reuschel goes to the mound for the Cubs in Atlanta against the worst team in the league, the Braves of Ted Turner. The Cubs will play four games in Dixie before returning home for a three-game series with Montreal, the East's fifth-place team.

While the Cubs have been mopping up on the league's weak sisters, the Cubs' detractors have been pointing at the schedule with disdain. Thirteen of the 14 wins during the May streak have come against Atlanta, Montreal, Houston and San Diego — possibly the four worst teams in baseball and certainly four teams with a dearth of pitching talent.

"San Diego's really hurting for pitching," admitted Cub manager Herman Franks after Tuesday's 23-6 swamping of the Padres. "I'm glad we're not in their position — I know what that's like."

The Cubs will finally get to see Pittsburgh a week from Friday when the Pirates come to Wrigley Field for a three-game set. At that time, the Cubs' pitching staff may get their first real major league test in more than a month.

Franks' regular rotation in Atlanta may be altered slightly because of the day off Wednesday. Bill Bonham, 5-2, may pitch Saturday instead of rookie Mike Krukow, 3-2. Krukow would then pitch on Sunday. Ray Burris, 5-4, is due to work Friday night.

The first three games of the Atlanta series are to be played under the lights.

INDIANAPOLIS — "There's not a guy in need here who wouldn't take my help. Yet when I help Janet everyone says, 'Let the broad do her own work.' "

So says Dick Simon, veteran race driver who occupies a unique position at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. Simon, who in eight years at Indy has earned the respect of his peers as someone who knows his trade well, is the teammate of Janet Guthrie, who's trying to become the first woman ever to make the Indianapolis 500.

Simon has taken a back seat, publicity wise, thanks to Guthrie, who draws reporters to Garage No. 5 of Gasoline Alley like Billy Carter draws barflies. However that doesn't bother the 43-year old former ski jumper whose small stature and bald head make him look more like an accountant than daredevil. What does bother him is — well, male chauvanism.

SIMON KNOWS how to sort out a race car as well as anyone. Last year here, he spent almost as much time in Guthrie's car trying to work out the bugs, as he did in his own. Over the winter he flew East to work out the problems with Guthrie's stock car. But Rolla Vollstedt, who heads the Simon-Guthrie stable, is now hesitant to put Simon into Guthrie's car for any reason, lest it look like he's favoring Janet.

"It's my ability to relate to the team what the car's doing that makes me valuable," said Simon. "But now I can't do that for Janet."

Many seem to be waiting for Simon to take over for Guthrie and the fact that Simon smashed up his car Tuesday when he brushed the wall in practice, won't help matters much.

"The other day I ran out to the line with my helmet on and five reporters came running up, asking if Rolla had made a decision on whether I would qualify Janet's car for her. I couldn't believe it."

SIMON IS SENSITIVE since several years ago he was in a similar situation. He helped rookie John Mahler get into the race in Simon's backup car, then was heavily criticized when he took over Mahler's car after his own was bumped from the race.

"I let Mahler use my extra car and gave him 1,500 miles of practice, so much he wore out an engine. I had him follow me around the track to find the groove. I did everything I could as a driver for him. Then when my car got bumped, I took over for

Woolf: 'Let's keep salaries in line'

by FRED LIEF

NEW YORK — In November of 1964, Earl Wilson, a muscular right-hander with a live fast ball, crumpled his car in an automobile accident and wound up in the law office of Bob Woolf.

Woolf, a Boston attorney and part-time sports junkie, eventually became Wilson's friend and financial adviser. Two years later he helped Wilson negotiate his contract with the Detroit Tiger and quietly set the stage for a revolution that would shake the sports community from one end of the playing field to the other.

Today, the 49-year-old Woolf is president of his own company which represents more than 300 athletes, is affiliated with the largest talent and entertainment agency in the world and carries as much wallop on the sports scene as a .340 hitter.

"WHEN I FIRST started out," Woolf was saying recently, "the athlete was grossly underpaid with no rights or security provisions. Now the pendulum has swung the other way. It is management that is taking all the risks. We can't reach the point where the astronomical salaries of a few superstars are going to bring down the entire sports industry."

These are strange words to be coming from someone who has hammered out contracts for the likes of Julius Erving, Derek Sanderson, Carl Yastrzemski, John Havlicek, Jim Plunkett, Marvin Barnes and Luis Tiant.

His roster of clients could help balance the national deficit so it is odd to hear Woolf talk about the dangers of big money.

"The idea is not to create a system to ruin the sports business," he says. "Some athletes want to grab everything they can. But the idea is to leave something on the table so everyone can have a piece of the pie. I've represented people who don't have a job now and wish they had a team to play for at a smaller salary. Ltt's keep the salaries in line."

IT IS SUCH talk that brings a measure of reassurance to someone like M. Donald Grant of the New York Mets or Calvin Griffith of the Minnesota Twins, two of baseball's more close-fisted executives.

But Woolf is not about to switch seats at the bargaining table. His loyalite lie with his clients and it is primarily management, he claims, which has created the chaos.

"Most of the ills are caused by the owners," he says. "There are good owkers and bad owners but it's the owner who uses the club as a plaything that causes problems."

Woolf has been through the financial upheavals of the World Football League, the American Basketball Assn. and the World Hockey Assn. and comes away from it all with an uncomfortable feeling.

"MOST OF THE men who run the sports establishment have only the slightest idea what they're selling. The owners don't trust each other. Ethics that are taken for granted in a more conventional business are abandoned altogether. Owners will raid each other's talent, cheat on rules and look for an advantage at the risk of ruining a league."

When the Philadelphia Blazers, one of the WHA's aborted franchises, lured Derek Sanderson to play for them, they said they would make him the highest paid athlete in the world. The Blazers, never really prepared to fulfill their end of the contract, later spent their time looking for loopholes and Sanderson was soon headed back to the NHL

It is these flights into financial fancy, Woolf says that have brought down more than one team.

But while the owners and players endanger the sports industry it is his own ilk, the agents, who contribute as well.

"THERE ARE representatives now who are in areas where they don't belong. There are some agents insisting that their client be a starting pitcher or a third baseman or whatever — that's absurd. He shouldn't have any say in the team."

As the infighting continues and the multi-million dollar facts dominate the headlines, Woolf finds it curious that the athletes have been singled out as the financial carnivores.

"Why is it no one says anything when Frank Sinatra or Sammy Davis Jr. or Wayne Newton make so many millions? Or an actor gets $1 million for a picture and the picture is lousy? But let an athlete sign for so much and everyone wants him to hit 1,000.

"The fans, I suppose, resent all the commercialism. Sports was considered the last place to look for fairness and decency. Now the word 'sport' doesn't even apply any more, if by it we mean humility, modesty and the willingness to subordinate one's interest to those of the team."

WITH SOME 300 clients on his hands and some 300 contracts to negotiate, these are busy times for Bob Woolf.

"I took a Sunday off a while ago and went to the Cape (Cod)," said the Maine-born Woolf, who keeps two telephones in his car. "I'm sitting in front of the TV and I start getting phone calls: Russ Francis pulled a hamstring muscle, Kevin Restani broke his ribs, Tony White of the Washington Capitals was suspended for five games and Joe Theismann was involved in a crucial game. Then I get a call from Derek Sanderson in Hawaii complaining there's no hot water in his hotel room.

"Sometimes I'm at a game," he says, "and I've got players on both teams and I'm cheering for both sides. The people look around and wonder who is this schizophrenic? They think I'm nuts."

inning by Chet Lemon, Eric Soderholm and Jim Essian that brought in a run.

Steve Mingori came on in relief of Leonard and didn't get the side out until after Jorge Orta singled in the seventh Sox run.

Soderholm was 4-for-4 on the night, scoring twice and driving in a run. The Sox third baseman had last played on Friday and said the four-day rest was too much for his sore knee.

"It's an arthritic type ache and four days off seemed to make it ache more. Somewhere in between there's a right formula, perhaps just two days," said Soderholm. (Bob) Lemon has been super in helping me work out the right formula for rest, though."

The Royals are struggling without the services of their two top hitters, George Brett and Amos Otis, who are both out with injuries. The two were one-two in hitting in the American League last year and one-two in the Royals' batting order. The void without them is substantial. Brett may see action tonight when the series concludes.

Manager Lemon said he didn't mind the chorus of boos when he hooked Knapp, who had struck out four and walked three. Knapp's only real faupax came in the sixth when Darrell Porter crunched a solo homer to right center for the second Kansas City run.

"I once took out a guy in Seattle who had 17 strikeouts," Lemon said. "But he had given up five runs and everything they hit were ropes."

"I knew the big guy (John Mayberry) was coming up. But the fans can boo all they want — when we win."

the expansiveness of Comiskey Park was pointed out by the umpiring crew of all people Wednesday. The umps displayed a new shift with the bases empty that put the second base umpire out in left-or right-center, depending on the hitter. Crew chief Lou DiMuro explained:

"Here in this park there can be a lot of fan interference," DiMuro said, pointing out the reason for getting an umpire into the outfield. "But we didn't think he (second base ump Bill Deegan) was out that much further than usual."

Sox owner Bill Veeck saw it more simply.

"I think they just wanted the exercise."

Mahler (who wts the fastest rookie at the track that year) and was crucified in the press.

Even though I proved I could get into Mahler's car and driver it three miles-per-hour faster than he and that I had a contract to drive for Travelodge, (the car's sponsor) it didn't make any difference. I got hundreds of nasty letters, some of them threatening, from people who were upset because I bumped Mahler. I thought I'd get shot in the parade."

"Can you imagine if I helped Janet like I helped Mahler? Yet nobody thought anything of my helping Mahler because he wasn't a woman."

BUT THAT INCIDENT hasn't cooled Simon's knack for helping people, nor does it bother him to work in the shadow of Guthrie.

"The only thing I'm risking is that someday, the sponsor might say, 'Hey, Simon's a shadow, let's get somebody else.' When Janet's gone they might not want me, and then I'd have to start all over getting known again because I've been keeping a low profile lately."

"There's no question that if she wasn't in the picture, I'd be back on TV and radio every day. But I'm business oriented. If I have an easy road to get publicity for Bryant Heating and Air conditioning (his car's sponsor), which road do you think I'll take? That's what pays the bills."

Simon has remained in race car driving despite a great success in the business world. In fact, Simon, who nearly made the 1960 olympics as a ski jumper and also sky dives, scuba dives and flies his own plane, has been phenomenally successful.

HE ENTERED THE insurance business in 1965 and in three months had sold $2.5-million worth of business, a fact that impressed the board of directors so much they made him president of the company.

But there have been failures, too. His first marriage ended in divorce and bitter court fights. The settlement gave him 20 per cent of his insurance income, a fact which led to his resignation. He's now on marriage number three.

"I'm not perfect. Between selling and running the insurance company and racing, I wasn't spending much time at home being a good father or husband.

"The last two years I've been trying to regroup. I'm not successful in everything, I guess."

SIMON HAS FINISHED 13th once here at Indy and that's been his best effort. Three times he was 14th. Last year he got in one lap before dropping out with mechanical troubles. Now with his car crippled four days before the final weekend of time trials, he'll have to scramble to make the race.

The conversation inevitably turns back to Guthrie.

"Bobby Unser was tearing his hair out last week because he had virtually the same kind of car as Janet, but was going eight miles an hour slower. Yet with his talent and ability he soon surpassed nearly everyone.

"Now if he had a backup car, would anyone think anything wrong with him helping to get that car in the race? A lot of times around here, you not only have to overcome the equipment, you have to overcome the people too."

Woolf: 'Let's keep salaries in line'

by FRED LIEF

NEW YORK — In November of 1964, Earl Wilson, a muscular right-hander with a live fast ball, crumpled his car in an automobile accident and wound up in the law office of Bob Woolf.

Woolf, a Boston attorney and part-time sports junkie, eventually became Wilson's friend and financial adviser. Two years later he helped Wilson negotiate his contract with the Detroit Tiger and quietly set the stage for a revolution that would shake the sports community from one end of the playing field to the other.

Today, the 49-year-old Woolf is president of his own company which represents more than 300 athletes, is affiliated with the largest talent and entertainment agency in the world and carries as much wallop on the sports scene as a .340 hitter.

"WHEN I FIRST started out," Woolf was saying recently, "the athlete was grossly underpaid with no rights or security provisions. Now the pendulum has swung the other way. It is management that is taking all the risks. We can't reach the point where the astronomical salaries of a few superstars are going to bring down the entire sports industry."

These are strange words to be coming from someone who has hammered out contracts for the likes of Julius Erving, Derek Sanderson, Carl Yastrzemski, John Havlicek, Jim Plunkett, Marvin Barnes and Luis Tiant.

His roster of clients could help balance the national deficit so it is odd to hear Woolf talk about the dangers of big money.

"The idea is not to create a system to ruin the sports business," he says. "Some athletes want to grab everything they can. But the idea is to leave something on the table so everyone can have a piece of the pie. I've represented people who don't have a job now and wish they had a team to play for at a smaller salary. Ltt's keep the salaries in line."

Saxons snap losing streak

Mustangs tame Knights

Mid-Suburban baseball report

Someone finally knocked off Prospect Wednesday but it was probably too little too late.

Rolling Meadows, behind the hurling of veteran moundsman Dennis Drolet, tamed the Nights 6-3 to remain mathematically capable of still grabbing first place in the Mid-Suburban's South Division.

Forest View also won, 5-2, over Elk Grove and they still are in distant contention. Both Meadows and the Falcons have six losses. Prospect now has just two defeats with five games left to play.

DROLET FANNED 11 and walked just one in raising his loop slate to 4-5. The Mustangs supported him with a five-run outburst in the fifth after the Knights had eased ahead 2-1 in the top of the inning.

Keith Brown walked to open the rally and Steve Alt doubled him home. After two strikeouts Bill Bilsley and Drolet walked to load the bases and John Mich singled in two runners.

Tom Hopkins walked next and Bill Hopkins and Brown followed up with RBI singles to cap the inning.

FOREST VIEW put together a three-run rally in the third to carry them past the hosting Grenadiers. Bob Koch went the distance on the hill for the Falcons to gain the winning verdict.

Jeff Martinski initiated the key explosion with a single and Terry Greco doubled. Don Wiora then laid down a suicide squeeze to bring in one run and after Jeff Nelson's walk, Ron Laramie doubled home two more runs.

Another suicide squeeze and Larry Dahl's single drove in the other Falcon runs. Elk Grove rang up their scores on singles by Joe Cannizzo and Phil Willis.

SCHAUMBURG fashioned a five-run bombardment in the eighth inning to snap their 12-game losing streak by toppling Conant, 11-6.

Tim McCue slammed a two-run homer to trigger the big Schaumburg rally and win the game for route-going Saxon twirler Dan Taylor.

Taylor survived a 15-hit Cougar attack that included four hits by Carmen Zepeda, three hits including two doubles and two RBIs by Dan Mullin and a homer and double by Roger Schweigert.

Taylor himself banged out four hits and teammate Rick Baker had a pair of safeties.

ARLINGTON OUTLASTED Hoffman Estates 14-13 in a nine-inning makeup slugfest, the Cardinals banging out 18 hits.

Sophomore Chris Burkette, in his first varisty mound appearance, nailed down the victory while Chuck Gilman, in only his third trip to the plate this year, drove in the winning run on a check-swing single with the bases loaded.

The Cards sailed into the fifth with a 9-2 lead but the Hawks rebounded to take a 13-12 heading going into the bottom of the seventh. With two outs then John Mertins, who had singled and stole second, raced all the way around to score on Frank DeSimone's infield tapper.

Mertins also hit a homer and had a three-for-five day while finishing up the game at shortstop. Andy Hzucha chipped in with a homer and triple and Scott Kempton added three hits to the winning cause.

A THREE-RUN, seventh inning rally gave Maine West's Warriors a 6-3 victory over Glenbrook South's Titans in Glenview. The victory helped West maintain its first place spot in the Central Suburban League South Division varsity baseball standings (9-3). Over-all, the Warriors are 18-5.

West led 3-0 in the fifth inning, but Glenbrook scored one run in the bottom of the fifth and two an inning later to forge a 3-3 tie. Maine's seventh inning explosion, however, then cinched the win. Bob Zuccarini's home run highlighted the Warrior win effort.

Maine West has only two games remaining. They'll play Friday (tomorrow) at Maine East and host Niles East Monday, May 23. Both CSL South contests start at 4:15 p.m.

Atlanta changes direction

NL baseball

The Atlanta Braves, who visited Chicago last week in the depths of a long losing streak, will welcome the Cubs into their own ball park tonight on the heels of a modest win skein after knocking off Montreal Wednesday, 10-8.

It was the third straight victory for the cellar-dwelling Braves and the eighth loss in a row absorbed by the Expos.

Biff Pocoroba, whose grand slam homer won the game Tuesday, drove home two runs and scored three others to spark the Wednesday triumph.

IN OTHER National League action Los Angeles nipped Philadelphia, St. Louis dumped Houston, New York blanked San Francisco and Cincinnati clubbed Pittsburgh.

A suddenly-striking storm delayed the Atlanta game for an hour when the Braves were leading by 8-5 after 5½ innings. Pocoroba slammed his third homer of the season to give winner Jamie Easterley a 1-0 lead in the second inning before doubling home the first of three more runs in the fourth.

Dave Lopes singled home a pair of fourth inning runs and Reggie Smith added a two-run homer in the seventh to spark the Dodgers to a 6-4 victory over the Phillies.

KEN REITZ and Mike Tyson drove in two runs each to lead the Cardinals to an 8-4 victory over the Astros.

THE CARDS broke a 4-4 tie with two out in the seventh on a single by Bake McBride and a double by Ted Simmons plus a bad relay to the plate by Art Howe.

Lenny Randle doubled and scored on a wild pitch in the third inning to back the five-hit pitching of Jon Matlack and give the Mets a 2-0 shutout over the Giants.

Matlack struck out seven and walked none in pitching his second straight shutout and improving his record to 3-3.

Bob Bailey drove in three runs with a single and a sacrifice fly and the Reds, capitalizing on the wildness of Jerry Reuss, scored four runs in the first inning for an 8-3 victory over the Pirates.

Texas wins as Perry sets marks

AL baseball

Gaylord Perry recorded his 2,700th strikeout Wednesday night and became only the third pitcher to win 100 games in both the American and National Leagues, shaking off a poor start to help Texas score a 6-3 win over the Detroit Tigers.

In one other American League contest Milwaukee edged Toronto, 3-2.

Perry was almost taken out of the game in the first inning after allowing three runs — two on a double by Steve Kemp. But he allowed only three hits after the first and retired the last 17 batters he faced.

The Rangers rallied for five runs in the fourth with an RBI double by Toby Harrah and a bases-loaded single by John Ellis the key blows.

Perry, sixth on the all-time strikeout list, reached the 2,700 mark when Jason Thompson fanned in the fifth. The 38-year-old right-hander, who had lost four games in a row before throwing a shutout last week, joined Cy Young and Jim Bunning as the only pitchers to win 100 games in both leagues.

Robin Yount's third single of the game scored Sixto Lezcano with two out in the 10th inning to give the Brewers a 3-2 victory over the Blue Jays. Lezcano led off the inning with a single and moved to second on a sacrifice by Steve Brye. One out later, losing pitcher Pete Vuckovich then gave up Yount's single to left to end the game.

Saxons snap losing streak

Mustangs tame Knights

Mid-Suburban baseball report

Someone finally knocked off Prospect Wednesday but it was probably too little too late.

Rolling Meadows, behind the hurling of veteran moundsman Dennis Drolet, tamed the Nights 6-3 to remain mathematically capable of still grabbing first place in the Mid-Suburban's South Division.

Forest View also won, 5-2, over Elk Grove and they still are in distant contention. Both Meadows and the Falcons have six losses. Prospect now has just two defeats with five games left to play.

DROLET FANNED 11 and walked just one in raising his loop slate to 4-5. The Mustangs supported him with a five-run outburst in the fifth after the Knights had eased ahead 2-1 in the top of the inning.

Keith Brown walked to open the rally and Steve Alt doubled him home. After two strikeouts Bill Bilsley and Drolet walked to load the bases and John Mich singled in two runners.

Tom Hopkins walked next and Bill Hopkins and Brown followed up with RBI singles to cap the inning.

FOREST VIEW put together a three-run rally in the third to carry them past the hosting Grenadiers. Bob Koch went the distance on the hill for the Falcons to gain the winning verdict.

Jeff Martinski initiated the key explosion with a single and Terry Greco doubled. Don Wiora then laid down a suicide squeeze to bring in one run and after Jeff Nelson's walk, Ron Laramie doubled home two more runs.

Another suicide squeeze and Larry Dahl's single drove in the other Falcon runs. Elk Grove rang up their scores on singles by Joe Cannizzo and Phil Willis.

SCHAUMBURG fashioned a five-run bombardment in the eighth inning to snap their 12-game losing streak by toppling Conant, 11-6.

Tim McCue slammed a two-run homer to trigger the big Schaumburg rally and win the game for route-going Saxon twirler Dan Taylor.

Taylor survived a 15-hit Cougar attack that included four hits by Carmen Zepeda, three hits including two doubles and two RBIs by Dan Mullin and a homer and double by Roger Schweigert.

Taylor himself banged out four hits and teammate Rick Baker had a pair of safeties.

ARLINGTON OUTLASTED Hoffman Estates 14-13 in a nine-inning makeup slugfest, the Cardinals banging out 18 hits.

Sophomore Chris Burkette, in his first varisty mound appearance, nailed down the victory while Chuck Gilman, in only his third trip to the plate this year, drove in the winning run on a check-swing single with the bases loaded.

The Cards sailed into the fifth with a 9-2 lead but the Hawks rebounded to take a 13-12 heading going into the bottom of the seventh. With two outs then John Mertins, who had singled and stole second, raced all the way around to score on Frank DeSimone's infield tapper.

Mertins also hit a homer and had a three-for-five day while finishing up the game at shortstop. Andy Hzucha chipped in with a homer and triple and Scott Kempton added three hits to the winning cause.

A THREE-RUN, seventh inning rally gave Maine West's Warriors a 6-3 victory over Glenbrook South's Titans in Glenview. The victory helped West maintain its first place spot in the Central Suburban League South Division varsity baseball standings (9-3). Over-all, the Warriors are 18-5.

West led 3-0 in the fifth inning, but Glenbrook scored one run in the bottom of the fifth and two an inning later to forge a 3-3 tie. Maine's seventh inning explosion, however, then cinched the win. Bob Zuccarini's home run highlighted the Warrior win effort.

Maine West has only two games remaining. They'll play Friday (tomorrow) at Maine East and host Niles East Monday, May 23. Both CSL South contests start at 4:15 p.m.

Atlanta changes direction

NL baseball

The Atlanta Braves, who visited Chicago last week in the depths of a long losing streak, will welcome the Cubs into their own ball park tonight on the heels of a modest win skein after knocking off Montreal Wednesday, 10-8.

It was the third straight victory for the cellar-dwelling Braves and the eighth loss in a row absorbed by the Expos.

Biff Pocoroba, whose grand slam homer won the game Tuesday, drove home two runs and scored three others to spark the Wednesday triumph.

IN OTHER National League action Los Angeles nipped Philadelphia, St. Louis dumped Houston, New York blanked San Francisco and Cincinnati clubbed Pittsburgh.

A suddenly-striking storm delayed the Atlanta game for an hour when the Braves were leading by 8-5 after 5½ innings. Pocoroba slammed his third homer of the season to give winner Jamie Easterley a 1-0 lead in the second inning before doubling home the first of three more runs in the fourth.

Dave Lopes singled home a pair of fourth inning runs and Reggie Smith added a two-run homer in the seventh to spark the Dodgers to a 6-4 victory over the Phillies.

KEN REITZ and Mike Tyson drove in two runs each to lead the Cardinals to an 8-4 victory over the Astros.

THE CARDS broke a 4-4 tie with two out in the seventh on a single by Bake McBride and a double by Ted Simmons plus a bad relay to the plate by Art Howe.

Lenny Randle doubled and scored on a wild pitch in the third inning to back the five-hit pitching of Jon Matlack and give the Mets a 2-0 shutout over the Giants.

Matlack struck out seven and walked none in pitching his second straight shutout and improving his record to 3-3.

Bob Bailey drove in three runs with a single and a sacrifice fly and the Reds, capitalizing on the wildness of Jerry Reuss, scored four runs in the first inning for an 8-3 victory over the Pirates.

Texas wins as Perry sets marks

AL baseball

Gaylord Perry recorded his 2,700th strikeout Wednesday night and became only the third pitcher to win 100 games in both the American and National Leagues, shaking off a poor start to help Texas score a 6-3 win over the Detroit Tigers.

In one other American League contest Milwaukee edged Toronto, 3-2.

Perry was almost taken out of the game in the first inning after allowing three runs — two on a double by Steve Kemp. But he allowed only three hits after the first and retired the last 17 batters he faced.

The Rangers rallied for five runs in the fourth with an RBI double by Toby Harrah and a bases-loaded single by John Ellis the key blows.

Perry, sixth on the all-time strikeout list, reached the 2,700 mark when Jason Thompson fanned in the fifth. The 38-year-old right-hander, who had lost four games in a row before throwing a shutout last week, joined Cy Young and Jim Bunning as the only pitchers to win 100 games in both leagues.

Robin Yount's third single of the game scored Sixto Lezcano with two out in the 10th inning to give the Brewers a 3-2 victory over the Blue Jays. Lezcano led off the inning with a single and moved to second on a sacrifice by Steve Brye. One out later, losing pitcher Pete Vuckovich then gave up Yount's single to left to end the game.

INSIDE TRACK. Tom Sneva sits in the cockpit of the Penske-McClaren he will take to the pole position at this Sunday's Indianapolis 500 after setting a new track record of 199.884 MPH. Wednesday qualifying times were much slower as hot weather drove the track temperature to the 133 degree mark.

Temperature climbs, speeds drop at Indy

INDIANAPOLIS — The track temperature soared to 133 degrees Wednesday, drastically curtailing preparations for the final weekend of 500-mile auto race qualifications.

With only two hours of practice left for the day, just 15 cars had made practice runs. None averaged 190 miles per hour around the 2½ mile oval. Weather prospects for Thursday, the next to last full day of practice for this year's million dollar race May 29, were the same as for Wednesday: Hot and humid with a high of 90 degrees.

A qualified car driven by Johnny Parsons logged the fastest practice lap at 189.9 mph. Roger McCluskey was clocked at 183.3.

"The hot weather makes engines run bad and you can say the same about tires," said Jack Beckley, for years one of the most prominent "500" chief mechanics and now a key official on the United States Auto Club Technical Committee.

"For the non-qualified teams, the pressure is definitely building up," Beckley said. "If they can't get speeds of 187 or better, they're all sweating it out. Of course, if the hot weather continues, they may have to settle for lower speeds."

Upsets mount in Italian tennis meet

ROME — Seven top players, including second-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, fifth-seeded Raul Ramirez of Mexico and seventh-seeded Roscoe Tanner of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., were beaten Wednesday in a day of mass upsets in the Italian International Tennis Championships.

Yugolsavia's Zeljko Franulovic scored the biggest surprise of all by defeating Vilas 7-5, 6-4, before 4,000 startled fans at the clay center court of the Mussolini-built Foro Italico.

Franulovic, who shines on a slow court, couldn't have been happier with the soggy clay surface and sporadic rain which hampered the Argentinian.

The second-biggest upset of the day came when 25-year-old Australian Kim Warwick defeated Ramirez, 4-6, 6-2, 6-4.

While both Vilas and Ramirez were dropped on second round play, Tanner didn't make it past the first. The American lost to Bernie Mitton of South Africa 4-6, 6-3, 6-4. Mitton then went on to lose to Ion Tiriac of Romania.

Suspension possible for Slew jockey

NEW YORK — Jockey Jean Cruguet, who rode Seattle Slew to victory in the Kentucky Derby, could miss Saturday's Preakness Stakes because of a disqualification in the sixth race at Aqueduct Wednesday.

Aqueduct stewards were scheduled to meet at noon Thursday to decide what, if any, action to bring against Cruguet after his mount, Lady Singer, interfered with two horses early in the race and was disqualified from fourth to last.

It was considered conceivable, though not probable, the stewards could suspend Cruguet for a period of time that would include Saturday's running of the Preakness at Pimlico, the middle leg of the Triple Crown.

Light heavyweight stripped of title

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's John Conteh claimed Wednesday he was still world light-heavyweight champion despite being stripped of his title by the World Boxing Council.

The WBC dethroned Conteh for refusing to go ahead with Saturday's title defense against Argentinian Miguel Angel Cuello in Monte Carlo.

James Deskin, Las Vegas-based vice president of the WBC, sent a telegram to the British Boxing Board of Control Wednesday saying: "Due to failure of John Conteh to fulfill the contract to meet Miguel Cuello in accordance with rules and regulations of WBC, the title will be vacated immediately." The WBC then nominated Californian Jesse Burnett as Cuello's opponent in a match for the vacant crown.

Redskins rehire Allen for five years

WASHINGTON — George Allen has reached agreement for a five-year extension of his contract to coach the Washington Redskins, the Washington Star reported Wednesday.

The newspaper said Allen would get a raise, possibly as much as $25,000, over his current $125,000 annual salary and several fringe benefits.

The Redskins office was caught unprepared by the report and Allen was unavailable for comment. Spokesman Michael Menshel said Allen was out of town, would be meeting his wife returning from Paris and "I can guarantee they will go out somewhere."

INSIDE TRACK. Tom Sneva sits in the cockpit of the Penske-McClaren he will take to the pole position at this Sunday's Indianapolis 500 after setting a new track record of 199.884 MPH. Wednesday qualifying times were much slower as hot weather drove the track temperature to the 133 degree mark.

Temperature climbs, speeds drop at Indy

INDIANAPOLIS — The track temperature soared to 133 degrees Wednesday, drastically curtailing preparations for the final weekend of 500-mile auto race qualifications.

With only two hours of practice left for the day, just 15 cars had made practice runs. None averaged 190 miles per hour around the 2½ mile oval. Weather prospects for Thursday, the next to last full day of practice for this year's million dollar race May 29, were the same as for Wednesday: Hot and humid with a high of 90 degrees.

A qualified car driven by Johnny Parsons logged the fastest practice lap at 189.9 mph. Roger McCluskey was clocked at 183.3.

"The hot weather makes engines run bad and you can say the same about tires," said Jack Beckley, for years one of the most prominent "500" chief mechanics and now a key official on the United States Auto Club Technical Committee.

"For the non-qualified teams, the pressure is definitely building up," Beckley said. "If they can't get speeds of 187 or better, they're all sweating it out. Of course, if the hot weather continues, they may have to settle for lower speeds."

Upsets mount in Italian tennis meet

ROME — Seven top players, including second-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, fifth-seeded Raul Ramirez of Mexico and seventh-seeded Roscoe Tanner of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., were beaten Wednesday in a day of mass upsets in the Italian International Tennis Championships.

Yugolsavia's Zeljko Franulovic scored the biggest surprise of all by defeating Vilas 7-5, 6-4, before 4,000 startled fans at the clay center court of the Mussolini-built Foro Italico.

Franulovic, who shines on a slow court, couldn't have been happier with the soggy clay surface and sporadic rain which hampered the Argentinian.

The second-biggest upset of the day came when 25-year-old Australian Kim Warwick defeated Ramirez, 4-6, 6-2, 6-4.

While both Vilas and Ramirez were dropped on second round play, Tanner didn't make it past the first. The American lost to Bernie Mitton of South Africa 4-6, 6-3, 6-4. Mitton then went on to lose to Ion Tiriac of Romania.

Suspension possible for Slew jockey

NEW YORK — Jockey Jean Cruguet, who rode Seattle Slew to victory in the Kentucky Derby, could miss Saturday's Preakness Stakes because of a disqualification in the sixth race at Aqueduct Wednesday.

Aqueduct stewards were scheduled to meet at noon Thursday to decide what, if any, action to bring against Cruguet after his mount, Lady Singer, interfered with two horses early in the race and was disqualified from fourth to last.

It was considered conceivable, though not probable, the stewards could suspend Cruguet for a period of time that would include Saturday's running of the Preakness at Pimlico, the middle leg of the Triple Crown.

Light heavyweight stripped of title

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's John Conteh claimed Wednesday he was still world light-heavyweight champion despite being stripped of his title by the World Boxing Council.

The WBC dethroned Conteh for refusing to go ahead with Saturday's title defense against Argentinian Miguel Angel Cuello in Monte Carlo.

James Deskin, Las Vegas-based vice president of the WBC, sent a telegram to the British Boxing Board of Control Wednesday saying: "Due to failure of John Conteh to fulfill the contract to meet Miguel Cuello in accordance with rules and regulations of WBC, the title will be vacated immediately." The WBC then nominated Californian Jesse Burnett as Cuello's opponent in a match for the vacant crown.

Redskins rehire Allen for five years

WASHINGTON — George Allen has reached agreement for a five-year extension of his contract to coach the Washington Redskins, the Washington Star reported Wednesday.

The newspaper said Allen would get a raise, possibly as much as $25,000, over his current $125,000 annual salary and several fringe benefits.

The Redskins office was caught unprepared by the report and Allen was unavailable for comment. Spokesman Michael Menshel said Allen was out of town, would be meeting his wife returning from Paris and "I can guarantee they will go out somewhere."

Set a spring table for brunch

Brunch can be beautiful! It is a festive way of celebrating the return of warm weather. An apricot, coconut and peanut topping adds a different taste to a brunch-sized slice of ham. Asparagus, rolls and a cheesecake-like dessert make a pretty and delicious display on the table. Add hot, foaming milk to extend the coffee, served in your prettiest cups.

APRICOT-PEANUT HAM SLICE

1 ½-inch thick fully cooked smoked ham slice (3 to 3½ pounds)
Whole cloves
½ cup firmly packed brown sugar
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
1 tablespoon vinegar
½ cup apricot preserves
⅓ cup flaked or shredded coconut
¼ cup chopped peanuts
2 tablespoons finely chopped candied ginger

Remove rind from ham slice; score fat. Stud with cloves. Place ham on a rack in shallow baking pan. Combine brown sugar, vinegar and mustard. Spread over top of ham. Bake in preheated 325 degree oven 1½ hours, basting occasionally. Combine preserves, coconut, peanuts and ginger. Spread over ham slice. Bake an additional 15 minutes. Serves 6 to 8.

LEMON CHEESE SAUCE

2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
Dash salt
1 cup milk
1 cup (4 ounces) shredded Cheddar cheese
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 tablespoon grated lemon peel
1 teaspoon lemon juice

BUTTER DAFFODIL

Use 1 stick (¼ pound) butter. Dip butter curler in hot water before making each curl. Turn butter stick over, arrange curls on top for flower petals; add 2 green pepper sticks for leaves. Chill.

CAFE AU LAIT

4 cups milk
4 cups hot coffee

Heat milk in heavy saucepan over low heat, beating constantly until hot and foamy. Pour milk into a warmed 1-quart serving pitcher. Pour coffee into a second warmed 1-quart serving pitcher. Pour both simultaneously into cups so that milk and coffee blend as they are poured. Serves 8 to 10.

CHEESE-STRAWBERRY CREME

2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
½ cup water
¾ cup milk
3 cups cottage cheese
⅓ cup dairy sour cream
¾ cup sugar

½ cup (1 stick) butter
2 eggs
½ cup ground almonds

Almond Filling:

1 can (8 ounces) almond paste (NOT almond filling)
½ cup confectioners' sugar
¼ cup (½ stick) butter

Thoroughly combine 2 cups flour, sugar, salt and undissolved yeast in large mixing bowl. Heat together milk and butter until very warm (120-130 degrees). Gradually add to dry ingredients and beat 2 minutes on medium speed of mixer, scraping bowl occasionally. Add eggs and ½ cut flour. Beat 2 minutes at high speed, scraping bowl occasionally. Add almonds, stirring to blend well..

Stir in enough additional flour to make a soft dough. Turn out on a lightly floured surface; knead until smooth and elastic, about 5 minutes. Place in buttered large bowl, turning to butter top. Cover; let rise in warm place until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

Meanwhile, prepare filling. Cream almond paste, confectioners' sugar and butter together until thoroughly blended. Divide into 24 equal parts; shape into balls. Cover and set aside.

Hawaiian papaya proves a delicacy

Papaya is an exotic American tropical fruit that is new to millions in this country. Or, at least, we think it is.

However, for years it has been available in a dried form as a main ingredient in various commercial tenderizers and as canned fruit juice.

But those who first tasted this very special fruit in the flesh did so in the islands where papaya readily grows. Now Hawaiian papaya, for example, is shipped to all 49 other states and is well worth getting to know. It is versatile to eat raw with a squeeze of lemon or lime juice, poached, baked, served vinaigrette as a salad or pickled.

WHEN THE papaya is shipped it is green in color. Ripens easily and when ripe it becomes yellow or golden in color and will yield to slight pressure when held in the palm of the hand. Its flavor is described by some as a cross between a Crenshaw melon and a peach.

Not only is the papaya a pleasure to eat, but it also has been considered by nutritionists and doctors to be a good digestive and edible for all ages.

To eat raw, merely slice a fruit in half and remove the small black seeds in the center. Incidentally, the seeds are edible. Try them to see if you like their flavor, too.

HAWAIIAN FRUIT BOATS WITH MAIDEN HAIR

3 ripe Hawaiian papayas
1½ cups sliced sugared strawberries
3 egg yolks
1 cup dry white wine
Juice of one lemon
3 tablespoons sugar
A good pinch of ginger

Cut papayas in half. Scoop out seeds and fill hollows with strawberries. Beat rest of ingredients in top of double boiler until light and frothy. Spoon immediately over strawberries and papaya. Serves 6.

BAKED HAWAIIAN PAPAYA

2 Hawaiian papayas
Cinnamon
Nutmeg
4 teaspoons brown sugar
4 teaspoons butter or margarine
Lemon or lime wedges

Cut each papaya in half lengthwise. With spoon, scoop out seeds and discard. Sprinkle each papaya half with cinnamon, nutmeg and some of brown sugar. Place one teaspoon butter in hollow of each half. Place papayas, cut sides up, in baking pan or cookie sheet. Bake at 300 degrees for 30 minutes. Serve with lemon or lime wedges. Serves 4.

Cheesy garlic bread

You can really shake up summer tastes by serving cheesey garlic bread heated over the coals with whatever you're grilling. Garlic butter is made by creaming one-half cup, or one stick, of butter with a crushed garlic clove. If you're slicing long French bread or Vienna bread, butter it first, then insert American process cheese slices. Wrap the bread in foil, then heat for 15 to 20 minutes.

Bread crumbs

What's in a bread? As milk, sugar, shortening and eggs are added to doughs in increasing amounts, the doughs become progressively richer, accounting for most of the variations in yeast products. This is what separates Italian, French and Vienna breads, doughnuts and sweet rolls, Danish pastry and Baba rum cakes.

Penn. Dutch fare spells wholesome hospitality

Lois Seiler
Cook of the week

Pat MacKimm of Mount Prospect likes to put a personal touch on al lof her parties. She strives for uniqueness, making each festivity a memorable event.

Pat considers every detail, from original handmade invitations to the table decor and food, planning all around a central theme.

"I'll use any excuse for a party," she chuckled, and her ideas have run the gamut from a Blue Monday soup and salad luncheon to a cocktail party shower for her pregnant dog. Even the dog got in the spirit of things, presenting the MacKimms with 10 puppies while the party was in progress.

PAT IS AT her best when she entertains in the style of the Pennsylvania Dutch. A transplanted Easterner, she lived all her life in York, Penn., until her marriage to Bob a year and a half ago. Both married before, Pat and Bob have six children between them, although some are grown and no longer live at home.

"In Pennsylvania Dutch country, everyone cooks what is indigenous to the area," Pat explained. "The Amish bring their fantastic produce to market several times a week. Along with fresh fruits, vegetables and meat, there are homemade noodles, cheeses, baked goods, sausages and an endless variety of goodies and handicrafts. This isn't a tourist spot; it's where everyone comes to do their marketing, carrying everything home in a big basket."

Though she misses the markets and other facets of Pennsylvania life, Pat feels that the friendliness of the Midwest more than compensates. "Everyone has made me feel so welcome," she exclaimed.

While most Pennsylvania Dutch homemakers cook in the same manner, preparing plain but wholesome and tasty food and lots of it, the variety of recipes for similar-type foods is endless. Pat doesn't observe the quaint custom of seven sweets and seven sours, but she does include one or two of each in her menus. And noodles are a staple in everything from soup to dessert.

SHE SERVES Pennsylvania Dutch dinners at least once a week to the family, though they are more limited in scope than those she prepares for guests. Those menus are expansive, beginning with Chicken Corn Soup, hearty soup containing chicken, corn, potatoes and hard-boiled eggs. Pat serves this as a main course for a family meal, accompanied by egg and olive or chicken salad sandwiches.

"There are as many variations to this recipe as there are stars in the sky," Pat said. "In York County, noodles are not included, but purists insist on it "

Noodles are an essential ingredient in the entree, Boiled Chicken Pot Pie. Those homemade noodles puff up as they cook in a rich chicken broth which includes potatoes, onion and diced chicken. This dish could be likened to a chicken stew. It is made by an old recipe, which was ideal for a farmer's wife to take out to the field.

Although a whole chicken is cooked for both the soup and the boiled pot pie, not all of it is needed for either recipe.

"I can get a lot of mileage from a chicken, using two or three cups of diced meat in each recipe, saving the remainder for chicken salad or casseroles," Pat said.

Ham and string beans is an alternative main course, a hearty dish in which ham is cooked with potatoes, onion and green beans. The ham is sliced and the vegetables are served in the ham broth.

AS ACCOMPANIMENTS, Pat suggests a tangy three-bean salad and a

INTRODUCING KITTY MAGIC. IT WORKS LIKE THOUSANDS OF THIRSTY, LITTLE SPONGES TO SOAK UP ODOR ON CONTACT.

Cats Won't Turn Their Noses Up At It, Neither Will You. After all, your cat has a very keen sense of smell. He can easily smell something wrong, when something is wrong! And what's wrong with deodorant-type litter is the deodorant. One whiff and most cats run the other way. (Most people too!)

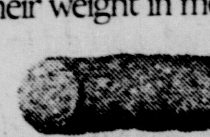
But Kitty Magic doesn't work that way. Because Kitty Magic is the first and only litter with 100% natural baking soda. Baking soda that reacts chemically to make the odor-causing acids odor-free! Try it. You and your cat will react very favorably.

Odor Is Soaked Up, Not Covered Up. Kitty Magic is not a cover-up. Unlike deodorant-type litters it does not hide odor with a stronger odor. It does work like a sponge works. Because Kitty Magic is made from spongy fiber pellets that actually absorb more than four times their weight in moisture!



Before. Highly absorbent natural organic fiber.

Kitty Magic Costs Less Because You Use Less. True, Kitty Magic costs a little more than ordinary litter. But it lasts longer so you use less. About 1/3 less! And the less you use, the more you save.

Literally Soaks Up Odor In The Litter Box. The problem is that moisture clings to the outer surface of ordinary litter. Which means ordinary clay litter turns to ordinary mud. And sticks to the bottom and sides of the box. But Kitty Magic absorbs moisture so the litter stays loose, dry and neat.

Put It In, It Stays Put. Kitty Magic starts out clean. First, we steam clean the natural organic fibers. Then, we vacuum clean the compressed pellets. The result: clean, smooth round pellets. Smooth like your cat likes. And large enough, heavy enough, to stay in the litter box. Like you like!

Look! It's Not Green. You and your cat can easily smell the difference. But you can see the difference too. Because Kitty Magic is totally different. Kitty Magic has no chlorophyll. So it has no strong chlorophyll odor. And no chlorophyll staining.

After. It works like a sponge to soak up odor on contact. One pellet holds more than four times its weight in moisture.

Hawaiian papaya proves a delicacy

Papaya is an exotic American tropical fruit that is new to millions in this country. Or, at least, we think it is.

However, for years it has been available in a dried form as a main ingredient in various commercial tenderizers and as canned fruit juice.

But those who first tasted this very special fruit in the flesh did so in the islands where papaya readily grows. Now Hawaiian papaya, for example, is shipped to all 49 other states and is well worth getting to know. It is versatile to eat raw with a squeeze of lemon or lime juice, poached, baked, served vinaigrette as a salad or pickled.

WHEN THE papaya is shipped it is green in color. Ripens easily and when ripe it becomes yellow or golden in color and will yield to slight pressure when held in the palm of the hand. Its flavor is described by some as a cross between a Crenshaw melon and a peach.

Not only is the papaya a pleasure to eat, but it also has been considered by nutritionists and doctors to be a good digestive and edible for all ages.

To eat raw, merely slice a fruit in half and remove the small black seeds in the center. Incidentally, the seeds are edible. Try them to see if you like their flavor, too.

HAWAIIAN FRUIT BOATS WITH MAIDEN HAIR

3 ripe Hawaiian papayas
1½ cups sliced sugared strawberries
3 egg yolks
1 cup dry white wine
Juice of one lemon
3 tablespoons sugar
A good pinch of ginger

Cut papayas in half. Scoop out seeds and fill hollows with strawberries. Beat rest of ingredients in top of double boiler until light and frothy. Spoon immediately over strawberries and papaya. Serves 6.

BAKED HAWAIIAN PAPAYA

2 Hawaiian papayas
Cinnamon
Nutmeg
4 teaspoons brown sugar
4 teaspoons butter or margarine
Lemon or lime wedges

Cut each papaya in half lengthwise. With spoon, scoop out seeds and discard. Sprinkle each papaya half with cinnamon, nutmeg and some of brown sugar. Place one teaspoon butter in hollow of each half. Place papayas, cut sides up, in baking pan or cookie sheet. Bake at 300 degrees for 30 minutes. Serve with lemon or lime wedges. Serves 4.

Cheesy garlic bread

You can really shake up summer tastes by serving cheesey garlic bread heated over the coals with whatever you're grilling. Garlic butter is made by creaming one-half cup, or one stick, of butter with a crushed garlic clove. If you're slicing long French bread or Vienna bread, butter it first, then insert American process cheese slices. Wrap the bread in foil, then heat for 15 to 20 minutes.

Bread crumbs

What's in a bread? As milk, sugar, shortening and eggs are added to doughs in increasing amounts, the doughs become progressively richer, accounting for most of the variations in yeast products. This is what separates Italian, French and Vienna breads, doughnuts and sweet rolls, Danish pastry and Baba rum cakes.

Italian bread has a very low-fat dough, a thick crust and compact texture. Bread sticks are made from this dough. French bread, like Italian, is low in fat, but contains more sugar. Vienna bread contains fat, sugar and usually egg. This is the dough usually used for hard rolls such as club, onion, salt sticks and Kaiser rolls; however, Italian or French dough may be used.

Soothe your sweet tooth

Has your sweet tooth been after you for a special treat? Soothe it with a simple meringue jam cake — which is basically a mix with topping — or an equally elegant and rich chocolate mousse that calls for just a wee bit more finesse, since it requires gentle blending of all the ingredients. Both desserts go a long way in pleasing that sweet tooth.

MERINGUE JAM CAKE

1 package (1pound 2.5 ounces) yellow cake mix
1 cup five fruit jam
3 egg whites
1/3 cup sugar
dash salt

Grease and lightly flour a 13 x 9 x 2-inch baking dish. Prepare cake mix according to package directions. Pour into prepared pan. Bake in 350-degree oven 35 to 40 minutes, or until cake tests done. Remove from oven; let cool 15 minutes. Spread jam on top of cake. Beat egg whites until stiff, gradually adding sugar and salt. Spread on top of jam, covering to seal edges. Return to oven; bake an additional 15 minutes or until meringue is lightly browned. Serves 12.

CHOCOLATE MOUSSE

6 ounces semi-sweet chocolate
2 teaspoons sugar
4 egg yolks
¼ cup instant coffee
1½ tablespoons rum (optional) or rum flavoring
2/3 cup heavy cream, chilled
4 egg whites

Melt the chocolate in a double boiler. Add the sugar to the egg yolks and beat until they become lemon colored. Gently (by hand) mix in the melted chocolate, coffee and rum. Whip the cream (which has been thoroughly chilled) until stiff and fold into the chocolate and egg mixture. Whip the egg whites until they form stiff peaks and fold them into the above mixture. Mix gently, by hand, then place the mousse into individual glass dessert dishes or goblets. Refrigerate for 24 hours. Serves 4.

'No-fuss' way to scramble eggs

Eileen Kelly

Let's learn to micro-cook

Scrambled eggs always are a welcome sight on the breakfast table or as a light supper. When cooked in the microwave oven, they are light and fluffy and effortless. The following recipe uses four eggs and makes two adult servings.

Use your one-quart glass casserole for this recipe. Melt one tablespoon of butter or margarine in the casserole by placing it in the microwave oven for about 15 seconds on high. Then add four eggs, one-quarter cup of milk one-quarter teaspoon of salt and a dash of freshly ground pepper. Beat this mixture with a fork to scramble the eggs. Cook in the microwave on high for two and a half to three minutes, stirring halfway through and then again at the end. Let the eggs stand to complete cooking. Don't be afraid to stir the eggs more frequently if you want to.

MAKING scrambled eggs is a good way to learn about the effect of stirring on foods cooked by microwaves. The food cooks from the outside towards the middle, and so to create a more even cooking situation you stir the mixture with a wooden spoon. When you stir you should always bring the food from the outside edges toward the middle.

Now by scrambling your eggs in the microwave oven, you have eliminated the egg-crusted frying pan and isn't that nice!! You also have eliminated any chance of burned eggs. And you have prepared your eggs in a container suitable for immediate placement on the table!

Pineapple ideas

Pitted ripe olives, small cherry tomatoes and canned Hawaiian pineapple chunks make a colorful spring salad. Sprinkle on a little crumbled blue cheese and toss with French dressing. Serve on crisp lettuce.

Top each cooked hamburger patty with a slice of canned Hawaiian pineapple. Sprinkle with grated cheddar and heat under broiler until cheese is melted and bubbly.

There's always room for this dessert

There's always room for dessert when it's this cool, creamy and brightly flavored. Dissolve 1 package (3-ounces) orange-pineapple flavored gelatin and 1/3 cup mint flavored apple jelly in 1 cup boiling water. Add fruit and juice from 1 can (8¼-ounce) crushed pineapple; chill until thickened.

Gently mix in ½ cup finely chopped toasted walnuts and ¼ cup flaked coconut. Beat 1 cup whipping cream until stiff; fold into gelatin mixture. Pour into 6 to 8 dessert dishes and chill until firm. Decorate with whipped cream and a sprinkling of crispy walnuts.

Is your house warming and cooling the neighborhood?

It may be a neighborly gesture, but hardly in the interests of energy conservation, your own pocketbook, or even your local community.

Home conditioning for warmth or coolness has become increasingly costly; it now threatens to skyrocket. Many houses are veritable conduits dispelling fuel into the surrounding atmosphere.

Now is the time to check the conservation capacity of your home. An investment in ceiling and wall insulation, storm windows and doors, caulking, and weather-stripping will repay itself over and over again in reduced costs of energy fuels. A national magazine recently placed average annual savings for a typical Chicago-area home at $234.87. There is also the possibility that Congress will approve tax rebates for owners who insulate their homes.

You can finance these improvements at lower cost at Arlington Federal. Our lending rates are substantially below the standard rates charged for installment credit.

This is an excellent time to upgrade your home energy efficiency. Stop conditioning the outside air. Call our loan counselors today at any of our seven offices. They'll be glad to tell you how easily it can be done.

Soothe your sweet tooth

Has your sweet tooth been after you for a special treat? Soothe it with a simple meringue jam cake — which is basically a mix with topping — or an equally elegant and rich chocolate mousse that calls for just a wee bit more finesse, since it requires gentle blending of all the ingredients. Both desserts go a long way in pleasing that sweet tooth.

MERINGUE JAM CAKE

1 package (1pound 2.5 ounces) yellow cake mix
1 cup five fruit jam
3 egg whites
1/3 cup sugar
dash salt

Grease and lightly flour a 13 x 9 x 2-inch baking dish. Prepare cake mix according to package directions. Pour into prepared pan. Bake in 350-degree oven 35 to 40 minutes, or until cake tests done. Remove from oven; let cool 15 minutes. Spread jam on top of cake. Beat egg whites until stiff, gradually adding sugar and salt. Spread on top of jam, covering to seal edges. Return to oven; bake an additional 15 minutes or until meringue is lightly browned. Serves 12.

CHOCOLATE MOUSSE

6 ounces semi-sweet chocolate
2 teaspoons sugar
4 egg yolks
¼ cup instant coffee
1½ tablespoons rum (optional) or rum flavoring
2/3 cup heavy cream, chilled
4 egg whites

Melt the chocolate in a double boiler. Add the sugar to the egg yolks and beat until they become lemon colored. Gently (by hand) mix in the melted chocolate, coffee and rum. Whip the cream (which has been thoroughly chilled) until stiff and fold into the chocolate and egg mixture. Whip the egg whites until they form stiff peaks and fold them into the above mixture. Mix gently, by hand, then place the mousse into individual glass dessert dishes or goblets. Refrigerate for 24 hours. Serves 4.

Got a gripe? FDA sets meeting for Tuesday

Suspicious of saccharin? Fed up with food additives?

Next Tuesday you'll have your chance to express your opinions and receive answers to your questions about these subjects. Dr. Donald Kennedy, Food and Drug Association commissioner, will hold a public hearing from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. at Thorne Hall, Northwestern University - Chicago campus, 740 N. Lake Shore Dr. (entrance on Superior Street). The meeting will include presentations on saccharin, food and color additives, laetrile and drug costs as well as a question-and-answer session.

In response to the overwhelming reaction to the proposed saccharin ban, the FDA is scheduling similar meetings around the country to provide opportunity for public comment. For further information, readers may call Marie Ekvall at 353-1046.

Oriental chicken takes a bow to the Far East

Chicken has come a long way since it was a wild jungle fowl of eastern Asia. The Romans bred them and American growers and packers have brought poultry production to a fine art. It has put a "chicken in every pot," and in hundreds of forms.

With a bow to the Far East here is an Americanized version of walnut chicken to serve with rice. Those with leftover chicken can make tasty molded chicken salad or chicken and pineapple salad for refreshing summer meals.

WALNUT CHICKEN

¼ cup soy sauce
¼ cup dry sherry
2 teaspoons sugar
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon ground ginger
2 whole chicken breasts, boned, skinned and cut into 1-inch cubes
5 tablespoons cornstarch
1 egg, slightly beaten
1/3 cup corn oil
1 cup walnut halves
1/3 cup chopped green onion
1 clove garlic, crushed
2 cups chicken bouillon or stock
1 can (8½ ounces) bamboo shoots, drained
1 can (5 ounces) water chestnuts, drained and sliced
2 tablespoons water
1 cup diagonally sliced celery
Hot cooked rice

Mix together soy sauce, sherry, sugar, salt and ginger. Marinate chicken in soy sauce mixture 2 to 3 hours at room temperature or overnight in refrigerator. Drain and reserve marinade.

Dip chicken in 4 tablespoons (¼ cup) of the cornstarch, then in egg; drain. Heat corn oil in large skillet over medium heat. Add walnuts and cook 2 to 3 minutes or until toasted; remove from skillet. Add chicken and saute about 5 minutes. Stir in green onion and garlic. Saute 2 to 3 minutes longer. Add marinade, bouillon, bamboo shoots and water chestnuts. Simmer covered 15 minutes.

Mix remaining 1 tablespoon cornstarch with water. Stir into chicken mixture. Bring to boil, stirring constantly, and boil 1 minute. Add walnuts and celery; heat about 5 minutes. Serve over rice. Serves 6.

MOLDED CHICKEN SALAD

1 package (3 ounces) lemon flavor gelatin
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup boiling water
½ cup cold water
Dash of pepper
1/3 cup mayonnaise
1½ cups diced cooked chicken or turkey
½ cup finely chopped celery

Dissolve gelatin and salt in boiling water. Add cold water and pepper. Chill until slightly thickened. Blend in mayonnaise. Then fold in chicken and celery. Pour into a 4-cup mold or individual molds. Chill until firm, about 3 hours. Unmold. Serve with crisp salad greens, if desired. Makes about 3 cups or serves 6.

CHICKEN AND PINEAPPLE SALAD

1 can (13¼ ounces) pineapple tidbits
1 package (3 ounces) lemon flavor gelatin
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup boiling water
1 cup diced cooked chicken or turkey*
1/3 cup finely chopped celery
12 to 16 strips pimiento

(*Or use 1 cup diced cooked canned chicken.)

Drain pineapple, measuring syrup. Add water to syrup to make 1 cup. Dissolve gelatin and salt in boiling water. Add measured liquid. Chill until thickened.

Fold in chicken, celery and pineapple. Place pimiento strips in form of a cross in individual molds. Spoon gelatin mixture carefully into molds. Chill until firm, about 3 hours. Unmold.

Serve with crisp salad greens and mayonnaise, if desired. Makes about 3½ cups or serves 6 to 7.

Her cooking spells hospitality

wilted lettuce salad with a creamy sweet-sour dressing. Smierkase is a "must" on a Pennsylvania Dutch menu. Similar to cottage cheese, it is served as a relish topped with apple-butter.

In her hometown, there wouldn't be a picnic or buffet without Red Beet Eggs. Hard boiled eggs are marinated with beets in sweet-sour beet juice until they turn a beautiful ruby red. "Because Midweaterners are not familiar with this idea, they can't quite accept red eggs," Pat complained goodnaturedly. "However, they are elegant served with the beets or sliced for sandwiches with lettuce and mayonnaise."

For dessert, Pat suggests two sweets: the better-known shoo fly pie with its unique molasses flavor and crumb topping and a coconut noodle custard. Noodles supply the starch in this sweet baked custard, with coconut adding flavor. It may be served hot or cold, plain or with whipped cream.

All of these are old recipes, handed down through generations. Pat calls it simple home cooking, but few could resist the delicious wholesomeness of her offerings. They reflect Pat's hospitality, warmly extended to her new friends. She is a member of the Mount Prospect Women's Club, Infant Welfare Society and secretary of Grace Guild, St. Simon's Episcopal Church, Arlington Heights.

CHICKEN CORN SOUP

1 stewing chicken
4 potatoes, diced
1 large bag (20 ounces) frozen corn niblets
Several sprigs fresh, snipped parsley
3 hard-boiled eggs, sliced

Place chicken in pot and barely cover with water. Add salt and pepper to taste. Cook until chicken falls from the bones. Remove, set aside to cool.

Add potatoes, corn and parsley to broth and simmer until potatoes are tender. Dice as much chicken as you wish for the soup (at least two cups) and add to pot. (Save remainder for casserole or salad.) About 15 minutes before serving, add hard-boiled eggs. Serves 8 to 10.

BOILED CHICKEN POT PIE

1 stewing chicken
3 to 4 medium potatoes, sliced or quartered
1 small onion, chopped
Few sprigs fresh snipped parsley

Cover chicken with 3 quarts water. Season with salt and pepper. cook until chicken is ready to fall from bones. Remove from pan and cool.

In the meantime, prepare the following noodles:

1¾ cup flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon vegetable shortening
2 eggs, beaten

Combine dry ingredients and cut in shortening. Add beaten eggs and mix to make a very stiff dough. If too sticky, add more flour.

Divide dough into small portions and roll on floured surface. Roll thin and cut in two-inch squares.

Bring broth to a boil and add dough squares piece by piece to keep broth boiling. Add potatoes and onion and simmer until potatoes are soft, stirring occasionally.

Dice chicken and add as much as you want to the broth, about 2 to 3 cups. Add parsley. (If desired, ½ teaspoon saffron may be added for color.)

HAM AND STRING BEANS

1 piece (3 pounds or more) smoked ham or butt
6 potatoes, halved
1 medium onion, sliced into rings
1 large can green beans, drained

Cover ham with water and simmer at least 1 hour. Add potatoes and onion and simmer for another 20 minutes. Salt and pepper to taste. Then add beans and cook until potatoes are soft.

Slice ham or smoked butt on plate. Serve all the vegetables in one bowl with lots of the broth.

WILTED LETTUCE SALAD

½ head lettuce, broken up
½ pound fresh spinach
1 medium onion, cut in rings
2 hard cooked eggs, sliced

Wash, drain and break up spinach, removing stems. Place in salad bowl with lettuce. Arrange onion rings and eggs on top. Prepare the following dressing:

1 cup Half and Half
2 tablespoons cider vinegar
¼ cup sugar (or to taste)
Dash of salt
Dash of pepper
Dash of garlic powder

Add vinegar to Half and Half and let thicken. Then stir in remaining ingredients. Pour over salad and let stand 10 to 15 minutes in refrigerator before serving. Do not toss. Sprinkle a grinding of pepper over the top. Serves 6.

RED BEET EGGS

1 jar (1 pound) plain whole beets
½ cup cider vinegar
½ cup water
¼ cup sugar (or to taste)
Dash of salt and white pepper
3 or 4 whole cloves
6 hard boiled eggs, shelled

Drain juice from beets and pour into pan. Add vinegar, water, sugar, salt, pepper and cloves. Bring to a boil, stirring to dissolve sugar. Pour over beets. When cool, add eggs. Marinate in refrigerator, making sure eggs are covered, at least 24 hours.

Serve beets and eggs together on a buffet, or slice eggs lengthwise and use on sandwiches with lettuce and mayonnaise.

SHOO-FLY PIE

2 9-inch unbaked pie shells
Filling: —
2 cups molasses
2 cups warm water
1 teaspoon baking soda
2 eggs, beaten

Dissolve soda in water. Add remaining ingredients and mix well. In another bowl, prepare the following

Topping: —
2½ cups flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 cup granulated sugar
½ cup vegetable shortening

Combine dry ingredients and cut in shortening with a pastry blender or fingers. Add one cup topping to molasses mixture and mix well. Pour molasses mixture into pie shell and sprinkle remaining topping on top. Bake at 350 degrees for approximately 45 to 50 minutes. Test with a toothpick as you would a cake.

COCONUT NOODLE CUSTARD

3 eggs
2 cups whole milk
¾ cup granulated sugar
Dash of salt
1 cup flaked coconut
2 teaspoons vanilla
5 ounces noodles, medium width

In a large bowl, beat eggs until light and fluffy. Stir in remainining ingredients, except noodles, and mix thoroughly.

In the meantime, cook noodles according to package directions. Rinse and drain well. Mix noodles into egg mixture.

Turn into greased, 1½-quart casserole and sprinkle top with nutmeg. Set in a pan of hot water. Bake at 325 degrees approximately 1 hour or until custard is firm. Serve warm or cold, plain or with whipped cream. Serves 8.

Grilled vegetables handy for picnics

Foil-wrapped vegetables, seasoned with butter and grilled to tender crispness, are a great accompaniment to a summer picnic. For each serving, use a double thick rectangle of aluminum foil. Place six thin slices of potato, six carrot strips and several green pepper strips on foil. Add one tablespoon each of butter and water and one teaspoon of bacon bits or crumbled cooked bacon. Fold foil down onto vegetables in a tight double fold, then fold ends over tightly. Place on a grill, folded side up, and cook 25 to 35 minutes or until vegetables are tender.

wilted lettuce salad with a creamy sweet-sour dressing. Smierkase is a "must" on a Pennsylvania Dutch menu. Similar to cottage cheese, it is served as a relish topped with apple-butter.

In her hometown, there wouldn't be a picnic or buffet without Red Beet Eggs. Hard boiled eggs are marinated with beets in sweet-sour beet juice until they turn a beautiful ruby red. "Because Midweaterners are not familiar with this idea, they can't quite accept red eggs," Pat complained goodnaturedly. "However, they are elegant served with the beets or sliced for sandwiches with lettuce and mayonnaise."

For dessert, Pat suggests two sweets: the better-known shoo fly pie with its unique molasses flavor and crumb topping and a coconut noodle custard. Noodles supply the starch in this sweet baked custard, with coconut adding flavor. It may be served hot or cold, plain or with whipped cream.

All of these are old recipes, handed down through generations. Pat calls it simple home cooking, but few could resist the delicious wholesomeness of her offerings. They reflect Pat's hospitality, warmly extended to her new friends. She is a member of the Mount Prospect Women's Club, Infant Welfare Society and secretary of Grace Guild, St. Simon's Episcopal Church, Arlington Heights.

CHICKEN CORN SOUP

1 stewing chicken
4 potatoes, diced
1 large bag (20 ounces) frozen
  corn niblets
  Several sprigs fresh, snipped parsley
3 hard-boiled eggs, sliced

Place chicken in pot and barely cover with water. Add salt and pepper to taste. Cook until chicken falls from the bones. Remove, set aside to cool.

Add potatoes, corn and parsley to broth and simmer until potatoes are tender. Dice as much chicken as you wish for the soup (at least two cups) and add to pot. (Save remainder for casserole or salad.) About 15 minutes before serving, add hard-boiled eggs. Serves 8 to 10.

BOILED CHICKEN POT PIE

1 stewing chicken
3 to 4 medium potatoes, sliced or quartered
1 small onion, chopped
  Few sprigs fresh snipped parsley

Cover chicken with 3 quarts water. Season with salt and pepper. cook until chicken is ready to fall from bones. Remove from pan and cool.

In the meantime, prepare the following noodles:

1¾ cup flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon vegetable shortening
2 eggs, beaten

Combine dry ingredients and cut in shortening. Add beaten eggs and mix to make a very stiff dough. If too sticky, add more flour.

Divide dough into small portions and roll on floured surface. Roll thin and cut in two-inch squares.

Bring broth to a boil and add dough squares piece by piece to keep broth boiling. Add potatoes and onion and simmer until potatoes are soft, stirring occasionally.

Dice chicken and add as much as you want to the broth, about 2 to 3 cups. Add parsley. (If desired, ½ teaspoon saffron may be added for color.)

HAM AND STRING BEANS

  smoked ham or butt
6 potatoes, halved
1 medium onion, sliced into rings
1 large can green beans, drained

Cover ham with water and simmer at least 1 hour. Add potatoes and onion and simmer for another 20 minutes. Salt and pepper to taste. Then add beans and cook until potatoes are soft.

Slice ham or smoked butt on plate. Serve all the vegetables in one bowl with lots of the broth.

WILTED LETTUCE SALAD

½ head lettuce, broken up
½ pound fresh spinach
1 medium onion, cut in rings
2 hard cooked eggs, sliced

Wash, drain and break up spinach, removing stems. Place in salad bowl with lettuce. Arrange onion rings and eggs on top. Prepare the following dressing:

1 cup Half and Half
2 tablespoons cider vinegar
¼ cup sugar (or to taste)
  Dash of salt
  Dash of pepper
  Dash of garlic powder

Add vinegar to Half and Half and let thicken. Then stir in remaining ingredients. Pour over salad and let stand 10 to 15 minutes in refrigerator before serving. Do not toss. Sprinkle a grinding of pepper over the top. Serves 6.

RED BEET EGGS

1 jar (1 pound) plain whole beets
½ cup cider vinegar
½ cup water
¼ cup sugar (or to taste)
  Dash of salt and white pepper
3 or 4 whole cloves
6 hard boiled eggs, shelled

Drain juice from beets and pour into pan. Add vinegar, water, sugar, salt, pepper and cloves. Bring to a boil, stirring to dissolve sugar. Pour over beets. When cool, add eggs. Marinate in refrigerator, making sure eggs are covered, at least 24 hours.

Serve beets and eggs together on a buffet, or slice eggs lengthwise and use on sandwiches with lettuce and mayonnaise.

SHOO-FLY PIE

2 9-inch unbaked pie shells

Filling: —

2 cups molasses
2 cups warm water
1 teaspoon baking soda
2 eggs, beaten

Dissolve soda in water. Add remaining ingredients and mix well. In another bowl, prepare the following

Topping: —

2½ cups flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 cup granulated sugar
½ cup vegetable shortening

Combine dry ingredients and cut in shortening with a pastry blender or fingers. Add one cup topping to molasses mixture and mix well. Pour molasses mixture into pie shell and sprinkle remaining topping on top. Bake at 350 degrees for approximately 45 to 50 minutes. Test with a toothpick as you would a cake.

COCONUT NOODLE CUSTARD

3 eggs
2 cups whole milk
¾ cup granulated sugar
  Dash of salt
1 cup flaked coconut
2 teaspoons vanilla
5 ounces noodles, medium width

In a large bowl, beat eggs until light and fluffy. Stir in remainining ingredients, except noodles, and mix thoroughly.

In the meantime, cook noodles according to package directions. Rinse and drain well. Mix noodles into egg mixture.

Turn into greased, 1½-quart casserole and sprinkle top with nutmeg. Set in a pan of hot water. Bake at 325 degrees approximately 1 hour or until custard is firm. Serve warm or cold, plain or with whipped cream. Serves 8.

Grilled vegetables handy for picnics

Foil-wrapped vegetables, seasoned with butter and grilled to tender crispness, are a great accompaniment to a summer picnic. For each serving, use a double thick rectangle of aluminum foil. Place six thin slices of potato, six carrot strips and several green pepper strips on foil. Add one tablespoon each of butter and water and one teaspoon of bacon bits or crumbled cooked bacon. Fold foil down onto vegetables in a tight double fold, then fold ends over tightly. Place on a grill, folded side up, and cook 25 to 35 minutes or until vegetables are tender.

Ask Andy

Heating matter above 1,400 causes light

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1977 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Elaine Casciano, 11, of Allentown, Pa., for her question:

WHAT IS LIGHT?

Light, very simply, is something that makes things visible or affords illumination.

Materials which are heated to above 1,400 degrees Fahrenheit produce light. This is how we explain sunlight, and also light from an electric bulb's filament.

Energy seen as light generally is from another energy source, such as the electrical or heat energy which excites atoms. The atoms take in this energy, causing their electrons to shift to higher orbital energy levels. When the electrons snap back to their lower or original orbits, energy again is released in a new form, that of light (radiation), which can be sensed by the eyes.

Light travels in straight lines ordinarily and at great speed. We can see from looking at a flashlight's beam that the path of light is straight. We give the name "light ray" to each little straight line that connects the source of the light — the light bulb — with the object it lights up. We think of a beam of light as being made up of a bundle of light rays.

Light can be reflected and absorbed by objects, and it also can be bent. This happens when a light beam strikes a smooth sheet of glass standing at an angle. The side of the beam nearest the glass slows down first, so the beam is turned. When the beam comes out the other side of the glass it turns back to its original direction. This bending of a beam of light as it passes from one transparent material to another is called refraction.

Light is measured by a photoelectric meter. Light energy striking the surface of specially treated substances will cause a flow of electrons which will be circuited through a piece of equipment called a galvanometer.

Life is dependent upon light. Our world couldn't function without it.

Without the trapping and storing of light energy in living plants, there would be no chain of life. All life depends on this vitally important process which we call photosynthesis.

Andy sends a Denoyer-Geppert World Globe to Greg Papke, 7, of Buffalo Grove, for his question:

HOW CAN A FLY WALK UPSIDE DOWN ON THE CEILING?

The fly seems to be defying gravity when it walks upside down on the ceiling.

The ends of the fly's feet are covered with tiny hairs, each with a disc at the tip. Some scientists say the discs act as suckers with a vacuum formed between the disc and the ceiling which holds up the fly by the pressure of the air. But if the fly is put into a jar and the air drawn out, the fly can still do its upside-down walking act.

So other scientists say the magic is done by means of a sticky substance coming from the underside of the fly's foot. Each hair seems to be a tiny tube for holding the sticky liquid which is produced and poured out as required.

Do you have a question to Ask Andy? Send it on a post card with your name, age and complete address to Ask Andy in care of The Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Entries are open to boys and girls 7 to 17.

Ask Andy

Heating matter above 1,400 causes light

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1977 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Elaine Casciano, 11, of Allentown, Pa., for her question:

WHAT IS LIGHT?

Light, very simply, is something that makes things visible or affords illumination.

Materials which are heated to above 1,400 degrees Fahrenheit produce light. This is how we explain sunlight, and also light from an electric bulb's filament.

Energy seen as light generally is from another energy source, such as the electrical or heat energy which excites atoms. The atoms take in this energy, causing their electrons to shift to higher orbital energy levels. When the electrons snap back to their lower or original orbits, energy again is released in a new form, that of light (radiation), which can be sensed by the eyes.

Light travels in straight lines ordinarily and at great speed. We can see from looking at a flashlight's beam that the path of light is straight. We give the name "light ray" to each little straight line that connects the source of the light — the light bulb — with the object it lights up. We think of a beam of light as being made up of a bundle of light rays.

Light can be reflected and absorbed by objects, and it also can be bent. This happens when a light beam strikes a smooth sheet of glass standing at an angle. The side of the beam nearest the glass slows down first, so the beam is turned. When the beam comes out the other side of the glass it turns back to its original direction. This bending of a beam of light as it passes from one transparent material to another is called refraction.

Light is measured by a photoelectric meter. Light energy striking the surface of specially treated substances will cause a flow of electrons which will be circuited through a piece of equipment called a galvanometer.

The units for measuring light intensity are called lumens or foot-candles. Light can be converted directly to electrical energy, by the way, in solar cells.

Life is dependent upon light. Our world couldn't function without it.

Without the trapping and storing of light energy in living plants, there would be no chain of life. All life depends on this vitally important process which we call photosynthesis.

Andy sends a Denoyer-Geppert World Globe to Greg Papke, 7, of Buffalo Grove, for his question:

HOW CAN A FLY WALK UPSIDE DOWN ON THE CEILING?

The fly seems to be defying gravity when it walks upside down on the ceiling.

The ends of the fly's feet are covered with tiny hairs, each with a disc at the tip. Some scientists say the discs act as suckers with a vacuum formed between the disc and the ceiling which holds up the fly by the pressure of the air. But if the fly is put into a jar and the air drawn out, the fly can still do its upside-down walking act.

So other scientists say the magic is done by means of a sticky substance coming from the underside of the fly's foot. Each hair seems to be a tiny tube for holding the sticky liquid which is produced and poured out as required.

Do you have a question to Ask Andy? Send it on a post card with your name, age and complete address to Ask Andy in care of The Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Entries are open to boys and girls 7 to 17.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Star has second billing

Liz tries out new role—politics

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — Elizabeth Taylor has a new starring roll — in politics.

Actually, she's got second billing. But, as has happened before, she tends to steal the show, this time at Republican fund raisers across Virginia.

She attends them with her sixth husband, John Warner, who is building support for his all but certain campaign next year for the U.S. Senate.

WARNER, 49, secretary of the Navy under former President Richard Nixon and later head of the Bicentennial Commission, tends to wind up in the shadow of the woman he married last year in an open field at his Fauquier County, Va., farm estate.

"She's something, isn't she," a wide-eyed Janet Bowens gasped after shaking hands with Miss Taylor at a Norfolk fund-raiser. "I've been a fan of hers all my life."

"Mr. Warner is a nice man, but the reason I came tonight was to see Miss Taylor," Mable Roberts said after snapping a dozen pictures of the actress at another GOP function. "I've seen so many of her movies, I feel like I know her."

Despite the attention, Miss Taylor insists, "John and I are a team."

"AFTER ALL, he is the one I hope will be the candidate. I, of course, will be behind him 100 per cent."

Miss Taylor shook an estimated 5,000 hands before suffering her first political injury last month. She was gladhanding a line of 600 at one affair. A blood vessel broke in her right hand.

Always a trouper, she returned to the line after getting an ice-pack and a pain killer.

"JOHN AND I are a team," says actress Elizabeth Taylor who tends to steal the show at Republican fund raisers across Virginia. She attends them with her sixth husband, John Warner, who is building support for his all but certain campaign next year for the U.S. Senate.

"You've treated me like a true Virginian. I love Virginia and Virginians," she said. The crowd cheered.

AT 46, THE two-time Oscar winner and the voluptuous star of 30 films, has acquired a double chin and some bulges. But — her eyes as radiant and her face as beautiful as ever — she draws crowds each time she appears.

"It was our biggest fundraiser ever," said Susan Mott, the Winchester GOP Chairwoman, after the couple's appearance at a party sponsored by the Winchester and Frederick County Republican committees.

"We had the affair in a private home and had more than 250 people. We had to turn people away," she said.

"She seemed to really enjoy herself," Mrs. Mott said. "She spoke with all the guests and talked to one woman for more than 20 minutes about their children."

Although political observers concede Miss Taylor is an asset for the GOP now, some believe she may prove a liability to Warner's expected Senate candidacy for the seat being relinquished by Republican Sen. William Scott.

They say conservative Virginia, heart of the Confederacy and the only Southern state to go for Gerald Ford in last year's presidential election, may not cotton to having, as the wife of their senator, a former movie star who has married seven times, twice to Richard Burton.

But Warner says, "I think that any candidate's wife is an asset."

"I am just delighted Elizabeth can bring happiness and joy into the hearts of people where ever she goes."

From the other side of the political fence, Frederick Babson seems to agree. Babson, an attorney, announced for the Democratic nomination for the Senate with the election still 17 months off. He conceded he was doing so to catch up with the publicity Miss Taylor attracted to Warner.

The GOP, said Babson with what appeared a combination of envy and pique, "seeks to perpetrate its know-nothing representation of Virginia by exploiting the fame and fortune of an internationally famous film figure who cannot even vote in this state or country."

The Republicans are delighted. Said State Chairman George McNath, "I'm glad we have Miss Taylor on our side."

Folklore lures thousands to hunt treasure in Texas

DALLAS (UPI) — Sam Bass had his brief but profitable career as a holdup man end in a shootout with Texas Rangers at Round Rock, Tex., in 1878. But Bass, with his generous, freewheeling ways, was the stuff Texas legends are made of.

Oft-told stories, no doubt doctored heavily with imagination, say north and central Texas are dotted with secret caves, forked tree stumps and abandoned mines where Bass stashed his money.

There are thousands of other tales about the hidden caches of the pirate Jean La Fitte, hoards of gold abandoned by fleeing Mexican soldiers and Jim Bowie's lost San Saba Mine, making Texas a haven for those who have made a hobby of scouring the countryside looking for treasure, coins, relics and other remnants of the past.

IT IS A PASSION almost as intense as the gold fever of the 1850s that sends an estimated 250,000 Americans, armed with metal detectors, to vacant lots and ghost towns in search of something from another time.

"The appeal is in the finding of things," said Ray Smith, president and founder of the National Treasure hunters league. "It's a thrill when you realize you've found something. Finding a 100-year-old coin is a great thrill.

"Plus, I really enjoy the outdoors and treasure hunting goes well with other hobbies like hunting and fishing or camping."

Seventeen years ago, Smith's interest in geology got him interested in treasure hunting and metal detectors.

"I WAS A ROCKHOUND and I read all the old standby treasure . . . and I just got into it more and more," he said.

He eventually quit his job as a school teacher and basketball coach to devote his time to the National Treasure Hunters League, an organization with approximately 30,000 members nationwide.

Smith, a balding fellow with a full red beard, sells metal detectors from the league's headquarters and publishes a monthly magazine with hunt stories and the latest in paraphernalia.

The detectors, which cost from $30 to $400, have become more sophisticated and, by judging the permeability and density of the object, now are capable of discriminating between coins and worthless bottle caps.

SMITH SAYS research is the key to a successful hunt — knowing the history of an area where the deserted settlements were. And in the newly established tradition of "Roots," treasure hunting is a means of reaching back to the past.

"The key to a good hunt is organization and research," he said. "Some of the best historians I know are into treasure hunting.

"You can learn a lot about people by finding what they have lost," Smith said. "Any place where people have moved out, like ghost towns or places that are falling down, is going to be a good area to try.

"Anywhere people have gathered you'll find things. They throw things away, they lose things. You can tell a lot about the way they lived just by searching the ground. You look around an old house and find maybe 20 keys, coins, all sorts of stuff, but somewhere else the people might have been a little more organized and didn't lose as much."

ECCENTRIC RELATIVES — the kind that would take the family fortune and bury it in the backyard — are a big boon to the treasure-hunting business.

"You talk to many people and they've got stories about how an old uncle hid his money and dies suddenly and no one knows where it is. A lot of those are recovered," Smith said.

Smith classifies hunters in four categories: underwater explorers, those interested in relics, coinshooters and those interested in large caches, such as the Victorio Peak expedition at the White Sands Missile Range in New Mexico.

Coinshooting is the most popular form of treasure hunting because, after the initial purchase, it is inexpensive and appeals to all age groups. Many treasure-hunting organizations sponsor hunts, much like Easter egg hunts, with fields loaded with coins and tokens redeemable for prizes.

But, of course, the lure of the big haul and striking it rich is what creates the fanaticism over treasure hunting.

"The people at White Sands (who had been searching for a cache of gold bars estimated as high as $250 billion on the military missile range in New Mexico) have been looking for that gold for a long time, but they've run into a lot of problems," Smith said.

"But that's worth it. There's no hobby more fun than finding money."

Always a trouper, she returned to the line after getting an ice-pack and a pain killer.

"JOHN AND I are a team," says actress Elizabeth Taylor who tends to steal the show at Republican fund raisers across Virginia. She attends them with her sixth husband, John Warner, who is building support for his all but certain campaign next year for the U.S. Senate.

"You've treated me like a true Virginian. I love Virginia and Virginians," she said. The crowd cheered.

AT 46, THE two-time Oscar winner and the voluptuous star of 30 films, has acquired a double chin and some bulges. But — her eyes as radiant and her face as beautiful as ever — she draws crowds each time she appears.

"It was our biggest fundraiser ever," said Susan Mott, the Winchester GOP Chairwoman, after the couple's appearance at a party sponsored by the Winchester and Frederick County Republican committees.

"We had the affair in a private home and had more than 250 people. We had to turn people away," she said.

"She seemed to really enjoy herself," Mrs. Mott said. "She spoke with all the guests and talked to one woman for more than 20 minutes about their children."

Although political observers concede Miss Taylor is an asset for the GOP now, some believe she may prove a liability to Warner's expected Senate candidacy for the seat being relinquished by Republican Sen. William Scott.

They say conservative Virginia, heart of the Confederacy and the only Southern state to go for Gerald Ford in last year's presidential election, may not cotton to having, as the wife of their senator, a former movie star who has married seven times, twice to Richard Burton.

But Warner says, "I think that any candidate's wife is an asset."

"I am just delighted Elizabeth can bring happiness and joy into the hearts of people where ever she goes."

From the other side of the political fence, Frederick Babson seems to agree. Babson, an attorney, announced for the Democratic nomination for the Senate with the election still 17 months off. He conceded he was doing so to catch up with the publicity Miss Taylor attracted to Warner.

The GOP, said Babson with what appeared a combination of envy and pique, "seeks to perpetrate its know-nothing representation of Virginia by exploiting the fame and fortune of an internationally famous film figure who cannot even vote in this state or country."

The Republicans are delighted. Said State Chairman George McNath, "I'm glad we have Miss Taylor on our side."

Folklore lures thousands to hunt treasure in Texas

DALLAS (UPI) — Sam Bass had his brief but profitable career as a holdup man end in a shootout with Texas Rangers at Round Rock, Tex., in 1878. But Bass, with his generous, freewheeling ways, was the stuff Texas legends are made of.

Oft-told stories, no doubt doctored heavily with imagination, say north and central Texas are dotted with secret caves, forked tree stumps and abandoned mines where Bass stashed his money.

There are thousands of other tales about the hidden caches of the pirate Jean La Fitte, hoards of gold abandoned by fleeing Mexican soldiers and Jim Bowie's lost San Saba Mine, making Texas a haven for those who have made a hobby of scouring the countryside looking for treasure, coins, relics and other remnants of the past.

IT IS A PASSION almost as intense as the gold fever of the 1850s that sends an estimated 250,000 Americans, armed with metal detectors, to vacant lots and ghost towns in search of something from another time.

"The appeal is in the finding of things," said Ray Smith, president and founder of the National Treasure hunters league. "It's a thrill when you realize you've found something. Finding a 100-year-old coin is a great thrill.

"Plus, I really enjoy the outdoors and treasure hunting goes well with other hobbies like hunting and fishing or camping."

Seventeen years ago, Smith's interest in geology got him interested in treasure hunting and metal detectors.

"I WAS A ROCKHOUND and I read all the old standby treasure . . . and I just got into it more and more," he said.

He eventually quit his job as a school teacher and basketball coach to devote his time to the National Treasure Hunters League, an organization with approximately 30,000 members nationwide.

Smith, a balding fellow with a full red beard, sells metal detectors from the league's headquarters and publishes a monthly magazine with hunt stories and the latest in paraphernalia.

The detectors, which cost from $30 to $400, have become more sophisticated and, by judging the permeability and density of the object, now are capable of discriminating between coins and worthless bottle caps.

SMITH SAYS research is the key to a successful hunt — knowing the history of an area where the deserted settlements were. And in the newly established tradition of "Roots," treasure hunting is a means of reaching back to the past.

"The key to a good hunt is organization and research," he said. "Some of the best historians I know are into treasure hunting.

"You can learn a lot about people by finding what they have lost," Smith said. "Any place where people have moved out, like ghost towns or places that are falling down, is going to be a good area to try.

"Anywhere people have gathered you'll find things. They throw things away, they lose things. You can tell a lot about the way they lived just by searching the ground. You look around an old house and find maybe 20 keys, coins, all sorts of stuff, but somewhere else the people might have been a little more organized and didn't lose as much."

ECCENTRIC RELATIVES — the kind that would take the family fortune and bury it in the backyard — are a big boon to the treasure-hunting business.

"You talk to many people and they've got stories about how an old uncle hid his money and dies suddenly and no one knows where it is. A lot of those are recovered," Smith said.

Smith classifies hunters in four categories: underwater explorers, those interested in relics, coinshooters and those interested in large caches, such as the Victorio Peak expedition at the White Sands Missile Range in New Mexico.

Coinshooting is the most popular form of treasure hunting because, after the initial purchase, it is inexpensive and appeals to all age groups. Many treasure-hunting organizations sponsor hunts, much like Easter egg hunts, with fields loaded with coins and tokens redeemable for prizes.

But, of course, the lure of the big haul and striking it rich is what creates the fanaticism over treasure hunting.

"The people at White Sands (who had been searching for a cache of gold bars estimated as high as $250 billion on the military missile range in New Mexico) have been looking for that gold for a long time, but they've run into a lot of problems," Smith said.

"But that's worth it. There's no hobby more fun than finding money."

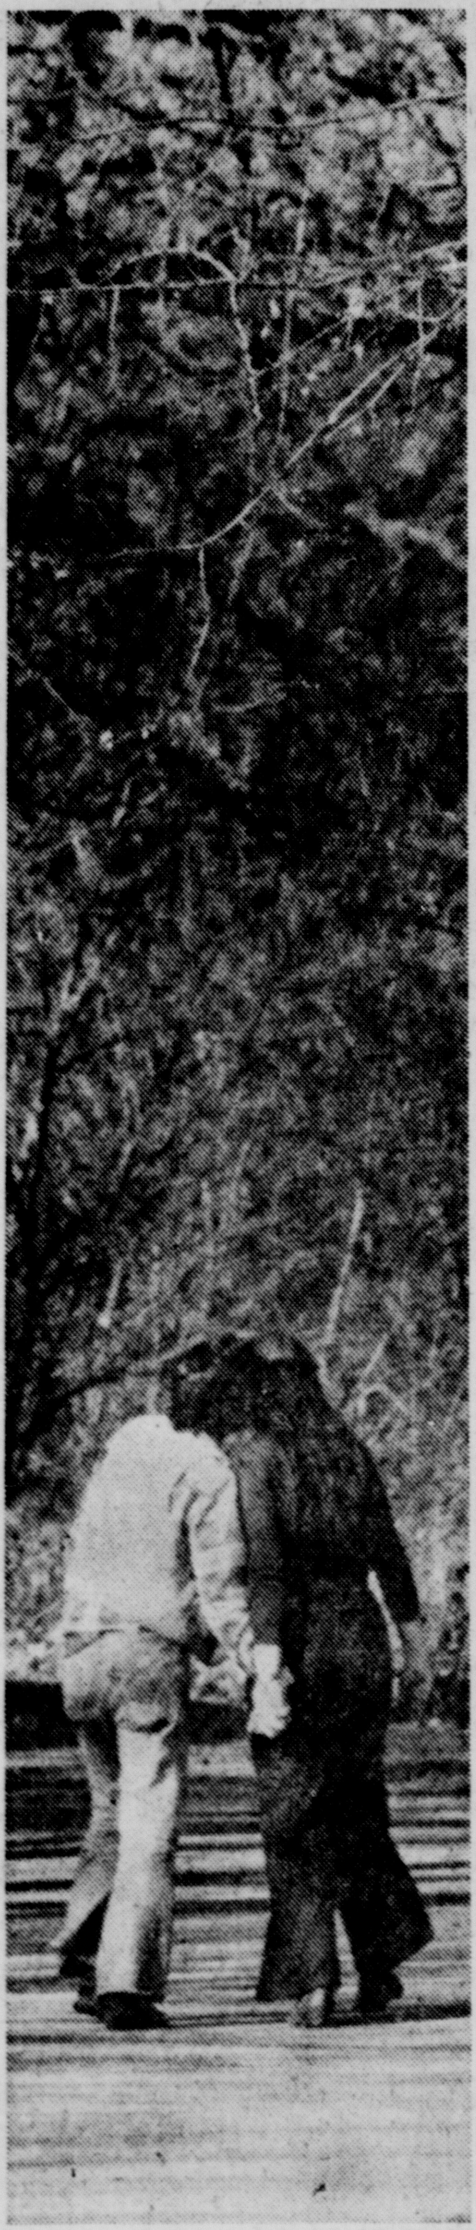
Now there's counseling help for unmarried live-togethers



To whom do they turn?

by ELEANOR RIVES

There was a time when marriage counseling meant marriage counseling.

Now it includes non-marriage counseling.

"About one of every eight couples who come to us for help is unmarried and living together," said Phyllis Levy, a social worker and co-director with psychologist Dr. Arnold S. Carson of the Center for Marital and Sexual Therapy, Inc., Arlington Heights.

"Yes, I have counseled such couples, both clients and students," said Dr. Marguerite Ewald, coordinator of Harper College's Community Counseling Center.

According to Dr. Ewald, the problems and concerns of unmarried "live-togethers" are remarkably similar to those of married couples. They think they will avoid the problems, the static, by not getting married, but they have them anyway.

PART OF THE problem is that many unmarrieds start out with the idealistic notion that their commitment is unique because they are not bound together by a piece of paper. But that commitment becomes a little fragile when the going gets rough.

"When things get really hairy, 'I stay with you because I love you' may change to 'I don't really have to stay with this if it's too difficult,' " said Dr. Ewald. "Their married counterparts at this point feel that they have to give it their best shot."

Unmarried couples have come to Dr. Ewald with problems intrinsic to their relationship, such as ostracism from their families and parental disapproval, as well as problems similar to those of married couples, such as sexual adjustment or financial disagreement.

She cited one pair in their late 20s. Both had high paying positions, both lived in condominiums. "When they merged, the primary problem was money — ownership, who contributed what, how should it be divided if they split up. It became so pathological, it probably destroyed the relationship," said Dr. Ewald.

"BUT MONEY is not the whole problem," she added. "It's just something to pin their other problems to."

Dr. Ronald Martin, psychologist at Northwest Human Resources Development Center, Rolling Meadows, estimates that 10 to 15 per cent of the couples who come to him for counseling are live-togethers. How much they like and respect one another has much to do with the success of the relationship.

"Often with a troubled couple, the degree of genuineness is low," he said. "One partner may be merely infatuated, or lying, hiding, not sharing much of himself, just the idealized image. In marriage, it's different. You can't carry the infatuation game too far. It wears off in a couple of years.

"Two facades living with each other can make it work for awhile, but it usually breaks down. This is where I begin."

AT THE CENTER for Marital and Sexual Therapy, Dr. Carson and Phyllis Levy discussed the problems of live-togethers. "People are people; their basic pathology is the same," said Dr. Carson. "Married couples and unmarried live-togethers have the same kind of troubles, but within a different structure."

Levy pointed out that live-togethers in the conservative Northwest suburbs are more apt to have problems than couples in large metropolitan areas who have freely chosen living together as an alternative to marriage. The couples of conservative background may have settled for living together because other psychological problems interfered with marriage. "It can be an insecure, tense, nervous situation at best," she said.

The problem and concerns of unmarried "live-togethers" are remarkably similar to those of married couples. They think they will avoid the problem, the static, by not getting married, but they have them anyway — Dr. Marguerite Ewald.

THE MAJOR problem of live-togethers, according to Dr. Carson, is that one of the two partners, usually the woman, is either pretending to be married, wanting to be married, or has the illusion of being married. The other one just wants to live together.

"Don't use living together as an in-between step to marriage," he said. "It's not. It's a cop-out. Don't use it to bring a reluctant Thomas to the altar — it doesn't work."

For those who think the live-together relationship is the ultimate test of compatibility, Phyllis Levy replies, "That's just not so. There are some couples who do beautifully sexually until they marry. Living together has little to do with marriage. There are other ways to check out compatibility."

DR. CARSON summed up the more common problems of live-togethers who come to their center for counseling, such as when one partner wants a monogamous relationship and the other does not.

In addition, the problems of unmarrieds merge with those of married couples in how to hear and meet your partner's demands in the area of distance versus closeness; dominance versus submissiveness; aloneness versus camaraderie; independence versus dependence; and conformity versus non-conformity.

Dr. Carson cited the example of a young couple in which the girl chose to be monogamous; the guy did not. "Here I am stuck in the house," she complains. "He leaves me home with the laundry while he's out with other girls."

"In this case, she's married and he isn't — and he likes that," sid Dr. Carson.

LEVY CITED another problem case — an older man and woman, both with children. "Hell, I don't want to get married," says the man. "My marriage was a mess." So he ties up with a divorcee and both attempt to treat themselves in the area of close relationships.

"Couples like these are often attempting a therapeutic solution to their bad vibes about marriage," she said. "The solution — living together — then becomes the problem."

Levy and Carson agree that living together is as important as any other serious relationship and deserves treatment through counseling.

At their center, they help couples identify their needs and determine the problem. They review attempted solutions that have failed, and they prescribe certain behaviors that will put them in touch with the things they like about each other. "We try to put some fun back into the relationship," said Dr. Carson.

DO ALL live-togethers have problems? "By no means," he said. "If the two people are mature and in touch with their own values, living together can be a successful relationship. We tend to see the ones in trouble. The healthy ones have no reason to come here."

Phyllis Levy is concerned about marriage as it exists today. She suggests that too many couples, separated from their nuclear families, put a great strain on their marriage by trying to get all their needs met by this relationship.

"Marriage, in order to survive, will have to be adapted as an institution," she says.

Doctors evaluate increase in U.S. Caesarean births

by BARBARA LADD

A decade ago, obstetricians and family doctors delivered newborns by Caesarean section only after all hope of normal, vaginal delivery was exhausted.

Today one of every eight to ten deliveries in the United States are surgical. Northwest Community Hospital and Alexian Brothers both report about 12 per cent C-sections of all deliveries; Holy Family maintains a 9 per cent figure.

"Twenty years ago we had to apologize to our colleagues and present a long list of reasons explaining why a C-section was performed," commented Dr. Allan Charles, professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the University of Chicago Medical School and attending physician at Michael Reese Medical Center. "Today it isn't so important to deliver a baby from below (vaginally), but to deliver the baby safely."

DR. CHARLES was speaking at the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists (ACOG) last week in Chicago. Joining in the news session on "The increase in Caesarean section: who benefits, patients or doctors?" was Jan Schneider, professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the University of Michigan School of Medicine, Ann Arbor.

In the early 1970s, the Caesarean section rate was only five per cent of all deliveries in the U.S., noted Drs. Schneider and Charles. But the perinatal death rate was also high — higher than most other technically advanced countries, said Dr. Charles.

SO AN "AGGRESSIVE approach" to pregnancy, labor and delivery was adapted by ACOG and "It's paying off," said Dr. Schneider, in lower infant death rates.

Previously, the non-aggressive approach to labor and delivery allowed "nature to take its course," he said. "Obstetricians were only concerned about the actual birth of the baby. Anyone could look after a woman's labor and call the doctor, who would arrive with his golden hands minutes before the delivery."

The aggressive approach utilizes all modern technology, including fetal monitoring of vital signs and ultrasound scans. Extra care is given to the woman's pre-natal condition — diabetes, diet, hypertension, and the baby's weight before birth are now carefully noted.

IF NORMAL delivery presents the slightest risk to a baby, doctors opt for C-sections, said Dr. Schneider.

This is because pediatricians have a much greater ability to save sick or premature babies who are delivered surgically instead of traumatized and weakened by the delivery process, said Dr. Charles.

"Today pediatricians can keep babies alive where years ago they'd be written off. So the doctors want those problem infants in the best possible condition when born."

While the babies may be in better condition after C-sections instead of normal deliveries, the cost to the mother and the family is great, said Dr. Schneider. "Caesareans are compounding things," he said. "Generally, once a woman has had one, she will need one for all her future pregnancies."

AND THE FINANCIAL obligations are at least twice as much with Caesareans, he said. "It costs about $1,000 in hospital fees to have a normally-delivered baby, not including the professional fees. A C-section doubles that, at least."

Dr. Schneider admits that it's financially tempting for some doctors to perform Caesareans instead of "waiting around for 12 hours of labor and less money," but hastily points out that most obstetricians are honorable.

"Most doctors are not the type who get edgy and perform more surgical deliveries on Fridays than Mondays," he said. "Although I suppose there are a few who may do that."

DR. SCHNEIDER is also concerned that the rate of C-sections is creeping too high, that the "pendulum may swing too far the other way."

And Dr. Charles said: "There no question in anyone's (obstetrician's) mind that C-sections are important for healthy babies. But my concern is that every woman may be C-sectioned because it's safer."

Surgical deliveries are safer for the doctor as well, he said.

"Malpractice may have some doctors afraid of using their own judgment," he said. "It's very easy for the lawyers to second guess us," Dr. Schneider agrees. "If we perform Caesareans at even the very slightest of risks, we can legally defend ourselves and say we did all we were able to do if things didn't turn out well and the baby was defective."

"We're in a dilemma," he continued. "My concern is that obstetricians panic and do C-sections where they may be unnecessary."

Silver worth its weight in gold

Grace Carolyn

Collecting

If you've gone shopping for a wedding gift recently, you know the girls may as well forget registering for a sterling pattern, for only a rich uncle could afford to buy a place setting. The sterling I chose 30 years ago, which then sold for $28 a setting, is now over $100. So what else is new? We can extend those stories of tripled escalations to almost everything.

As in housing costs, dealers say "there must be a topout somewhere, but I wonder where?" Dealers have always liked silver as a good staple antique shop stock, for it is popular. Many people would just as soon have an old fancy gravy ladle with someone else's monogram than a brand new one from the jeweler. Me, for instance.

I'm speaking mainly of sterling, or what is considered in this country almost pure silver, some .995 parts silver per thousand. But plated goods have also taken a big jump, especially the more unusual "Art Nouveau" pieces.

A FRIEND recently disposed of her mother's belongings and, knowing nothing about antiques, decided to price her sterling teaspoons at $1 each. Another friend of hers who happened to know something about antiques came by and nearly lost her teeth fillings! She helped to reprice the spoons at $10-$15 each and they were snapped up at the sale. This is a fairly recent phenomenon. Just a few years ago I could buy such teaspoons for $3-$5 each.

And remember, these were marked "sterling." Plated spoons still do not bring a great deal, unless they are the special commemorative or special design. These plainer plated spoons have only a thin coating of silver. Remember, too, if they are sterling, they will be so marked on the back.

The Chicago Historical Society will open a show on May 21 which would be well worthwhile the trip downtown (perhaps we could run over to the Society while waiting for our number to come up at King Tut!)

CHICAGO IS historically a famous metal working center, especially between the years 1890 and the second World War, when the city's cultural climate expressed itself in some of the country's finest silversmiths. The arts and crafts movement which swept most of the Western world at that time continued through the Art Nouveau designs to the "modern" streamlined look of the 20s as expressed in what is now called Art Deco.

Many of Chicago's prominent families commissioned particular artists to create silver for their home use, and silver making even became a sort of "do it yourself" hobby among the well-to-do. Some handsome pieces were produced by Frances Glessner and Madeline Yale Wynne, early leaders in the Chicago social scene.

In the exhibit of the Chicago Historical Society, you may view some 600 objects made between 1804 and 1970, not only silver, but gold, copper, brass and aluminum.

Some of the oldest pieces are Indian trade jewelry, and the newest include the contemporary work of William Frederick. Visitors can see the actual process by which Frederick and his craftsmen hammer, shape, polish and create their beautiful objects.

Typical of the Chicago School of the early 20th century is the water pitcher shown, made by the Kalo Shop which operated in Park Ridge. The pitcher is about 7 inches high and 6 inches wide, and bears the monogram of the original owner, I would presume. (Photo courtesy Art Institute of Chicago.)

Do try to visit the Chicago Historical Society, and while you're at it, why not see some of the other sights? For the modest fee of a round trip train fare and a bus ride, or a bit of hiking, you can show the kids and yourselves some of the most marvelous treasures in the world. Even including admission fees, which are low and sometimes waived on certain days, and even with a great lunch at Water Tower Place, it's cheaper than an out of town vacation! Or pack a lunch and pet a lamb at Lincoln Park Zoo while you're in the neighborhood.

Doctors evaluate increase in U.S. Caesarean births

by BARBARA LADD

A decade ago, obstetricians and family doctors delivered newborns by Caesarean section only after all hope of normal, vaginal delivery was exhausted.

Today one of every eight to ten deliveries in the United States are surgical. Northwest Community Hospital and Alexian Brothers both report about 12 per cent C-sections of all deliveries; Holy Family maintains a 9 per cent figure.

"Twenty years ago we had to apologize to our colleagues and present a long list of reasons explaining why a C-section was performed," commented Dr. Allan Charles, professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the University of Chicago Medical School and attending physician at Michael Reese Medical Center. "Today it isn't so important to deliver a baby from below (vaginally), but to deliver the baby safely."

DR. CHARLES was speaking at the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists (ACOG) last week in Chicago. Joining in the news session on "The increase in Caesarean section: who benefits, patients or doctors?" was Jan Schneider, professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the University of Michigan School of Medicine, Ann Arbor.

In the early 1970s, the Caesarean section rate was only five per cent of all deliveries in the U.S., noted Drs. Schneider and Charles. But the perinatal death rate was also high — higher than most other technically advanced countries, said Dr. Charles.

SO AN "AGGRESSIVE approach" to pregnancy, labor and delivery was adapted by ACOG and "It's paying off," said Dr. Schneider, in lower infant death rates.

Previously, the non-aggressive approach to labor and delivery allowed "nature to take its course," he said. "Obstetricians were only concerned about the actual birth of the baby. Anyone could look after a woman's labor and call the doctor, who would arrive with his golden hands minutes before the delivery."

The aggressive approach utilizes all modern technology, including fetal monitoring of vital signs and ultrasound scans. Extra care is given to the woman's pre-natal condition — diabetes, diet, hypertension, and the baby's weight before birth are now carefully noted.

IF NORMAL delivery presents the slightest risk to a baby, doctors opt for C-sections, said Dr. Schneider.

This is because pediatricians have a much greater ability to save sick or premature babies who are delivered surgically instead of traumatized and weakened by the delivery process, said Dr. Charles.

"Today pediatricians can keep babies alive where years ago they'd be written off. So the doctors want those problem infants in the best possible condition when born."

While the babies may be in better condition after C-sections instead of normal deliveries, the cost to the mother and the family is great, said Dr. Schneider. "Caesareans are compounding things," he said. "Generally, once a woman has had one, she will need one for all her future pregnancies."

AND THE FINANCIAL obligations are at least twice as much with Caesareans, he said. "It costs about $1,000 in hospital fees to have a normally-delivered baby, not including the professional fees. A C-section doubles that, at least."

Dr. Schneider admits that it's financially tempting for some doctors to perform Caesareans instead of "waiting around for 12 hours of labor and less money," but hastily points out that most obstetricians are honorable.

"Most doctors are not the type who get edgy and perform more surgical deliveries on Fridays than Mondays," he said. "Although I suppose there are a few who may do that."

DR. SCHNEIDER is also concerned that the rate of C-sections is creeping too high, that the "pendulum may swing too far the other way."

And Dr. Charles said: "There no question in anyone's (obstetrician's) mind that C-sections are important for healthy babies. But my concern is that every woman may be C-sectioned because it's safer."

Surgical deliveries are safer for the doctor as well, he said.

"Malpractice may have some doctors afraid of using their own judgment," he said. "It's very easy for the lawyers to second guess us," Dr. Schneider agrees. "If we perform Caesareans at even the very slightest of risks, we can legally defend ourselves and say we did all we were able to do if things didn't turn out well and the baby was defective."

"We're in a dilemma," he continued. "My concern is that obstetricians panic and do C-sections where they may be unnecessary."

Collecting

If you've gone shopping for a wedding gift recently, you know the girls may as well forget registering for a sterling pattern, for only a rich uncle could afford to buy a place setting. The sterling I chose 30 years ago, which then sold for $28 a setting, is now over $100. So what else is new? We can extend those stories of tripled escalations to almost everything.

As in housing costs, dealers say "there must be a topout somewhere, but I wonder where?" Dealers have always liked silver as a good staple antique shop stock, for it is popular. Many people would just as soon have an old fancy gravy ladle with someone else's monogram than a brand new one from the jeweler. Me, for instance.

I'm speaking mainly of sterling, or what is considered in this country almost pure silver, some .995 parts silver per thousand. But plated goods have also taken a big jump, especially the more unusual "Art Nouveau" pieces.

A FRIEND recently disposed of her mother's belongings and, knowing nothing about antiques, decided to price her sterling teaspoons at $1 each. Another friend of hers who happened to know something about antiques came by and nearly lost her teeth fillings! She helped to reprice the spoons at $10-$15 each and they were snapped up at the sale. This is a fairly recent phenomenon. Just a few years ago I could buy such teaspoons for $3-$5 each.

And remember, these were marked "sterling." Plated spoons still do not bring a great deal, unless they are the special commemorative or special design. These plainer plated spoons have only a thin coating of silver. Remember, too, if they are sterling, they will be so marked on the back.

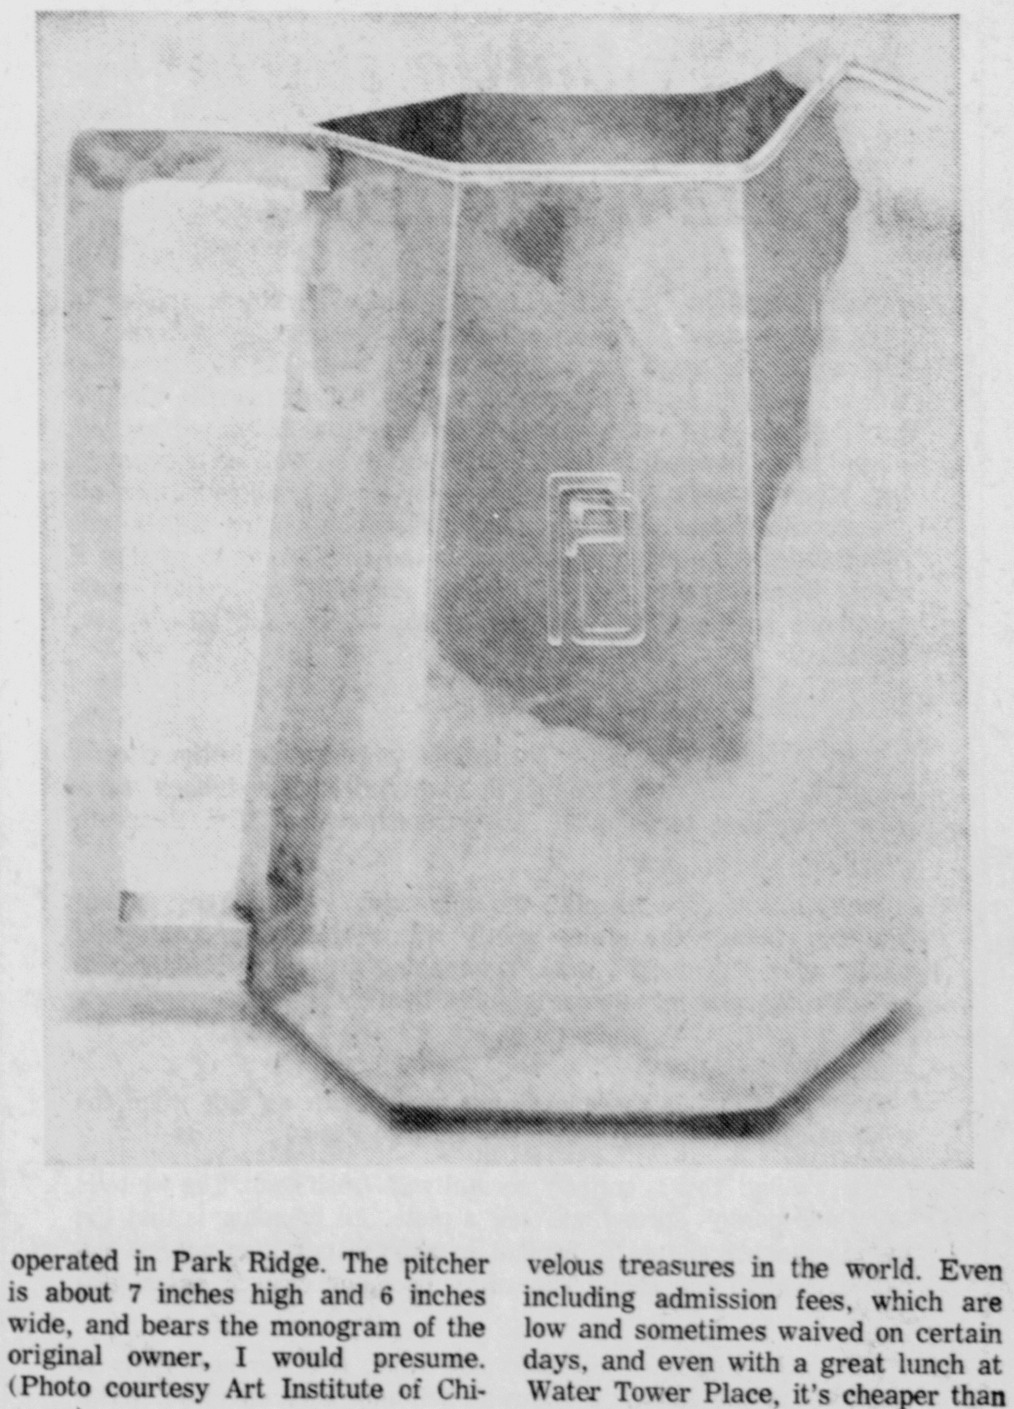
The Chicago Historical Society will open a show on May 21 which would be well worthwhile the trip downtown (perhaps we could run over to the Society while waiting for our number to come up at King Tut!)

CHICAGO IS historically a famous metal working center, especially between the years 1890 and the second World War, when the city's cultural climate expressed itself in some of the country's finest silversmiths. The arts and crafts movement which swept most of the Western world at that time continued through the Art Nouveau designs to the "modern" streamlined look of the 20s as expressed in what is now called Art Deco.

Many of Chicago's prominent families commissioned particular artists to create silver for their home use, and silver making even became a sort of "do it yourself" hobby among the well-to-do. Some handsome pieces were produced by Frances Glessner and Madeline Yale Wynne, early leaders in the Chicago social scene.

In the exhibit of the Chicago Historical Society, you may view some 600 objects made between 1804 and 1970, not only silver, but gold, copper, brass and aluminum.

Some of the oldest pieces are Indian trade jewelry, and the newest include the contemporary work of William Frederick. Visitors can see the actual process by which Frederick and his craftsmen hammer, shape, polish and create their beautiful objects.



Typical of the Chicago School of the early 20th century is the water pitcher shown, made by the Kalo Shop which operated in Park Ridge. The pitcher is about 7 inches high and 6 inches wide, and bears the monogram of the original owner, I would presume. (Photo courtesy Art Institute of Chicago.)

Do try to visit the Chicago Historical Society, and while you're at it, why not see some of the other sights? For the modest fee of a round trip train fare and a bus ride, or a bit of hiking, you can show the kids and yourselves some of the most marvelous treasures in the world. Even including admission fees, which are low and sometimes waived on certain days, and even with a great lunch at Water Tower Place, it's cheaper than an out of town vacation! Or pack a lunch and pet a lamb at Lincoln Park Zoo while you're in the neighborhood.

If you have questions, please write Grace Carolyn Dahlberg, in care of Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006, including SASE.

The doctor says

Isometric exercise presents problems

I am a male, 20 years old. About a month ago I began isometric exercises because my build was thin and weak. I have developed some muscles but when they aren't flexed the muscles appear fatty, especially the breast muscles. Are there any exercises that can trim down the fat? Would jogging help trim down my whole body?

For the benefit of other readers, isometric exercises involve tensing the muscles but not moving them. A good example would be to hold the arm still with the elbow bent and then voluntarily contract the arm muscles without bending the elbow either way. We have opposing groups of muscles. In the case of the arm, the biceps at the front bends the elbow and the triceps on the back of the arm straightens the elbow. If you contract both simultaneously, the elbow doesn't move and the two groups of muscles (biceps and triceps) contract or work against each other.

Anytime a muscle contracts against resistance it is working and such exercises increase the muscle's strength. Weight lifting is a good example of strength or resistance exercise.

Isometric exercises may not develop smooth regular muscle enlargement. The enlargement occurs only where the localized stress is applied. By contrast, exercises that use the muscle through its range of motion help to develop all the muscle fibers with a smoother-looking enlargement.

I would prefer that you have a better rounded fitness and strength program. To give you more information on this I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-4, Weight Training for Energy and Weight Control. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Just send your request to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

As you build muscles it helps to eliminate fat. Loss of muscle mass makes it easier for the body to gain fat. That is one of the hidden reasons why some people can't lose weight even with a good diet. They have allowed their muscles to get so small from lack of use that they don't use many calories at rest. A muscular body of the same weight will use more calories while the person is sitting than a body of the same weight with less muscles at rest.

Jogging helps increase the overall strength of the body but is particularly useful in building up the heart and lung function. It is for the person who has already developed a good walking program and can walk an hour without difficulty and who has no medical problems that would rule out a more vigorous exercise program. It will help you burn off some calories. Fat is stored calories. Walking long enough every day will also help.

If you walked one hour a day, a distance of three miles every day for a year, you would use the calories needed to form 18 pounds of body fat. It follows that by controlling your diet and walking you can make a lot of progress over a year's time.

For those who are able to follow such a program I recommend a combination program of walking, or jogging if you are up to it, and other endurance exercises, plus some strength exercises which can be calisthenic — sit-ups, push-ups, etc. and stretching exercises. The movement of all the joints through their full range of motion regularly helps to maintain joint function as a person gets older.

Energy battle starts on the home front

Dear Dorothy: Our whole family thinks President Carter is right that we need to go to war on energy wastage. We're trying to help in all the ways we can. We've put away the electric shoeshiner, electric pencil sharpener, agreed not to use the electric carving knife, and we're all watching to be sure lights are not left on in unoccupied rooms, nor TVs and radios on with no one watching. When no one's going to be home for a while, we're turning off the air conditioner. And I'm making careful shopping lists to cut down sharply on unnecessary trips in the car. Seems to us that if every family joined in this same crusade, we could make enormous savings from coast to coast. — Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Hughes

Dear Dorothy: I have a white enamel-topped table in the kitchen which has several tea stains on it. I've tried chlorine bleach and a strong cleanser, to no avail. Any suggestions? — Mrs. Elizabeth Freesland

While this is experimental, the only thing I can suggest is that you try rubbing the stains gently with the cleanser containing oxalic acid. If it doesn't work, try making a paste of it with a bit of water, leave on for several minutes, then sponge off.

Dear Dorothy: Is there anything wrong with an egg when the white is cloudy or milky-looking? — Puzzled Fran

Not a thing. This is entirely normal with fresh eggs. The white is thick and doesn't spread out over a plate. All it means is that the carbon dioxide, naturally present in a fresh egg, has not yet escaped through the shell. The white becomes clearer as an egg ages.

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to her in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.

DuPONT ZEPEL
CARPET PROTECTOR
How ZEPEL Carpet Protector Works. DuPont ZEPEL forms an invisible shield on the carpet which keeps dirt from lodging itself within the carpet fibers. Even mud doesn't seep in, and dries on the surface. Since dirt tends to settle on the top of the carpet, it can be easily vacuumed away. Less soil clings to the ZEPEL treated carpet, so your carpet won't need its first shampoo until much later than unprotected carpet.

Galbraith adds wit to economics show

John Kenneth Galbraith has chosen to raise a few eyebrows by popularizing the most dismal of sciences economics.

The fact is that this complex science of money and financial matters touches everyone's lives, and yet, it is rarely understood by the common man.

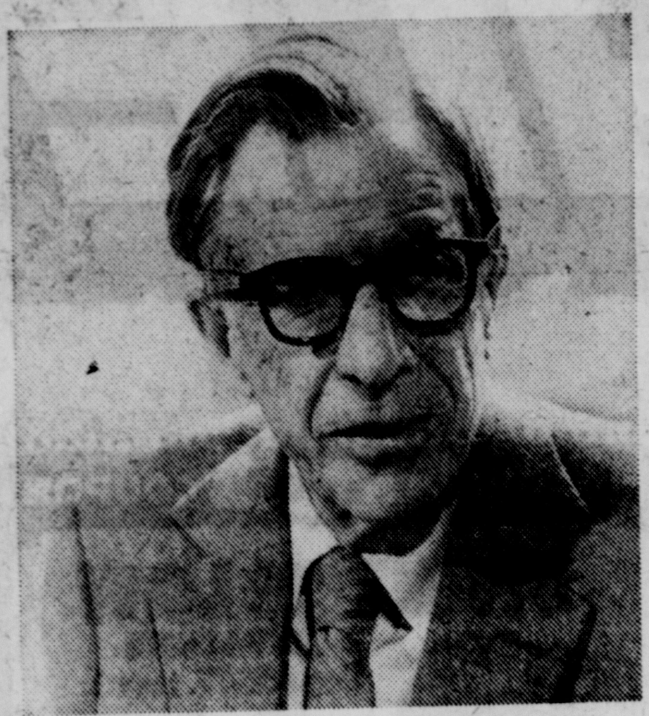
Galbraith is out to change all that with his 13-part series and companion book, both entitled "The Age of Uncertainty."

The series of one-hour installments is anything but a stale and boring lecture led by a disheveled professor with chalk dust underneath his fingernails.

"THE AGE OF UNCERTAINTY" takes a highly visual approach to economics.

The viewer can learn much from this series, as long as an effort is made to separate economic fundamentals from Galbraith's own philosophy strategically interspersed throughout each show.

The program is worth a try no matter who you are: a corporate executive, homemaker or student. There isn't a person who can afford not to better understand the concepts of economics, a foreboding discipline that has earned a rather esoteric reputation.



JOHN KENNETH GALBRAITH

THE PROGRAM HAS BEEN produced by Adrian Malone, who helped to popularize science with the series, "The Ascent of Man." There seems no limit to the resources and ways he and Galbraith have chosen to explain basic economic concepts.

Dramatizations, animation, film footage from all over the world, "Laugh-in" type comedy skits, elaborate stage settings, historical reconstructions and Galbraithian wit are all used to tell the story.

The opening segment, which will be shown at 8 p.m. tonight on Channel 11, is Galbraith's own personal note and offers an outline of the way he intends to review 200 turbulent years of economic and political change.

Our first glimpse is into the age of unquestioned economic laws and the triumph of a capitalistic system — the time of Adam Smith, founder of modern economics.

Agrarian economics was the major concern then, but in all of economic development, Galbraith reiterates society has continued to set up grand hierarchies. The power structure has developed from the peasants, landowners and the state to the blue collar worker, corporation heads and chairmen of the boards today.

THE BIG CORPORATION today works like a well-oiled machine in a very tidy fashion. It provides for its own and it takes care of its own, Galbraith says. He argues it would be more of a public and social animal if board of directors were replaced by boards of public auditors who would not interfere in the decision making but would ensure public protection with proper regulations.

Galbraith devotes all of episode nine to "The Big Corporation" in a caustic examination demonstrating his concern with its self-serving, deceiving nature.

The parodies in episode nine are so hard to swallow for those who take themselves seriously, that it may be the main reason why the Public Broadcsting system was unable to secure an underwriter for the nationally broadcast series. WTTW-TV in Chicago had little luck attracting an underwriter who financailly would support the production costs of the program, although a major financial institution that originally expressed interest in the show pulled out when it was thought "The Age of Uncertainty" might offend its clients.

GALBRAITH PORTRAYS corporation men as sleezy, deceiving characters in spy-styled trench coats who make their telephone calls at night from public telephone booths. The consumer is a fat, gluttonous, naive creature easily taken for a r de.

The 100-year development of the average universal corporation is traced through the fictitious Unified Global Enterprises where the corporate myth flourishes. Promotions and advertising of the corporation's products are "beautiful" and suggest a meaningful contribution to a wholesome God-fearing way of life.

The family business evolves into an impersonal operation where the man at the top of the ladder smokes too much and pats his secretary on the behind when no one is looking.

IT IS NOT NECESSARILY a complimentary view of big business or consumers. It is, in many ways, a very realistic one, and you will dislike or like the episode depending on whether you are in left or right field.

Despite Galbraith's own brilliant contentions, "The Age of Uncertainty" is a noteworthy attempt to make the complex digestible and the profound meaningful to the average person.

We are all concerned about money and money has always been the most fascinating concern to Galbraith, a Harvard (emeritus) economist, essayist and novelist, and one-time diplomat to India who rose to fame from the confines of Canadian farming.

"IT RANKS WITH LOVE as man's greatest source of joy, and it ranks with death as his greatest source of anxiety," Galbraith notes during his program. He examines the history and meaning of money from every perspective: the grocery shopper, the corporate head, the private businessman to the senior citizen.

For those who are bothered by Galbraith's views on giving money, health care, food and housing to the poor; allowing the public to own more urban land and installing public auditors in corporations, a balance is provided.

Each of the 13 segments, to be presented at 8 p.m. on consecutive Thursdays, will be followed by a segment of rebuttal from such notables as Willain F. Buckley and Ronald Reagan.

The final segment will attempt to draw the entire series together in a round table discussion between Galbraith, former Sec. of State Henry Kissinger, Washington Post publisher Katharine Graham, former British prime minister Edward Heath and others.

By the time the 13 weeks have ended, viewers will have a better understanding of the science of economics and why Galbraith has so appropriately labeled our contemporary time as "The Age of Uncertainty."

Galbraith adds wit to economics show

John Kenneth Galbraith has chosen to raise a few eyebrows by popularizing the most dismal of sciences economics.

The fact is that this complex science of money and financial matters touches everyone's lives, and yet, it is rarely understood by the common man.

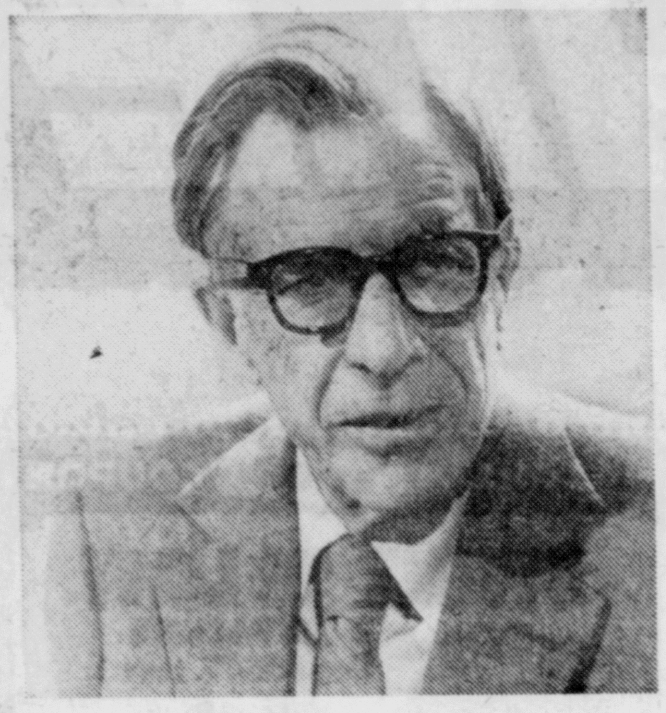
Galbraith is out to change all that with his 13-part series and companion book, both entitled "The Age of Uncertainty."

The series of one-hour installments is anything but a stale and boring lecture led by a disheveled professor with chalk dust underneath his fingernails.

"THE AGE OF UNCERTAINTY" takes a highly visual approach to economics.

The viewer can learn much from this series, as long as an effort is made to separate economic fundamentals from Galbraith's own philosophy strategically interspersed throughout each show.

The program is worth a try no matter who you are: a corporate executive, homemaker or student. There isn't a person who can afford not to better understand the concepts of economics, a foreboding discipline that has earned a rather esoteric reputation.



JOHN KENNETH GALBRAITH

THE PROGRAM HAS BEEN produced by Adrian Malone, who helped to popularize science with the series, "The Ascent of Man." There seems no limit to the resources and ways he and Galbraith have chosen to explain basic economic concepts.

Dramatizations, animation, film footage from all over the world, "Laugh-in" type comedy skits, elaborate stage settings, historical reconstructions and Galbraithian wit are all used to tell the story.

The opening segment, which will be shown at 8 p.m. tonight on Channel 11, is Galbraith's own personal note and offers an outline of the way he intends to review 200 turbulent years of economic and political change.

Our first glimpse is into the age of unquestioned economic laws and the triumph of a capitalistic system — the time of Adam Smith, founder of modern economics.

Agrarian economics was the major concern then, but in all of economic development, Galbraith reiterates society has continued to set up grand hierarchies. The power structure has developed from the peasants, landowners and the state to the blue collar worker, corporation heads and chairmen of the boards today.

THE BIG CORPORATION today works like a well-oiled machine in a very tidy fashion. It provides for its own and it takes care of its own, Galbraith says. He argues it would be more of a public and social animal if board of directors were replaced by boards of public auditors who would not interfere in the decision making but would ensure public protection with proper regulations.

Galbraith devotes all of episode nine to "The Big Corporation" in a caustic examination demonstrating his concern with its self-serving, deceiving nature.

The parodies in episode nine are so hard to swallow for those who take themselves seriously, that it may be the main reason why the Public Broadcsting system was unable to secure an underwriter for the nationally broadcast series. WTTW-TV in Chicago had little luck attracting an underwriter who financailly would support the production costs of the program, although a major financial institution that originally expressed interest in the show pulled out when it was thought "The Age of Uncertainty" might offend its clients.

GALBRAITH PORTRAYS corporation men as sleezy, deceiving characters in spy-styled trench coats who make their telephone calls at night from public telephone booths. The consumer is a fat, gluttonous, naive creature easily taken for a r de.

The 100-year development of the average universal corporation is traced through the fictitious Unified Global Enterprises where the corporate myth flourishes. Promotions and advertising of the corporation's products are "beautiful" and suggest a meaningful contribution to a wholesome God-fearing way of life.

The family business evolves into an impersonal operation where the man at the top of the ladder smokes too much and pats his secretary on the behind when no one is looking.

IT IS NOT NECESSARILY a complimentary view of big business or consumers. It is, in many ways, a very realistic one, and you will dislike or like the episode depending on whether you are in left or right field.

Despite Galbraith's own brilliant contentions, "The Age of Uncertainty" is a noteworthy attempt to make the complex digestible and the profound meaningful to the average person.

We are all concerned about money and money has always been the most fascinating concern to Galbraith, a Harvard (emeritus) economist, essayist and novelist, and one-time diplomat to India who rose to fame from the confines of Canadian farming.

"IT RANKS WITH LOVE as man's greatest source of joy, and it ranks with death as his greatest source of anxiety," Galbraith notes during his program. He examines the history and meaning of money from every perspective: the grocery shopper, the corporate head, the private businessman to the senior citizen.

For those who are bothered by Galbraith's views on giving money, health care, food and housing to the poor; allowing the public to own more urban land and installing public auditors in corporations, a balance is provided.

Each of the 13 segments, to be presented at 8 p.m. on consecutive Thursdays, will be followed by a segment of rebuttal from such notables as Willain F. Buckley and Ronald Reagan.

The final segment will attempt to draw the entire series together in a round table discussion between Galbraith, former Sec. of State Henry Kissinger, Washington Post publisher Katharine Graham, former British prime minister Edward Heath and others.

By the time the 13 weeks have ended, viewers will have a better understanding of the science of economics and why Galbraith has so appropriately labeled our contemporary time as "The Age of Uncertainty."
